"20 MULE TEAM"

starring

WALLACE BEERY

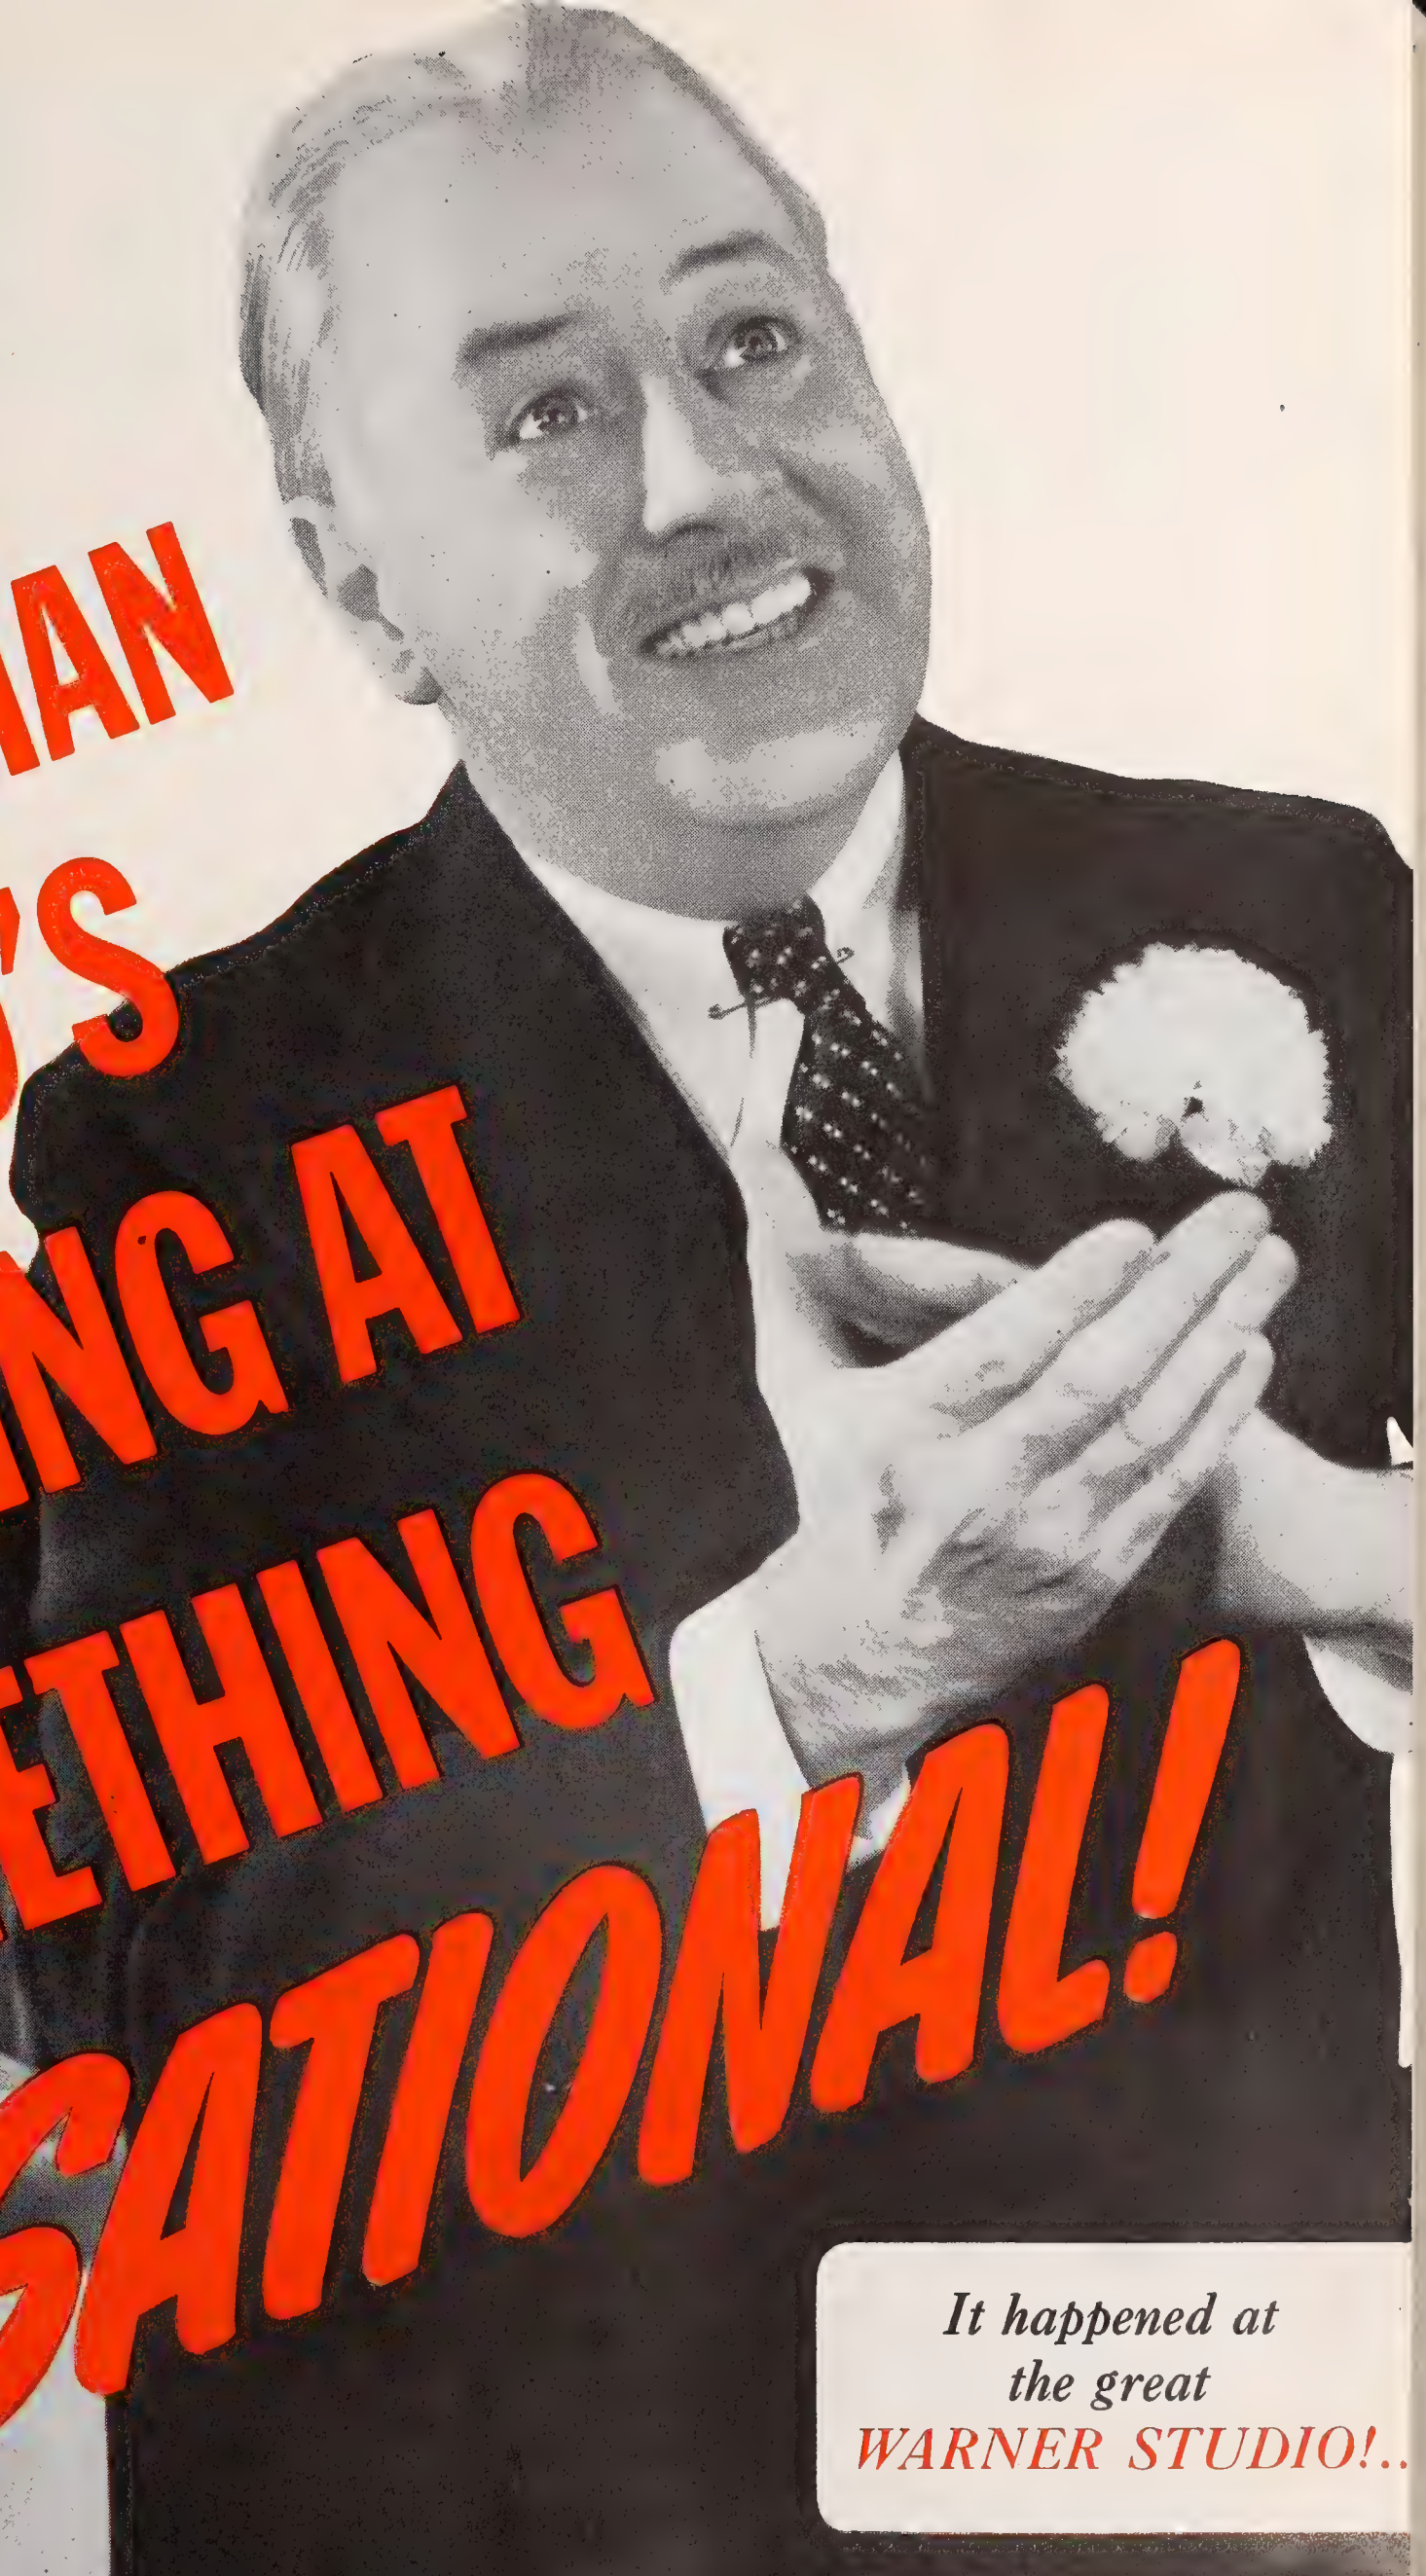
with Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau, Anne Baxter, Douglas Fowley · Screen Play by Cyril Hume, E. E. Paramore and Richard Maibaum · A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Picture · Directed by Richard Thorpe Produced by J. Walter Ruben

"'20 Mule Team' A-1 Western. Done in the grand manner, with top-flight production, direction, performance and photography. Wallace Beery at his best, playing the type of role in which he is most popular and providing extremely good entertainment. As brilliantly executed western drama as the screen has seen. Historical authenticity and presenting the most vivid panorama of the arid majesties of Death Valley ever shown on the screen. Beery is in his element in the role of the mule skinner, giving an even better characterization than in 'Bad Man of Brimstone'."

—Hollywood Reporter

"A natural for Wallace Beery and will serve further to ingratiate him with an ever-increasing audience. The story, absorbing excitement and suspense, both romantic and melodramatic. One of the best gun-fights ever seen on the screen winds up for a happy ending. High level of gripping entertainment. A topnotch job all the way. Scenically the picture is remarkable."

—Daily Variety



"Death Valley has been overlooked too long by Hollywood in picking stories for Westerns. In '20 Mule Team' M-G-M will cash in strong on the picturesque history and strangeness of this locale. Story offers excellent role for Wallace Beery, one of the most colorful parts he has had."

—Harry Friedman, L. A. Examiner

"'20 Mule Team' roaring melodrama of Death Valley. A rip-roaring tale with its desert panoramas and its bad men, with a superabundance of action and a great fight-to-the-finish wind-up. Death Valley has seldom been delved into so effectively. All in all a hit."

—Edwin Schallert, L. A. Times

CUSTOMERS' RIGHTS

UNDER the title of "Who Wants Good Movies?" Mr. Arthur L. Mayer, of New York's Rialto, contributes to The Nation of April 20 an incisive bit of article which, by citation of cases, should indicate to that paper's following of "liberals" why "social content" is rarely to be had on the screen.

Quoting from Mr. Archibald MacLeish's observations about Hollywood product lacking "the fourth dimension of life", Mr. Mayer observes that this "has not seriously affected a producer like Louis B. Mayer of Loew's, Inc. . . . last year made close to $10,000,000. By concentrating on escapist themes he has paid consistent dividends to his stockholders and awe-inspiring salaries to himself and fellow executives. Neither he nor his competitors will adopt a different policy unless box-office grosses convince them that their patrons demand pictures with social content."

What has happened to most of the "social content" pictures, including the apathy of the public at the box office and more impressively among the "socially minded" minorities, completes Mr. Mayer's case.

That Mr. Mayer got into print in The Nation with this telling is a fact of quite as much interest as its content. Maybe now he can be induced to deliver a kindred message to the New Republic.

One is tempted to supplement these observations about the box-office reaction with the observation that the multitudes who so emphatically desire that the screen theatre be a place of entertainment, amusement, escape, dreams and vicarious adventure have rights.

Enough of preaching, argument, agitation seem available elsewhere for the customers for "social content". It is precisely for the purpose of departing for a spell from the "social content" of their worried lives that the box-office customers seek the magic of the pictures. They are entitled to it because that is what they pay for.

WHO SAYS and WHY?

OUT of certain expressions in print of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York there arises considerable discussion, east and west, of comparisons of Motion Picture Herald's presentation of the money making stars of 1939 with other opinions. So we find Mr. Douglas W. Churchill saying in the New York Times:

". . . The theatre men agreed with the Martin Quigley paper on five—Clark Gable, Bette Davis, Mickey Rooney, Tyrone Power and Spencer Tracy—but substituted the names of Myrna Loy, Ginger Rogers, Deanna Durbin, James Stewart and Jean Arthur for The Herald's selections of Shirley Temple, Alice Faye, Errol Flynn, James Cagney and Sonja Henie.

"Hollywood has never been in accord with all of The Herald's selections, which is natural. Executives have added a disconcerting note by admitting, off the record, that some of those on the Quigley list have slipped, and they have been at a loss to know how the performers were included among the 'ten best'. The ITOA compilation probably is no more authoritative than The Herald's poll, but it is more to the industry's liking.

"By inference, the theatre men list as the best prospects for the coming year, providing they are given thoughtful handling, such personalities as Vivien Leigh, David Niven, Laurence Olivier, Hedy Lamar and Priscilla Lane."

The ITOA of NY and the unnamed Hollywood executives both, but divergently, will have reasons and purposes in their opinions, all applying to future operations.

The listing presented in Motion Picture Herald at year's end was a poll of the judgments of the showmen of all America as to the stars whose screen appearances had brought the largest returns to the box office in 1939. The inference that The Herald's annual poll presents a Herald opinion is misleading. It presents the judgment of the nation's showmen. Whether ITOA or Hollywood agrees or not affects no fact.

SEEMINGLY it is manifest that if the exhibitor is to yield to the pressures for extended runs something is going to have to be done about elasticity and cancellations in block product deals. It so chances that there are still only fifty-two weeks in the year. Something has to give.

"SYMBOL OF"

OUR most abundantly satisfactory indignation of the week derives from the newly installed bas-relief on the adjacent Associated Press building. It is alleged to be the "symbol of news," being a casting in stainless steel. Maybe the symbolism is in the stainlessness of steel as opposed to bronze, a form of brass, the classic metal for heroics.

Anyway, this super-paperweight is a Japanese artist's concept in five heads and torsos. You just can't keep the torsos out. Whenever a sculptor has to set up "the symbol" of something, or "the spirit" of something, he goes immediately to the body. For example, just around the corner on the facade of the RCA building is a group in stone notable mainly for its genitalia, in a pose that would get a live hero in the same spot and pose six months at the workhouse. Can't one be a symbol of something with his pants on?

But it was the "symbol of news" we were being indignant about. Mr. Noguchi's prize-winning dream in steel shows the use of teletype, wirephoto, camera, telephone and, lastly, the fifth figure carries pad and pencil—"the trade-mark of all reporters," says the press copy.

"Pad and pencil" is the trade-mark of amateur reporters, maybe fresh out of schools of journalism, or of those of the brash contemporary school who appear to have learned their trade practices looking at stage and screen reporters branded with the note pad cliche. A good reporter pays so much heed to his story he needs no notes, and is withal aware that to spring the pad and pencil either alarms the news-giving victim or inspires him to mount a high bench and start to pontificate for publication.

A real reporter is not identifiable by type-form or conduct in public.

No sculptor would know, but a real "symbol" of some relevancy would be a crap game scene in the police station press room, with the desk sergeant in his shirt sleeves. Try that in stainless steel.

This Week in the News

U. S. Film "Blitzkrieg"

FEDERAL EFFORTS to control the motion picture and oil industries were charged Wednesday by Representative Leland M. Ford, of California. Other phases of a concerted attack by the Administration against his state, he said, are efforts to destroy the California community property laws and discriminatory freight rates against West Coast shipments by water to the Panama Canal.

Attacking Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior, in the Congressional Record, Representative Ford declared that Mr. Ickes attempts to impose fees on Hollwood producers for the production of motion pictures on the public lands were part of what the Congressman described as a "Federal blitzkrieg" against California.

Among the problems the state has had to face recently, he said, are "the threat of the Neely bill, which many people have been led to believe would bring moral censorship, but as a matter of fact contains nothing whatever pursuant to censorship." Mr. Ford added that "this matter of censorship has been entirely handled by the motion picture business, better than the handling of any other parallel conditions by any other business in the country. The Neely bill would destroy at least half of this industry in California and would throw some 30 or 40 thousands of people out of work in Los Angeles county alone."

"The second threat," he continued, "comes from a socalled second Neely bill, wherein the bureaucrats wish to provide that those who produce motion pictures and know the most about it cannot stage them for the public but must put them in other hands.

"Isn't it quite possible that all this pressure is being brought against the moving picture business with the future idea in mind of coercing them to such an extent that it will have the effect of a real censorship? If this is true, Congress ought to remove and take out of circulation such heads of bureaus as this," concluded Representative Ford.

"Trademark" Films

FOLLOWING the practice of keeping a sharp eye on "free advertising," their "pet peeve," newspaper publishers have been giving attention to what they call "free advertising" in motion pictures. Colonel Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, as chairman of a special committee, prepared a "Report on Motion Picture Productions" for the American Newspaper Publishers' annual convention, in New York, 10 days ago. But the matter never reached the convention floor and, according to reports, was taken up instead with the headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

An attack was to be made on motion pictures tied up, through their titles or otherwise, with nationally advertised trademarks or products. The newspaper publisher's position is that advertisers should not receive "free publicity" through the motion pictures. The whip in the hands of publishers to bring film companies into line is possible curtailment of publicity given motion pictures.

Colonel Knox said in Chicago, Tuesday, that his report was strictly confidential and no statement of any sort would be made on it.

In an advertisement to advertisers in the April issue of Fortune, J. Walter Thompson Agency solicits business for its advertising film department. The company stated that in the last 16 months it had produced 15 commercial pictures and had "opened up approximately 5,000,000 theatrical circulation heretofore unavailable for commercial pictures," and had also developed a system of theatre classification and "produced the first fan mail in the history" of the advertising films.

It was also asserted that 70 per cent of all motion picture theatres, with a "circulation of 45 million," accept commercial films. The best available information in the industry is that less than 50 per cent of the country's 14,500 regularly operating theatres ever accept commercial pictures. And if every theatre which uses commercials were to use them every day at every show the maximum potential audience would be about 35 millions per week.

Hitler's Circuit

WITH THE NAZI "visitation" in Denmark and most of Norway—extending Adolph Hitler's cinema circuit (Germany, Austria, Memel, Czechoslovakia, Poland)—and with Sweden practically isolated, distributors in New York are pessimistic over the motion picture outlook in the whole Scandinavian area. While theatres are operating in Denmark and Sweden and in parts of Norway, no new film can be shipped into any of these countries.

The Swedish market for American films, which is more valuable than the combined territories of Denmark, Norway and Finland, still is producing a little revenue. Under an agreement made by the Film Board of Trade at Stockholm, only a limited amount of money can now be exported from Sweden, and even this is on a temporary basis and may be stopped at any time.

A considerable supply of film is on hand in all the Scandinavian countries

Chance Games

ANY OWNERS of New Jersey's 430-odd theatres who believe that "bank night" is not a lottery because it allows non-ticket buying persons to register and stand in the lobby as eligibles for "bank night" cash, are mistaken, Judge William A. Smith decided last Saturday in State supreme court, Trenton.

The decision arose from an old, but still unique situation. The A. and G. Amusement Company, of Paterson, was billed for $1,140 on a "bank night" contract, claimed by William Furst, of Affiliated Enterprises, owner of the "bank night" copyright. A. and G. refused to pay on the grounds that any contract covering lottery operation was invalid.

Frank L. Cost, of the Shore theatre, in Cleveland's suburb of Euclid, wants his "bank night" playing exhibitor colleagues to know of a new wrinkle in "bank night" dishonesty. He caught one of the judges, a volunteer from the audience, "palming" a ticket as he appeared to pick the winning number from the drum, a duplicate of the "palmed" ticket being held by a confederate in the audience who tried to collect the $767.

Caution on Advertising

CLOSER scrutiny of motion picture advertising and photographic publicity by the Advertising Advisory Council is indicated for the future as a result of a conference of advertising and publicity directors of the distributors at the headquarters of the Hays organization in New York Wednesday. The Council, formed in 1933, administers the Motion Picture Advertising Code, voluntarily adopted in 1930 by Hays member companies.

Wednesday's conference concerned recent specific examples of advertising and some photographic material which were regarded in some quarters as not in conformity with the Advertising Code. Specific advertisements mentioned were on M-G-M's "Strange Cargo," Paramount's "French Without Tears," and Columbia's "21 Days Together."

All the material cited, it was established, had been approved by the Council in New York. The approvals may have been either on the "too liberal" or the "careless" side, it was said. Each of the company advertising directors, all of whom belong to the Council, is directly responsible for his company's advertising; the Council is responsible for interpretation of the Code. It was said that it was not the purpose of the conference necessarily to censure so much as to caution film advertising directors against the danger of establishing a trend which would evoke criticism of the industry.

Foreign "Grapes"

SOME of the criticism of "The Grapes of Wrath" centered on the point that the film treated with a small percentage of the population in a manner which tended to persuade patrons that conditions were general, particularly that the picture would create an erroneous impression abroad. Twentieth Century-Fox has added a foreword to prints for exhibition in all foreign countries.

The preface states that in the United States there is "a limited area called 'the Dust Bowl'" and "this is the story of one farmer's family."

FM A-Growing

FREQUENCY MODULATION (FM) radio is developing rapidly. Major Armstrong's new method of radio transmission (Motion Picture Herald, December 6th and 13th) is now being used in 12 experimental stations. This branch of the industry already has its own organization, Frequency Modulation Broadcasters, Inc., headed by WOR's chief engineer, J. R. Popple. Major Armstrong said that he expects 110 regular (not experimental) commercial FM stations to be operating by summer. Four to five applications for FM stations are said to be reaching the FCC each week.

The total FM investment in the industry to date is $1,500,000, and already five firms are manufacturing FM receivers and seven more are said to have been licensed by Major Armstrong to make equipment. Three major companies are making FM transmitters.

RCA's relay television system, which may bring that form of entertainment all over the country, works on Armstrong's FM principles. RCA engineers said that the system could work on amplitude modulation, the usual broadcasting method, but said FM was "better."

Anti-Carnival

IN A DRIVE to protect the local industries and local pocketbooks, Mayor Harry W. Lash has banned circuses and carnivals from Massillon, Ohio, because "we need to keep our money in the city." This action comes at a time when exhibitors all over the country are beginning to think of the competition of the socalled "greatest show on earth" and lesser outdoor attractions. The Mayor of Massillon is not going to take any chances that the citizens will be "cleaned" of extra money which might go to local interests. He said no permit would be granted for carnivals and circuses as long as he held office.

A Medal for Cohan

THE PRESIDENT on Wednesday decorated his double. On the lapel of George Michael Cohan, 62-year-old comedian of the stage, Mr. Roosevelt pinned a gold medal, authorized by Congress four years ago for his "patriotic services" of 23 years ago in writing the U. S. A.'s "theme song" of World War I: "Over There."

Entering the White House office the President asked Mr. Cohan, "How's my double?" He was referring to the Cohan portrayal of the Chief Executive role in "I'd Rather Be Right"—a Broadway stage satire.

The stage knows George M. Cohan for the 85 plays he has written, and the many he has appeared in during the 54 years he has spent in its wings. He started at nine in "Daniel Boone" at Haverstraw, N. Y. The motion picture knows him for the several of his plays it has produced, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," Famous Players-Lasky, 1925; "Elmer the Great," First National, 1933; "Gambling," Fox, 1934; again "Seven Keys to Baldpate," RKO, 1935; "Song and Dance Man," 20th Century-Fox, 1936; "Home Towners," Warner Brothers, 1936. Mr. Cohan has made but two appearances in motion pictures, "The Phantom President" and "Gambling."

Unemployment Law

STATE LAW, rather than Federal, will determine whether screen and radio performers are eligible for unemployment compensation when "resting," according to officials of the U. S. Social Security Board in Washington.

The question of the actors' eligibility was raised following reports that a number of baseball players had demanded, and in some cases obtained, unemployment compensation although they received adequate salaries during the playing season.

In the cases where baseball players got compensation, it was explained by the Board, they were working under contracts which called for payment of salary only during the playing months. Where players might be under a yearly contract, calling for salary payments throughout the entire 12 months, it is doubtful that they would be eligible.

The question was formally raised by Senator Charles Tobey (Rep., N. H.), who asked Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt for an explanation.

"Under the definition of the term 'unemployment' in most state laws, an answer to the question whether a person is unemployed in any week depends not on whether he is under a contract of employment, but whether, for the period in question, he is rendering services or earning wages," he answered.

RUSH CONVENTION DATES AFTER NO-CONSENT DECREE WARNING

MGM Decides on Four Regionals, the First Starting Monday; United Artists To Have Two; Paramount's Meeting National

Following the declaration by Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general, a week ago before a U. S. Senate committee that consent-decree talk is "futile" in the Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit, (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, April 27th, page 14), large companies came forward this week with announcements of their 1940 sales conventions, dates which had been withheld in order to determine the possible effects of any such decree on sales policies and procedure, the basic subjects of discussion at all sales conventions.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced four regional meetings for this season, instead of a national meeting, as heretofore; to be held May 6th and 7th, at the St. Francis hotel, San Francisco; May 13th and 14th, Drake hotel, Chicago; May 17th and 18th, Astor hotel, New York; May 20th and 21st, Shoreham hotel, Washington.

United Artists set May 13th to 15th, in New York, and May 17th to 19th, at Chicago.

Paramount will hold a national meeting, May 24th to 26th, at the Ambassador hotel, Los Angeles.

Only Columbia and Warner remain undecided on time and place of their 1940 conventions. RKO had previously announced May 27th to 30th, New York; Universal, May 11th to 13th, in Atlantic City and May 18th to 20th, in Chicago. Republic had tentatively set June and three meetings, in New York, Chicago and Denver or San Francisco. Monogram and Twentieth Century-Fox have already held their meetings, the former on April 21st and 22nd, at Dallas, and Fox, on April 12th to 14th, in Chicago.

Selling Policies Remain Unchanged

Sales policies of the major companies for 1940-41 contemplate no change in customary procedure. While negotiations for an out-of-court settlement of the Government's New York anti-trust suit were being conducted there was a possibility that new selling policies and trade practices would have to be adopted.

Facing the possibility sweeping revisions in selling policies which might mean a completely new procedure several of the major company sales executives withheld setting plans for annual conventions until later than the usual time. With the apparent collapse of consent decree discussions, several days ago, sales managers realized that there would be no upheaval in selling practices through a consent decree or other form of settlement of the trust suit.

Most of the companies will hold their annual conventions in time to have them out of the way before June 3rd when trial of the Government suit is scheduled to begin. However even though the trial is concluded this year it will have no effect on sales policies because the suit would be appealed to the higher courts, if the case goes up to the Supreme Court there is little chance that a final decision would be reached to affect even the 1941-42 sales season.

All But Two Distributors Set for 1940 Sales Conventions

Following is a comparison of the dates and places of national and regional conventions this year and last:

MGM To Have Four Regional Meetings

William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, announced before his departure for California on Monday that the company would hold four smaller conventions instead of one national meeting. The meetings of the sales force will be held at the following places: May 6th-7th, St. Francis hotel, San Francisco; May 13th-14th, Drake hotel, Chicago; May 17th-18th, Astor hotel, New York and May 20th-21st, Shoreham hotel, Washington.

Edward M. Saunders, western division manager, will attend the first two meetings and T. J. Connors, eastern and southern division manager will attend the meetings held in New York and Washington.

Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director, and Edwin Aaron, Mr. Rodger's assistant, also left for the Coast Monday.

James A. FitzPatrick, producer of "Traveltalks" for MGM signed this week a new five-year contract. He will make one feature a year in addition to his regular schedule of 12 shorts. The first feature will be made in Hawaii and is tentatively titled "Captain Cook." Hugo Butler is working on the script. Nine short subjects for next season have already been filmed.

Mr. FitzPatrick also plans to produce a series of seven short subjects based on famous hymns with the support of 500 churchmen of all denominations. Stars are scheduled to sign in the series. Distribution has not been arranged yet.

E. J. Mannix, studio manager and Irving Asher, production executive, are en route from California to England to survey condition in Great Britain to consider the advisability of expansion of production activity there. At present "Busman's Honeymoon," starring Robert Montgomery is being made by MGM in England.

Two Conventions For United Artists

Murray Silverstone, chief of world-wide United Artists operations, has announced that the company will hold a meeting of the Eastern and Canadian sales forces in New York on May 13th, 14th and 15th and a meeting of the Western staff in Chicago on May 17th, 18th and 19th. Harry L. Gold, vice-president and Eastern general sales manager and L. J. Schlaifer, vice-president and Western general sales manager, will preside over the convention in their territory.

Mr. Silverstone also said that the company planned no changes in its sales policy. United Artists will conduct an intensive drive in foreign markets regardless of whether or not money embargoes prevent the export of revenues, according to Mr. Silverstone. This policy was approved at a meeting of the board of directors held last Thursday. No sales activity is planned in German controlled territories or in Italy.

Arthur W. Kelly, head of the foreign department, will leave for Europe within a few weeks to conduct an international sales meeting in London. Sales representatives from as far away as India and Australia will attend the meeting. The company plans to maintain its sales throughout the war in so far as possible.

Mr. Silverstone also reported that the board approved plans for a new publicity and exploitation organization to conduct pre-selling campaigns in the field. The organization is to begin operations about June 1st and Lynn Farnol and Monroe Greenthal are selecting the personnel.

The new pre-selling organization is to begin campaigns on pictures from the time the story is purchased and carry on right through production and distribution. Handling of "Gone With the Wind" by Selznick International is to be the model. Mr. Selznick made specific suggestions for operating methods for the new field bureau. The main office will be in Hollywood and 15 field workers will handle the publicity.

The meeting was also attended by Mary Pickford and her board representative, Herbert Maas, Charles Schwartz, Dennis F. O'Brien, Edward C. Raferty, Emanuel Silverstone, James Mulvey, Clarence Ericson, Arthur Kelly, Lowell Calvert and F. H. Bardt of the Bank of America, representing the estate of Douglas Fairbanks.

Alexander Korda has postponed indefinitely his return to London. This week he conferred with Mr. Silverstone on the West Coast. He may come to New York after the meetings.

Louis Hyman, executive of Sol Lesser Productions, arrived from the West Coast Tuesday for sales conferences with United Artists executives. The Lesser films are released by United Artists.

Paramount Meeting In Los Angeles

Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of distribution for Paramount, announced that the annual sales meeting would be held in Los Angeles on May 24th, 25th and 26th at the Ambassador hotel. The meeting will be attended by district and branch managers, One Hundred Per Cent Club salesmen and home office and studio executives. At the convention a detailed announcement of the number of productions on the 1940-41 schedule will be made and highlights from these pictures will be described.

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, has left for the Coast on what he described as a "routine" conference with studio officials. Mr. Griffis may remain on the Coast to attend the annual convention.

George Arthur, for the past four years a producer at Paramount and previously in other executive positions there, has resigned effective May 31st when his two current productions "A Date with Destiny" and "I Want a Divorce" will be completed.

TWO REGIONAL MEETINGS SET BY FP CANADIAN

Famous Players Canadian Corporation will hold two regional meetings instead of the one national conference held last year in Ontario. The first session will be from July 30th to August 1st at Jasper in Western Canada. The Western district managers, L. I. Bearg and E. A. Zorn, will be in charge.

The meeting for managers in the eastern part of the country will be held in the Toronto district and will also be for three days, opening tentatively on August 12th. Arrangements will be supervised by district managers, Jack Arthur and M. Stein of Toronto and R. S. Roddick and L. Graburn for the Maritimes. The home office group, headed by N. L. Nathanson, president, and J. J. Fitzgibbons, will attend both conferences and outline plans and policies for the new season.

Republic Plans Three June Meetings

Republic is planning three regional sales meetings in June, the first to be early in June in New York and the two others following in Chicago, and either Denver or San Francisco. Franchise holders and branch managers will attend the meetings. James R. Grainger, president, is completing arrangements. He will leave about May 10th on a three-week tour of the exchanges, returning to New York just before the New York meeting. H. J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, plans to go to the Coast some time this month to check on production.

The company reported that during the month of March Republic Studios reached an all-time high in production activities with six films in work, three of which were top-budget pictures. In April four features, two westerns and a serial were shot. The features include "Doctors Don't Tell," starring John Wayne, Sigrid Gurie and Charles Coburn; "Wagons Westward," with Chester Morris, Buck Jones, Anita Louise, Ona Munson and Gwinn "Big Boy" Williams.

Guild and Circuit Parley Collapses

Negotiations between the American Guild of Variety Artists and major circuits on contracts for stage show talent have broken down, it was learned this week. The international board of the guild was expected to meet to determine the union's future course of action. A dispute over the five per cent booking fee was said to be the principal point of dissension.

Last Friday the union signed a contract with Billy Rose covering three shows, the Aquacade and the Barbary Coast restaurant at the New York World's Fair and the Aquacade at the San Francisco Fair. An agreement on terms was reached earlier in the week.

The Philadelphia chapter of the guild has reached an unofficial working agreement with the Philadelphia musicians union, the actual signing of a mutual assistance pact depending on local autonomy being given to the guild. The musicians union has advised its members not to rehearse any act unless they can produce an AGVA card and AGVA has listed as "unfair" all amusement places considered "unfair" by the musicians.

Further the guild has notified all agents that contracts must now contain a "pay or play" clause, allowing cancellations only for "an act of God." Local 77, of the American Federal of Labor, also has agreed to cooperate with the guild in the enforcement of the "pay or play" clause, threatening to withdraw its members where an act has been discharged in violation of the clause.

Extras Oppose Autonomy

The Screen Actors Guild governing body for extras went on record last week as opposing the autonomy plan for its group which has been recommended by the guild's board. The extras' council requested that the guild reopen negotiations with the producers for a new code and wage scales for extras. Negotiations on a requested increase of 15 per cent for extras were halted recently when minority groups demanded autonomy.

Detroit Charter Granted

The Theatre Managers and Assistant Managers Local in Detroit has been granted a federal local charter by the American Federation of Labor in Detroit. Roy Miller, formerly manager of the Broadway-Capitol, was elected president and acting business agent.

Ohio Floods Recede

Theatres in Ohio towns, which were forced to close or operate on limited schedules because of Spring floods, are reopening. Particularly affected were theatres in Marietta and Pomeroy. The Ohio River and its tributaries are receding, allowing normal business activity in many business areas which had been flooded.

EXHIBITORS FACE NEW COMPETITION IN MOVE TO SET 1,200 STAGE RUNS

American National Theatre and Academy, Dormant Since It Was Chartered by Congress, Bestirs Itself

A drive is on in the legitimate theatre to obtain support for a "People's Theatre" which would plan and produce a series of low-price stage plays in hundreds of cities and towns which do not have any professional stage presentations. This is the newest threat of competition to motion pictures from the stage, which has been striving for new strength for many years.

The plan for a "People's Theatre," which is being proposed to some 1,200 Little Theatre groups, college and school dramatic societies and similar organizations, is from the American National Theatre and Academy. This group is headed by Robert E. Sherwood, president; J. Howard Reber of Philadelphia, vice-president; and Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times, secretary.

Chartered, Then Forgotten

The American National Theatre and Academy is a group which has the unique distinction of having been chartered by Congress in 1935 for "the presentation of theatrical productions of the highest type . . . stimulation of public interest in the drama . . . and further development of the study of drama." In the five years since it was organized the American National Theatre had been inactive. The "People's Theatre" plan was reported in the daily press as something new, for the parent organization was forgotten.

From the time of President Roosevelt's first inauguration in March, 1933, efforts were made to charter an American national theatre. The proposal was backed by 44 patrons of dramatics including three known in motion picture affairs; Leopold Stokowski, John Hay Whitney and John W. Davis. The bill setting up a National Theatre and Academy unanimously passed in the House early in July of 1935. Under the law the organization "shall be non-profit" and the purposes included: "theatrical productions of the highest type" . . . "furthering the production of the best plays, interpreted by the best actors at a minimum cost" . . . "sponsoring, encouraging and developing the art and technique of the theatre through a school within the National Academy" . . . "be non-political, nonsectarian."

Seeks National Basis

The present proposal for setting up a "National People's Theatre" is an effort to accomplish some of the purposes defined by Congress five years ago. The plan submitted by Mr. Sherwood and Mr. Atkinson carried this introduction: "In fulfillment of its obligations under the charter granted by Congress, the American National Theatre and Academy wishes to achieve organization on a national basis, with local units (or "chapters") in the greatest possible number of communities throughout the nation."

The "plan" further stated, "It is our purpose to organize a producing company—to be known, perhaps, as the National People's Theatre—which will be directed by leading American managers, actors, playwrights, scene designers." The production plans provided for a number of plays each season, beginning with five.

According to the proposal, a typical group of plays would include one Shakesperian production, perhaps like the Mercury Theatre's "Julius Caesar" (in modern dress); another classic revival from the works of Ibsen, Chekov and Shaw; and one or more current Broadway plays and revivals from comparatively recent work of American playwrights. The writers named were Maxwell Anderson, Philip Barry, S. N. Behrman, Marc Connelly, Rachel Crothers, Russel Crouse, Owen Davis, Paul Green, Moss Hart, Lillian Hellman, Sidney Howard, George S. Kaufman, George Kelly, Sidney Kingsley, Howard Lindsay, Clifford Odets, Eugene O'Neill, Paul Osborn, Elmer Rice, William Saroyan, Robert E. Sherwood and Thornton Wilder.

Would Tour U. S.

The series of plays would tour the country "to the greatest possible extent, particularly in communities which, under present circumstances, never see good professional productions of the best plays." One performance is to be given in each of the towns, except in communities where the demand supports additional performances. The plays of the "National People's Theatre" would be shown all through the fall and winter and each community would have its play every two or three weeks.

The production details are to be of the best quality: "the casting, direction, scene designing to be done exactly as though for first class Broadway production." However, the price scale would be kept down to a maximum of $1.50 and where facilities permit the scale might go down to 25 cents. The statement said that "there can be no atmosphere of snobbery, either social or intellectual."

It is asserted that the financial details of the "People's Theatre" idea were carefully worked out and that the project could earn "substantial profits" which would be used to expand the movement. Funds to start the first season are to be raised "in the theatre itself and from public spirited friends of the theatre."

The basic question Mr. Sherwood and Mr. Atkinson asked the leaders of the 1,200 dramatic societies throughout the country was, "Do you believe that in your community there exists sufficient interest in the theatre to provide support for this plan?"

Reaction Called Favorable

The reaction of college, school and other amateur dramatic groups to the proposed plan has been "almost universally" favorable, according to Mr. Sherwood's office. The answers received so far indicate that communities which do not have a legitimate theatre are anxious to back the "People's Theatre," it was said. The letters also are giving information on the facilities available in the particular community, including data on the number of seats, possible top admission scale and the tastes of the local group.

About 300 replies have been received.

About the time the American National Theatre and Academy was given a charter in 1935 the Theatre Project of WPA began its activities, which for a time were conducted on a very wide scale, and an attempt was made to establish a Government "people's theatre." Both the idea of a Federal Theatre Project and the plays presented were criticized.

Last June Congress refused to appropriate money to continue the WPA theatre activities and ordered the abandonment of the project.

No decision has been made so far concerning the exact date on which the "People's Theatre" of the American National Theatre and Academy would begin producing plays.

BROADWAY PLAY PRICES ARE CUT

Legitimate theatres in New York are lowering admissions in anticipation of getting extra business from World's Fair visitors. Six productions are operating already on reduced admission scales even though the New York Fair does not open until May 11th. Last year managers found that the Fair did not help business and no great increase is expected this year. However the general opinion is that prices should be lowered to attract the out-of-town visitors.

Legitimate theatre operators have refused to cooperate this year in exploitation plans for the Fair, feeling that it did not help their own business. Last season two of the 31 shows (including three WPA productions) had reduced prices at this time of the year. The six shows on a reduced scale this year constitute nearly one-fourth of the total number now running.

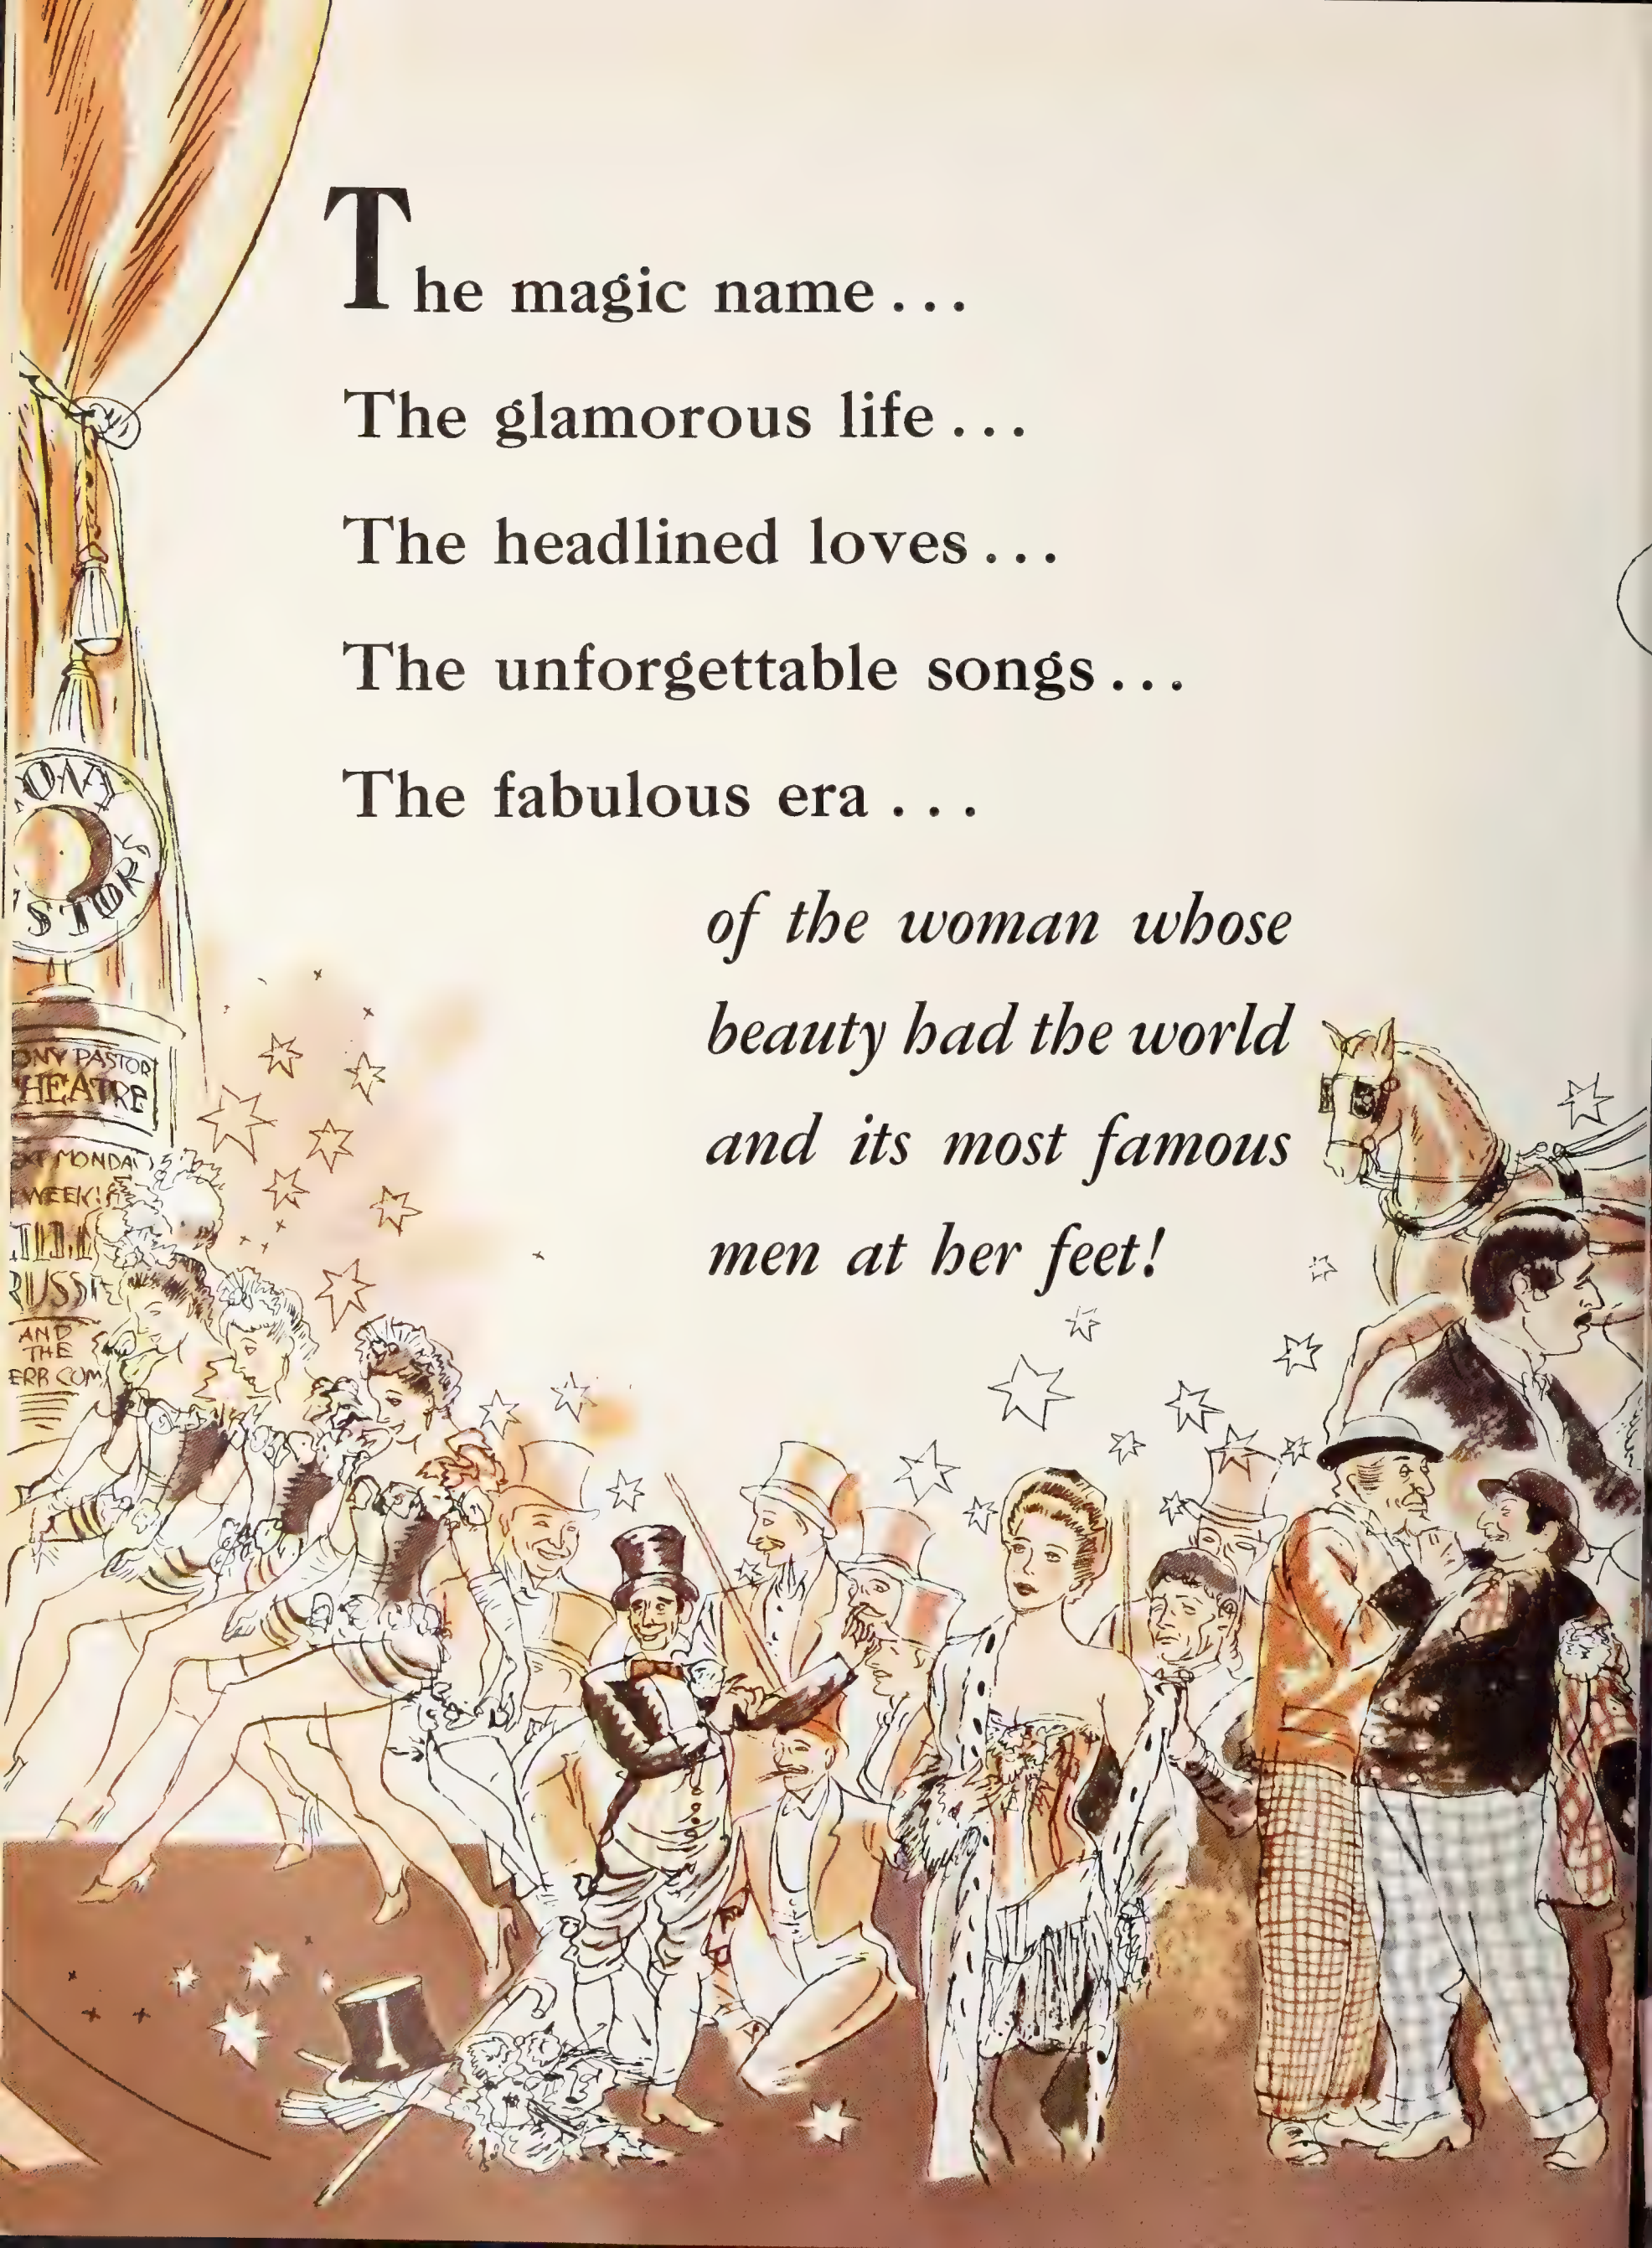
Central Theatre Control Urged by John Golden

That the theatre may "recover its health as a public institution," John Golden on Monday urged all the "chaotic elements working in the theatre" to form a central board of control.

Mr. Golden spoke before 600 members and guests of the Comoedia Matinee Club at its eleventh annual spring festival luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York.

Mr. Golden, long a manager, cited his reasons for the plight of that "fabulous invalid," the theatre, and placed some of the blame on his colleagues.

"The managers' group, unlike all of the other groups in the theatre, has never been in a position where it could have control even of its own membership," he continued. "Until some way to correct this weakness can be found, the managers—and I'm sorry to say this—will never form a group that may be depended upon to work, either harmoniously among themselves or in complete cooperation with the others."



"I can see but one practical solution to the problem of preserving and advancing the status of the theatre, improving its conditions, spreading its popularity and cultural and educational influence, and that is by the formation of a control board, representing each of the creative and executive branches of the drama.

"The control board should be made up of a number of highly respected persons, . . . of sane, ethical views and fair, unbiased interest.

"The board must be our ruler, our own court, our own judge and jury, our own punitive and governing body, our own censor, created out of our selves, by ourselves; a practical, permanent, potential protector of our own house against outside attacks and inside differences and discord.

"Let the control board have a sound code of ethics interpreted by competent men and women steeped in the lore of the theatre. Let us cut out the selfish, short-sighted bickerings and jealousies of every group. Let us bring into line the managers. Let us settle the disputes of all parties by arbitration and reason in a fair court composed of those who know the difficulties and the attacks against our dear institution."

B & K VIOLATED MONOPOLY DECREE BY OVERBUYING, MASTER'S FINDING

Counsel for Paramount and Circuit Plan to Show Contracts Were Based on "Essential Film Supply"

A master's report in Chicago last Monday rendered the first Federal anti-monopoly finding of the current wave of regulative attention to the motion picture when Balaban & Katz, exhibitors, and Paramount Pictures, Inc., as parent company, were found guilty of violation of a consent degree of April 6, 1932.

The finding of Edgar Eldredge, as special master in chancery, assigned by Judge Charles E. Woodward in Federal court, is based on his judgment that Paragraph X, that portion of the decree providing against monopoly, has been violated by overbuying of product, subsequently unplayed.

Flat denial has emanated from B. & K.-Paramount attorneys, in both New York and Chicago, and the contention that the record shows that the contracts were for "an essential film supply" will be the burden of the exceptions to be made within the twenty-day period ending May 21.

The issue, in consequence, before the court will be on fact.

The original action ending in the consent decree of 1932 was by the United States against the B. & K. theatre group and all the major film companies except Columbia Pictures.

Other Distributors "Not Guilty"

The master's report, after 16 months of hearings, is in the action filed by the Government December 15, 1938, charging violations of the decree against B. & K. and all of the major distributors except Columbia Pictures. The charges against all the majors, except Paramount as parent and partner of B. & K., resulted in findings of not guilty.

The charges involved the whole gamut, "combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade, monopolization of interstate trade and commerce in the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures," along with violation of the Sherman act.

Acquitted on Coercion

The liability of all defendants jointly was confined to Paragraphs VII to IX and XI, in the consent decree. These paragraphs pertain to restraint of trade, establishment of clearance systems and coercion. None of the defendants was found guilty of these charges.

During the trial the Government said RKO-Radio and Universal had not violated the decree. The Government also at the end of the hearing substantially withdrew the issue of conspiracy. When this was done the defense rested. The charge of coercion also was not pressed by the Government.

The report charges that Balaban & Katz usually bought about 80 per cent of all major company product, but did not exhibit all the product scheduled or contracted for.

Paragraph X, of the consent decree, enjoined the defendant and their officers from entering into or performing any contracts, or agreements, franchises or licenses with any one or more of the defendant distributors for the exhibition of motion pictures in the Chicago area, the individual or collective effect of which would unreasonably lessen competition or interstate trade and commerce between the defendants or any two or more of them, or effect a combination in unreasonable restraint of interstate trade and commerce or create a monopoly of interstate trade and commerce in motion pictures in said territory.

It was on this matter that the exhibitor defendants were found guilty by the Master.

All violations of the decree were after Nov. 9, 1935. Any violations prior to that were not punishable, the court ruled. The theatres involved, all of which are in the Loop area, are the Chicago, United Artists, Roosevelt, State-Lake, Apollo and Garrick. All are operated by B. & K. The RKO-Palace, the Woods, Oriental and McVickers are operated by independent exhibitors.

Hearing Date to Be Set

The defense now has 20 days, or until May 21, to file exceptions to the report of the Master-in-Chancery. These exceptions will be filed in written form, following which Federal Judge Woodward will set a date for a hearing when oral argument can be given.

If this report is approved by Judge Woodward it will have considerable bearing on the Government's suit in New York, observers in Chicago believe. A pending suit of Chicago independent exhibitors against B. & K. and the major companies will also be effected if such approval is given, attorneys state. This last mentioned suit has been lying dormant for many months pending the outcome of the Government cases.

INDIANA ALLIED OPPOSES DECREE

Through a statement by its executive secretary, Don Rossiter, the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, an affiliate of the National Allied States Association, last week publicly opposed the Department of Commerce bases for a possible consent decree settlement of the Government's "key" New York anti-trust action against the major companies.

Mr. Rossiter said that the association "seriously objects to the proposed system of selling, although it is in favor of some sort of arbitration; but not that as outlined in the Department of Commerce proposals."

Delay Educational Hearing

The Educational Pictures Corporation creditors' hearing was postponed, in New York, from Tuesday to May 14th. However, on Wednesday an application to vacate the designation of James A. Davidson, as trustee, was heard by a Federal judge.

Bar Relatives

Extras related to Central Casting Bureau employees in Hollywood will receive no work except in an emergency, under a ruling of Howard Philbrick, Bureau general manager.

Pre-trial Examinations in New York Continue with Schaefer, Wobber Testimony; Distributors Question Independents

Prosecution by the United States Government, of its anti-trust suit against the large companies in the New York "key" case, resolved this week into the comparative quiet of pre-trial examination of witnesses, from the organized industry and from independent exhibition, after the "fireworks" of last week, during which assistant United States Attorney General Thurman Wesley Arnold, heading the Department of Justice anti-trust division, crushed hopes of an out-of-court settlement by a slashing attack upon the industry's present setup.

Mr. Arnold, who a week ago had called the industry a dictatorship in testimony before a Senate judiciary subcommittee, said the defendants had been allowed to discuss settlement by consent decree, when such a decree never would be accepted without a "complete surrender," which would imply absolute divorcement of exhibition from distribution, that is, of distributor companies from their affiliated theatres.

Move for Inspection

On Tuesday the Government told the majors it would ask for a court order on May 7th allowing them to inspect records of the defendants covering the licensing of films to 69 independent and Warner theatres in the Philadelphia area. Government attorneys said that the majors had already been served with subpoenas to present the same records on June 3rd when the trial is scheduled to open.

In an affidavit Seymour Krieger, special assistant attorney general in charge of the Philadelphia area, said the records, consisting of licensing contracts, deal sheets, office communications and feature cut-off records, are evidence which the Government intends to use to prove the alleged unfair trade practices imposed on Philadelphia exhibitors and discriminatory benefits extended to the Warner theatres in that territory. It was explained the Government applied to inspect the records in order to prepare for the trial.

The motion requests not only the records on negotiations and performance of contracts, but also of similar records relating to a refusal by any defendant to license or negotiate the licensing of films to any of the 69 theatres listed.

Eleven independent exhibitors are named who were allegedly affected by discriminatory practices. The largest operator listed was Columbus Stamper, who has seven theatres in the Philadelphia area, the Forum, Frankford, Nixon, Roosevelt, Tower, Rivoli and Great Northern. The notice of motion stated that the first five theatres named have been acquired by Warners.

The other exhibitors and their theatres named were William Goldman, Band Box in Philadelphia, HiWay in New York and Hippodrome, Strand and Victor in Pottstown and Warners' Terminal, formerly owned by Mr. Goldman; David Milgrim, the Bluebird, Howard, Rialto, Temple and Walton in Philadelphia and the Garden in West Chester; Harry Fried, the Suburban in Ardmore, Seville in Bryn Mawr, Anthony Wayne in Wayne; Allen

M. Benn, the Belmont and Benson in Philadelphia; Herbert Elliott, the Fern Rock in Philadelphia; Harry Perelman, the Lehigh and West Allegheny in Philadelphia and the Yeadon in Yeadon and David Shapiro, the Admiral in Philadelphia.

Two other theatres later acquired by Warners are listed the Bromley in Philadelphia, formerly owned by Charles Segall, and the Lansdowne in Lansdowne, formerly owned by Henry Friedman.

The Government's motion also named 46 Warner theatres and one Loew's house.

The Government will depend primarily on the records and contracts to prove the alleged discrimination in favor of Warners by a comparison of licensing terms, according to Mr. Krieger.

The application will be heard by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard on Tuesday, May 7th.

Schaefer Testifies

In the pre-trial examinations of the major company defendants, which have been proceeding for several months, George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, testified on Monday that he opposed long term franchises; outlined sales policies of Paramount and United Artists, and RKO, three companies with which he has been associated; and denied that the distribution department of either RKO or Paramount exchanges information on rentals with its theatre department.

In the pre-trial testimony of prospective Government witnesses, questioning of whom has been proceeding for about two weeks, James C. Forgione, a New Jersey independent exhibitor, told defense attorneys last Wednesday, that independent circuits offered greater competition to the independent theatre than the affiliated circuits; and Anthony Bannon, former New Jersey theatre operator, named by the Government as a witness to theatre conditions in Newark, admitted, under defense attorneys' questioning, that his knowledge of distribution in that city was only "general," inasmuch as he had severed his connections there in 1933.

Schaefer Dislikes Long Contracts

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, called long term franchises "a one-way street" in pre-trial examination by Special United States Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright on Monday, in New York Federal Court.

They are that, he declared, because the exhibitor will play all pictures from a company, then, only if the deal is profitable to him.

He denied the inference, by Mr. Wright, that assurance of continued film sales to distributors depended upon an interest in theatres, or long term contracts. What mattered, he asserted, was the "quality of your pictures."

"That, and your ability to sell them, are your best assurances," he asserted.

Mr. Schaefer was questioned on Paramount acquisition of theatres, inasmuch as he had been sales manager of that company. He justified the acquisition, by Paramount, of theatres in Boston; also, its disposal of theatres in Philadelphia. On the former, he remarked that it was forced upon Paramount by the merger of Metro and Loew's. On the latter, he noted that the sale of Paramount's three Philadelphia theatres was ordered by the trustees, because the theatres had proved unprofitable.

Mr. Schaefer also outlined other policies of RKO, United Artists, and Paramount. The RKO president had been employed at various times by United Artists and Paramount.

In remarking on the advantages of theatre ownership, by distributors, Mr. Schaefer emphasized that his present company would not subsidize an unprofitable theatre. The company does not have a rigid policy; individual instances of theatre earning capacity govern it, he said.

Because of "the jealousy between different producers," United Artists does not block-book, Mr. Schaefer noted. He noted, also, that the company gained its greatest revenue from the five affiliated circuits.

Paramount's "decentralization" of its theatres was begun by him, he told the Special Assistant United States Attorney. The theatres were losing money; it was realized that the "local manpower" had better knowledge of local conditions, he said.

Wobber Testifies

Herman Wobber, sales head of Twentieth Century-Fox, was questioned closely Tuesday.

Mr. Wobber, who was western sales division manager of Paramount from 1916 to 1932, described the first run situation of that company in five key western cities during his tenure. He attributed Paramount's theatre acquisitions in the early twenties to a realization that the exhibition field was more profitable than either distribution or production.

Jesse Lasky's efforts in 1926 to sell pictures individually proved to be "a miserable failure," Mr. Wobber asserted. "We found that exhibitors who couldn't rely upon us for quantities of pictures didn't come to us for individual films."

Bannon's "General" Knowledge

Anthony Bannon, former Newark operator, and listed by the Government as one of its 500 prospective witnesses, and having knowledge of unfair clearance in Newark, admitted on questioning Friday, April 26th, by the defense that his knowledge of distribution in that city was general, because he has not operated a theatre there since 1933; that he was "99 per cent certain" that he did not complain to the Government; that he had, however, when operating the Court theatre in Newark, communicated his clearance problem to Sidney Samuelson, former president of the New Jersey Allied, in an effort to get better licensing terms for his house; that he and a partner had leased the Court theatre in 1926, and that his chief problem was the 14-day clearance which the Savoy Theatre had, over his house; that the Savoy was owned by an independent, before Warners took it over; that Warners merely had the same clearance, in operating the Savoy, as had the independent; that the Savoy had 1,600 seats, and his own house, only 800; that his house was five years older than the Savoy; and that he now participates in the operation of the Howard theatre, Howard Beach, Long Island.

Howard Lesser, an independent exhibitor, of Paterson, New Jersey, one of the prospective witnesses to alleged monopoly and unfair practices by the majors, listed in the Government's bill of particulars, testified in pre-trial questioning by defense attorneys, on Wednesday.

He testified against "unfair" clearance by the distributors to his competitors and complained that Warners attempted to compel him to buy 1939-40 product as a condition to his obtaining the last half of the 1938-39 program.

Forgione Names Reade

Independent circuits are greater competition than affiliated circuits, James C. Forgione, independent exhibitor, of Metuchen, New Jersey, second of the Government's prospective witnesses in the New York "key" anti-trust, to be examined by majors' attorneys, told them Wednesday, April 24th, in New York.

Mr. Forgione named Walter Reade, independent circuit owner, as a primary cause for his clearance problems. Mr. Reade operates in the Plainfield, New Jersey, area. Mr. Forgione said he did not object to affiliated theatres in his area, obtaining clearance over his Forum theatre, in Metuchen; but that Mr. Reade, since 1933, had also obtained protection.

He said that, before 1933, he played pictures 14 days later than the affiliated theatres in New Brunswick and Perth Amboy. They are about 6 miles from Metuchen. Plainfield is about eight; it is beyond the county line; there are poor transit connections, he said. Nevertheless, he related, Mr. Reade's Plainfield theatre obtained seven days' additional clearance.

Mr. Forgione admitted that RKO, Universal, and Columbia "knew" of his situation, and had allowed him to purchase some pictures without contracting for all of their product.

He regarded it as "wrong" for a "distributor to cooperate with one independent against another."

Block booking was a factor about which Mr. Forgione complained, during the questioning; he asserted small town operators would like to play pictures from all the majors, but could not, under the present dispensation.

Mr. Forgione revealed he had only one meeting with the Government investigators; and that was in the New York headquarters of the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, a meeting arranged by the Allied, after the unit had canvassed its members by letter.

Another Government Witness

The Department of Justice, last Thursday, added another name to its long list of over 500-odd prospective witnesses, to be called in its "key" New York anti-trust suit against the majors, scheduled to begin on June 3d. A supplemental answer, filed by it, listed William Goldman, Philadelphia exhibitor, as a witness who has knowledge of an alleged monopoly exercised by Warners in Philadelphia; and asserted that he, in 1935, allegedly was forced to drop his endeavors to lease the Keith theatre because United Artists refused to sell him first run; and that, afterwards, Warner Theatres leased the theatre. The Government states that Mr. Goldman's name had been inadvertently omitted when the original list of prospective witnesses was filed.

ONE FOR NEELY BILL, TWO OPPOSE IT

The Neely anti-block and blind selling bill now pending in the Senate (S. 280) continues to see-saw on the attitudes of public groups, the Wisconsin Congress of Parents and Teachers this week voting to support it, while the Missouri State Federation of Women's Clubs voted against, without a dissenting vote. Also on the record as opposing the bill is the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays which voted against it at a meeting Wednesday at which C. C. Pettijohn was a speaker.

From New York the National Board of Review this week sent warning to the various better films and club women's organizations with which it is in contact that the measure will not give assurance to the public of picture selectivity nor assure quality.

COMPETITION OF OWN RADIO ARISES ON NBC TELEVISION'S FIRST BIRTHDAY

Asks Owners of Receivers and Dealers Whether Audiences Would Accept Change of Nights, Hours of Programs

Hoping to eliminate competition between its television unit and its standard radio broadcast programs on Saturday evenings and on Sundays, and endeavoring to adjust complaints from television listeners in the New York metropolitan area that they cannot listen to a television program and to a favorite radio program at the same time, the National Broadcasting Company this week was considering a change in its five-day-per-week television schedule. This change would remove television programs from the air on Saturday evenings and on Sundays, and place them on Mondays and Tuesdays, now devoid of television entertainment.

Questionnaires Issued

Questionnaires were sent out to owners of television receivers and dealers in the New York area, asking whether the audiences would accept such a change. It is reported that the NBC already had decided to change, had withheld the announcement so that it could be certain of public support. Some set dealers and the NBC's parent Radio Corporation of America sales force, it was said, had protested, declaring that Saturday evenings and Sundays were best for display and demonstration of sets for sales.

The introduction of a seven day week would involve some difficulties with the two unions in the technical field, it is reported. These are the Association of Technical Employees, independent, with which the NBC now deals, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, from whom NBC officials declare no demands have been received. It is understood that the five day week now prevails because it is the union week, and because an extra two days would involve another shift of workers.

Television production crews consist of about 18 men, for a studio program, 3 for a motion picture program, 12 for an outside "pick-up" program.

In addition to the change in days of presentation, a change in hours may be made. Thus, evening and afternoon programs would be moved forward one half hour.

The NBC is keeping television on the air on Saturday afternoons, because those afternoons provide the best opportunities for telecasting of outdoor sporting events.

To provide for summer vacations, the company will reduce operations for a six-week period, beginning in July.

Though the Federal Communications Commission will not allow commercialization of television, even in limited form, at the present time, the National Broadcasting Company has, of late, been presenting several commercial programs "to find out what television listeners prefer in the way of commercials," according to an NBC spokesman.

On Sunday afternoon, "Tobaccoland, U.S.A.," a Liggett and Myers-sponsored industrial film was shown; on Wednesday evening, Lowell Thomas was seen and heard, broadcasting the "Sunoco News," sponsored by the Sun Oil Company; on Friday evening "Your Esso Television Reporter," a news feature, was to be shown.

FORM SOCIETY TO ADVANCE TELEVISION

The Association for the Advancement of Television, Inc., has been formed by a group of engineers and others interested in television and the organization has been chartered by the State of New York as a non-profit membership corporation. The president is J. H. Prager.

The group plans to conduct a number of activities, according to Samuel I. Bazil, counsel. One purpose will be to act as a "consumers research bureau" and a testing body for television equipment. Mr. Bazil said they had reports that some television companies have receivers ready for mass-production which they might try to sell on the American market even though the English machines are not up to the American television standard. He also said the organization plans to publish material relating to television, conduct forums on television and interest the public in the new industry. The group will be supported, he said, through membership dues.

Such presentations are allowable if the NBC is not paid for their display, the company's officials said, on Monday.

Television's First Birthday

More programs for the televiewers and the beginning of regular transmissions of National Broadcasting Company radiovision programs over an established network are seen as developments of the next 12 months by Alfred H. Morton, NBC vice-president in charge of television, in an anniversary review of NBC television's first year of regular daily service, as observed Tuesday in New York.

"In television's second year," said Mr. Morton, "with the cooperation of televiewers both present and prospective, we expect to have NBC programs radiated regularly by a new NBC station in Philadelphia and by the General Electric Company transmitter near Schenectady. And, provided television is granted a status of at least limited commercialization, thus opening the way to more help from advertisers, it is entirely probable that NBC may expand our present five-day television week into one of seven days.

"The first year of television broadcasting has seen our schedule rise from about five hours a week to 16 hours. Under limited commercialization we might anticipate another rise to 20 or more hours a week.

"During the first year of television we have telecast more than 200 individual programs in cooperation with advertisers and advertising agencies." The year's programming reputedly cost $500,000.

"These programs," the statement went on, "presented in cooperation with 80 different advertisers, represented every major American industry. They totalled more than 10 per cent of our program hours for the first year. If Additional outside telecasts and the presentation of a considerable number of NBC radio network programs will be made possible through the use of NBC's second unit of mobile television equipment, he indicated.

"In the year since last April 30th, when President Roosevelt and others appeared in the inaugural program of American television broadcasting," said Morton, "we have transmitted more than 1,000 individual program items. The number of program hours totals more than 600.

Television's development in the United States, Mr. Morton continued, must include the active participation of the televiewer. NBC's audience poll is based on a program mailing list of more than 2,000 names of receiver owners.

Comparison of the NBC list with lists of known set owners, added Mr. Morton, indicates that the total number of receivers in the metropolitan area is more than 3,000.

The audience poll, conducted weekly, showed the most popular program of the year was of the Broadway production, "When We Are Married."

The first birthday of regular daily television broadcasting in America was observed Wednesday, with a two-hour program, including appearances by stars of stage, motion pictures and radio. The telecast began at 8:30 p.m., over Station W2XBS.

Philco To Sell Stock

Philco Radio and Television Corporation in Philadelphia, one of the large radio receiver manufacturing field and one of the pioneers in television, will drop its privately-owned status by selling to the public a sizable block of its common stock, it was announced last Friday after a meeting of stockholders in Philadelphia. An amendment to the articles of incorporation was voted to permit reduction in par value of common stock from $100 to $3, under the present plan each present share to be exchanged for 33 1/3 shares of new common.

After giving effect to the exchange, Philco will have outstanding 1,221,100 shares of common stock and 28,385 shares of $100 par value $5 preference stock. There will be no bonds, mortgages or funded indebtedness. It is contemplated that present stockholders will sell through a public offering a part of their holdings of the new common. Discussion already under way with the investment banking firm of Smith Barney and Company, whereby an offering of sufficient stock to obtain funds to retire all the preference shares will be made. Upon completion of the plans, the company said, the common stock will be the sole outstanding issue of Philco. Application will be made to list the stock on the New York Stock Exchange.

James T. Buckley, president, hinted that the forthcoming public offering is a forerunner of others from time to time.

Mr. Buckley disclosed that Philco last year set a new record in receiver sales, total sales, including other lines of manufactured goods, aggregating $45,423,184 in 1939. He also revealed that current assets at the close of 1939 amounted to $17,093,320, against current liabilities of $4,480,932 with cash substantially in excess of current obligations.

In addition to radio manufacturing, Philco produces domestic refrigerators and portable air conditioning units.

Farnsworth To Build

E. A. Nicholas, president of Farnsworth Television and Radio Corp. of Philadelphia and Fort Wayne, Ind., announced last Saturday that the present plans of the company call for the production of television receiving sets to start in September.

NEW DEAL FILMS HELD PROPAGANDA; ICKES WOULD TAX FILM LOCATIONS

Senate Refuses to Allot Funds to Continue Film and Radio Services Transferred to Office of Education

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Amid a barrage of charges that motion pictures produced by New Deal agencies were propaganda, the U. S. Senate, Friday, April 26th, refused to appropriate funds for continuance of the Federal film and radio services as transferred last year to the Office of Education from the National Emergency Council by President Roosevelt. Types of films specifically under attack have been Pare Lorentz's "Fight for Life," maternity subject, and "The Plough That Broke the Plains" and "The River."

Radio Fund Aso Refused

With 36 Senators not voting, the Senate, by a tally of 24 to 36, refused to adopt an amendment offered by Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma, to include $106,400 for the Federal Film Service in the Federal Security Agency appropriation bill and by the same action denied a fund of $40,000 for the radio service.

Since the House of Representatives previously had denied funds for the two services, the net effect of the Senate's action will be to put them out of business at the close of the fiscal year, June 30, next, unless in the meantime legislation is enacted giving them official status, and this is not considered likely.

The two services were created by President Roosevelt and placed in the NEC to act as clearing houses of Federal motion picture and radio activities. Their establishment had never been provided for by Congress, and it was on that ground that House and Senate refused to provide further money once the two agencies were placed in a position where they could be reached; the NEC, having been financed from "blank check" funds given the President, had never been subject to Congressional control.

Senator Thomas said that there are some 27 agencies engaged in film activities. However, he said in answer to a question by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, he could not estimate the amount spent on films by the Government annually, acknowledging that in many instances the appropriations are concealed, but suggested that, on the basis of the request of the film service itself the total would probably be "somewhat less than $3,000,000."

"Personally," Mr. Thomas admitted, "I think perhaps we have too many agencies in the film business, but the action taken by the committee is not the way to attack this problem. If it is not desired by the Congress to have all these agencies, then a bill should be passed providing for the establishment of one or more Federal film agencies. Such agencies should be highly developed, so that any Federal bureau desiring the service of a film agency can make application to it, and have the film made by the best machinery available, by the most competent operators available, and have the production turned out in the best possible manner."

If the Federal Security Agency had concealed the film service appropriation, as have other agencies, he taunted the Senate, the fund would never have been refused.

Opposition to the amendment was led by Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, ranking majority member of the Appropriations Committee, who contended that no enabling act had been passed by Congress and, accordingly, there was no legal basis for the appropriation.

Mr. McKellar charged that the film and radio services had been financed by relief funds and declared it "monstrous to be transferring appropriations from one agency to another when there is a prohibition in the WPA law against using the money except for work relief."

"Admittedly this money is not used for work relief, and yet under the work-relief law they set up a film industry," he declared.

"Insidiously, apparently secretly, not asking for funds for film service, but asking for funds under other pretexts, various agencies have been using appropriations for film purposes to the extent perhaps of half a million dollars a year, and I imagine a great deal more than a half a million dollars," he charged.

Taft Warns of Danger

Admitting that some of the films put out by the Government might be useful, Senator Robert Taft, Ohio, said that "the whole business has been greatly expanded beyond any real value in relation to the functions of the Federal Government" and warned of the dangers of films produced which "only in a general way illustrate functions of the Federal Government."

"I do not care who is controlling the Government," he told the Senate, "if it is to produce films and put them out, they are bound to become propaganda for the particular department and the particular work of the department that happens to be covered by the film.

Referring specifically to "The River," produced by the Film service, Senator Taft declared that "a United States documentary film is a United States propaganda film."

Speaking the last word in an effort to secure support for the amendment, which had been specifically requested by President Roosevelt, Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky made a half-hearted defense of the film service, saying that he is a devoted motion picture fan and has received information and inspiration from educational pictures.

However, he admited, "there is much to be said for the suggestion that the Congress ought to know more about what is being done with the money it appropriates."

ASSAILS U. S. AID TO THEATRE

John Golden, playwright and play producer, speaker on the New York University series, "Diplomas and Jobs," criticized government subsidization of the theatre in an address during the week over WNYC, municipal radio station.

"I'm in favor of a subsidized theatre," Mr. Golden said, "but not with Government money. In fact, I am not one who believes the government should run any business. I think the theatre could easily organize its own subsidized groups and subscribe considerable money to support them. I would gladly contribute, but I know I wouldn't want it run by politicians, for I'm sure we of the theatre know more about that than most any politician."

Ashurst's Attack on Plan of Secretary of Interior Limits Fees to Indian Lands and U. S. National Parks

With all its $100,000,000 annual tax payments to the Federal Government and its $250,000,000 tax payments to state and city governments, the motion picture business would be subjected to "pestiferous" taxes for taking films on the public lands. Efforts of Harold L. Ickes, U. S. Secretary of the Interior, to impose definite scales of charges on Hollywood for use of the public lands for the making of films on location this week drew upon his head the wrath of Senator Henry A. Ashurst of Arizona, who paved the way for a committee investigation and succeeded in having the Senate adopt a prohibition against the imposition of fees for such activities except on the Indian lands and in the National Parks.

Would Have Charged $100

Introducing a resolution for an investigation, both of the fee schedules and of the motion picture activities of the Interior Department itself, Senator Ashurst told the Senate that the Department on April 20th had issued a schedule which, while making no charge for the taking of news reel, travelogue or still pictures, provided a flat fee of $100 for the making of productions on the public lands, other than the National Parks, with casts comprising more than 25 persons and, for making pictures in the National Parks, daily fees ranging from $50 for casts of less than five to $500 for casts of over 25.

"The honorable Secretary of the Interior, in his zeal, has conceived the idea that he is paramount in regard to all lands belonging to the United States," Senator Ashurst commented. "I may be wrong, but I believe that under the Constitution Congress is the appropriate body to deal with and dispose of public lands.

It was pointed out by Senator Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee that many of the departments are making motion pictures and that the appropriations committee this year refused to allocate specific sums for that activity, as requested by several. "I do not know what the connection is," he observed, "but it does seem that our departments are going a little strong on making films."

Refers to Stalin

With the Senate engaged in consideration of motion picture activities in connection with the supply bill for the Federal Security Agency on April 26, Senator Ashurst saw an opportunity to put it on record and offered an amendment to the measure which would ban the making of charges for activities on lands other than those of the Indians and the National Parks.

Declaring the order to be an invasion of the rights of Congress, he said solemnly, "I measure my words when I say, examine the record of bloody Joe Stalin and you cannot find such an arbitrary, unnecessary, irritating order as to lands."

To a laughing Senate he said that for the past two years "millions of persons through the West have been charmed by the friendly rivalry going on between the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture as to which should have this or that jurisdiction, and which department should be entitled to have a courtesy title placed on a sound or motion picture taken on lands belonging to the United States.

It's a toss-up!

Which is greater!

20 MULE TEAM or VIVA VILLA?

they're both great pictures!

Let's put it this way:

"20 MULE TEAM" IS ANOTHER "VIVA VILLA"

and it's positively Wallace Beery's greatest role!

This is a new M-G-M thriller to take rank with the biggest outdoor pictures you ever played. Filmed in the awesome sweep and majestic splendor of Death Valley with a cast of thousands. Here are mule skinners with whips cracking, claim jumpers with guns blazing, tinhorn gamblers, Indian swampers, crooks prospecting for easy pickings. All the wild, wicked, wanton drama of early California's lusty lore with Wallace Beery in a luscious role packed with power and racy humor. It's got the kick of 20 mules!

BROADCAST MUSIC, RIVAL OF ASCAP, GETS 2,500 SONGS, 292 STATIONS

But ASCAP Says at Least 390 Stations Will Sign New Contracts at Once When They Are Ready

Broadcast Music, Inc., has acquired The M. M. Cole Music Publishing Company's catalogue of more than 2,500 songs, and apparently has refused to argue with the Songwriters Protective Association over its declaration of several weeks ago that it would not charge more than two cents royalty per transcription for its songs. Officers of the new music publishing and licensing firm set up by the broadcasting networks and large stations, in the hope of supplanting the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers as a music source for radio, and perhaps as a source of music for motion pictures, declare that 292 stations have signed contracts with it, and that it expects 88 more stations to sign soon.

These stations, BMI executives said in New York on Monday, do 80 per cent of the radio advertising business of the country.

More Songs Published

BMI last week also announced the publication and advertising of more songs, and additions to its personnel. It hopes to acquire the catalogues of many more publishers, to get several hundred songs writers, to have enough songs, through these mediums, and to have popularized them so well, by radio, coin music machines, and, possibly, the motion pictures, that by December, when broadcasters' contracts with the ASCAP end, it will be able to supply as much popular and classical music as needed.

The BMI statements on the signing of additional stations was countered by ASCAP announcements that, shortly, when the new ASCAP contracts are ready, they will be signed by a minimum of 390 stations at the outset; and that, by the end of the year, virtually all of the country's stations which formerly had ASCAP contracts, will again have them.

The BMI contract with the M. M. Cole Music Publishing Company, of Chicago, was signed on April 24th, and runs for ten years, from January 1, 1941, one day after ASCAP's contracts with the broadcasters end.

Hillbilly and Cowboy Music

At present, and until the new contract goes into effect, the Cole company's catalogue is controlled by the Society of European Stage Authors and Composers.

It comprises much music in the hillbilly and cowboy idioms; and is expected to be useful to BMI's smaller station customers, servicing rural areas.

It is understood that BMI is paying the Chicago firm $270,000 for the catalogue, the payments to be spread over the ten years. The contract is to be renewed in 1950, after negotiation over rate changes. There is provision, in the contract, for arbitration, by the American Arbitration Association, if the two firms disagree.

In the Cole catalogue are the music from companies such as the Belmont Publishing Company, the Calumet Music Company, Moderne Publications, Hearst Music Publishing Company, Ltd., of Canada, Morse M. Freeman, and Vincent, Howard and Freeman, Ltd.

Among the "best sellers" in the catalogue are the songs "Mexicali Rose," "Strawberry Roan" and "Silver-Haired Daddy."

The Song Writers Protective Association last week assailed BMI for refusing to ask for more than a two cents royalty for trans- a Song Writers Protective Association statement, which was drawn by John Schulman, its attorney:

"BMI officials reveal naively, that they are willing to sacrifice the interests of the songwriter to benefit their backers, the chain broadcasters, and some of their affiliates and independents.

"I do not agree with the interpretation of

Exhibitors' Payments to ASCAP For Music Running a Million a Year

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers may have taken as much as $6,000,000 from motion picture theatre owners since it has been collecting royalties from exhibitors for publicly performing the music of its members—based on the average $1,000,000 annual collections.

Approximately $6,000,000 was collected from all sources in 1939 by the Society, officers said at the 26th annual meeting on Thursday, April 25th, at the Ritz Carlton Hotel, New York.

The total profits distributed to members were not substantially higher than in 1938 because operating expenses increased to consume much of the 10 per cent increase in receipts. It was said that the increase in operating costs was due principally to the expenses of defending the Society in legal actions occasioned by anti-ASCAP laws in a number of states.

In 1939 about $4,000,000 was collected from radio broadcasters, $1,000,000 from motion picture theatres and $1,000,000 from hotels, restaurants, taverns and miscellaneous sources. E. C. Mills, chairman of the Administrative Committee of ASCAP, said that the bulk of the 10 per cent increase in receipts came from the broadcasters because they had a much better year in 1939 than in 1938. ASCAP payments from radio stations are based on percentages. Radio billings were said to be up about $40,000,000 in 1939.

ASCAP has collected approximately $33,000,000 from all sources in the 21-year period in which it has been collecting fees, according to E. C. Mills, chairman of the Administrative Committee. With the 1939 total at about $6,000,000 it is clear that the Society's revenue has increased many hundreds of times in the two-decade period. The radio industry now pays, on protest, about two-thirds of the $6,000,000 bill. Also the fees collection from motion picture theatres has increased from a few thousand dollars to $1,000,000 a year.

In 1920 film theatres paid ASCAP about $40,000 and the figure rose gradually: $80,000, $120,000, $150,000 and on up. The approximate yearly average in the period 1920–1933 was $200,000. After new rates were effected four years ago, the sum was about $700,000 and for the past few years it has been running steadily at about the one million dollar mark.

In the early years of the Society's history the revenue increased as the organization extended its activities. ASCAP in the interim brought many hundreds of exhibitors to court on suits charging violation of the U. S. Copyright Act under which it collects its royalties and many an exhibitor paid the $250 fine prescribed by the law.

The Society began collecting fees for performing rights from motion picture theatres in 1919. The Society was formed in 1914 but it was not until 1917 that the Supreme Court ruled that its operations were legal. It took the two years from 1917 to 1919 for the group to set up an organization and begin collecting fees.

The annual meeting was described as the "most peaceful" in history. No resolutions were offered from the floor and there were no disputes over classification. Speeches by Gene Buck, president; Gus Schirmer, treasurer; John G. Paine, general manager; Louis Frohlich, general counsel and Mr. Mills were heard by the 500 members present. The speakers reviewed the Society's business in 1939 and no consideration was given to future problems, such as the revolt against ASCAP among some of the radio stations. All officers were reelected.

BROADCAST MUSIC STAFF GROWING

BMI that electrical transcriptions come within the compulsory license provisions of the copyright law. So far as songwriters are concerned, they would welcome a test of construction of these compulsory license provisions. Regardless of the BMI construction, the fact is that transcriptions have been treated differently than phonograph records.

"The acceptance of BMI's construction would result in a substantial loss of revenue to songwriters . . . . "

BMI's rejoinder to the association statement was, merely, that the two cent charge was the only one alluded to by the law; and that, anyway, songwriters should welcome the low charge, because it would increase the use of their music in transcriptions; and hence, popularize it.

Seven New Songs

BMI last week announced seven new songs. These are "Give Me Music," a waltz; "I'll Be Goin'," a foxtrot; "Keep an Eye on Your Heart"; "What's the Matter, My Darling," a ballad; "You Mean So Much to Me"; "Boogie Woogie to You," a rhythm "jump" number; and "Please Don't Tell Her I Told You."

Both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System are to exploit these numbers, as they have the six previous numbers brought out by BMI.

BMI has added to its administrative personnel. Appointments were announced last week by Merritt E. Tompkins, general manager.

Carl Haverlin has been made station relations director. He formerly directed publicity and handled sports broadcasts for Station KFI, Los Angeles; was a sales manager for KFI-KECA; and from 1938 until the present, had been station relations manager for Davis and Schwegler.

Dana Merriman has been made office manager of BMI. He is a graduate of the Yale School of Music, a well-known conductor; has been a program director for WTIC, Hartford; was a conductor for the NBC; and, last year, was in charge of music and music copyrights for the New York Music Fair.

George Dickson Skinner has joined the publicity staff. He has been a lawyer, writer, and teacher.

Leaflet Hits ASCAP

Broadcast Music is circulating a leaflet to broadcasters explaining its position, and assailing ASCAP. In part, it says:

"You paid for an ASCAP license because ASCAP controlled the music that was popular. . . . As music was added to the ASCAP catalogue, that music became popular, because you were broadcasting it. . . . Round and round, you raced in your cage. . . .

"Nowhere else in the record of modern business is there a case in which a monopoly has been equally successful in making its victims themselves operate the mechanism that held them prisoners."

The music firm is also explaining itself to the public via messages on the back covers of its sheet music.

This week, an executive of BMI expressed gratitude for the cooperation of the manufacturers of coin music machines, and the operators of taverns in which machines play. Many associations of the latter have agreed to support BMI music, it was said.

In a letter, recently, to the operators of the coin machines, BMI pointed out that ASCAP had been trying to tax coin-operated music machines, and that it has supported a law in Congress for such taxation.

The National Council of State Liquor Dealers Associations, at its recent annual convention, resolved that ASCAP was "levying unreasonable fees from users of copyrighted music," and supported the BMI. At the convention, John Fetterman, counsel to the Buckeye Liquor Dealers Association, of Ohio, said:

"Our field of activity has suffered great hardships at the hands of ASCAP. Under the strong leadership of BMI, we have affiliated interests on our side, who will help us battle this unfair monopoly."

BMI, this week, was reported negiotiating for the music catalogues of Hinds, Hayden, and Eldridge, whose specialty is church and school music; and of Arthur P. Schmidt, whose catalogue includes some of the works of the American composer, Edward MacDowell.

Meanwhile, as BMI bustled with negotiations and energy, ASCAP executives last week asserted that "nearly 500" broadcasters had discussed new contracts with it, in one month and a half, since the basic plan for the contracts was disclosed by ASCAP.

John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP, said that the new ASCAP contracts would be ready between May 15th and June 1st.

U.S. AND FRANCE STUDY MONEY RESTRICTIONS

American distributors and the French government have under discussion proposals closely parallel to the existing British restrictions, including those on remittances, with the distributors holding out for no limitations on the number of imports.

Reports have intimated that the government was suggesting a greatly curtailed number of imports.

Walsh Resigns After Paramount Poolings

George C. Walsh on Wednesday announced his resignation, effective immediately, as president and general manager of Netco Theatres Corporation, a subsidiary of Paramount, operating theatres in New York State.

Mr. Walsh resigned because of the fact that various pools in Netco operating points have been affected, greatly reducing the number of theatres that will continue to be actively operated by Paramount. Pooling arrangements include Rochester, Syracuse, Newburgh, Glens Falls, N. Y., Middletown and the Paramount, Stapleton, S. I.

Committees Named For Fund Drive

At a luncheon in the Plaza Hotel in New York last week, Spyros Skouras, operating head of National Theatres and chairman of the Entertainment section of the Greater New York Fund, named sub-divisions and chairmen as follows: William McBride, theatre ticket agencies; William Morris, with committee men, Phil Blum and Nat Kalshein, bands and orchestras; Francis Coppecus and Fred Shang, concert artists; Col. John R. Kilpatrick, with Benny Friedman and Dan Michalove, sports; Marcus Heiman, with John Shubert and James Reilly, the legitimate theatre.

Meanwhile at a luncheon Monday at the Hotel Astor for the exchange heads and other motion picture executives, with B. S. Moss, chairman of the sub-division presiding, plans were formulated to enroll exhibitors throughout the city for the Greater New York Fund. Two executives were on hand to outline the organization's work and assist in formulating the plans for the exhibitor drive.

The exchange heads will take over the task of contacting all exhibitors with committee heads to be named after a further meeting with Mr. Moss. One committee will handle circuits, and the independents will be contacted by a second committee. Mr. Moss expressed the belief that with a thorough canvassing of exhibitors, contributions from this source could be materially increased.

James L. Kilpatrick, president of the New York Telephone Company, and chairman of the Utilities and Amusement Division of the Fund, reported contributions of $404,447 were received in the first 14 days of the drive from his divisions.

Rogers Drive Opens

The fifth annual Will Rogers National Theatre Week started in nearly 6,000 motion picture houses throughout the country last week and ran for seven days ending Wednesday.

All major circuits and thousands of independent theatre owners were enrolled in the campaign, which was designed to raise money to maintain the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and for other medical and charitable purposes. The Memorial Hospital is for anyone actively engaged in the film industry suffering from tuberculosis. Larger theatres in the country solicit money from patrons in connection with showing a short subject, while smaller theatres contribute individually to the drive fund.

$60,000 for Jewish Aid

Jack Rose of the Indiana Illinois Theatre circuit, chairman of the Chicago Jewish Relief Fund, reported $60,000 has been contributed by the amusement industry. He was aided in the fund drive by John Balaban, Jack Kirsch, Eddie Silverman and a large number of workers.

Reviewers Meet May 18th

The Spring conference of the Young Reviewers and Four Star Clubs of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures will be held in the Auditorium of the School of Education, New York University, May 18th.

PARAMOUNT NETS $2,757,944; HAS $25,835,579 WORKING CAPITAL

Equals 63¢ a Common Share; Interest-Bearing Indebtedness Reduced by $5,000,000; Foreign Exchange Decline Cause

Consolidated earnings of Paramount Pictures, Inc., for the year ended Dec. 30, 1939, after all charges, including interest, federal taxes, depreciation and reserves, amounted to $2,737,533, and profit on the purchase of the company's debentures totalled $20,411, a total of $2,757,944, the company's annual report issued last Friday by President Barney Balaban, disclosed. In addition, Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the year of partially owned companies amounted to approximately $1,117,000. The combined consolidated results and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned companies for the year aggregate $3,874,944. The comparative figures for the year 1938 were consolidated earnings of $2,533,278, which included $292,361 of net capital gains and non-recurring income, while profits on purchase of the company's debentures and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned companies totaled $332,397 and $1,240,000, respectively, a combined total of $4,105,675.

63 Cents a Share Common

The consolidated results of $2,757,944, after deducting annual dividends of $1,201,072 on the first and second preferred shares outstanding on December 30, 1939, were equal to $.63 per share on the 2,465,927 shares of common stock outstanding on December 30, 1939. Calculated on the same basis the combined consolidated results and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned subsidiaries of $3,874,944 would be equal to $1.08 per share on said common shares. The earnings per common share for the year 1938 were $.68 and $1.18 respectively computed on the same basis.

During the year dividends were paid aggregating $1,578,461 representing dividends at the rate of 6% per annum on the first and second preferred stocks for the year 1939 and a dividend of $.15 per share on the common stock. Dividends for the first quarter 1940 on both preferred issues were paid on April 1, 1940.

The company's consolidated balance sheet shows that cash and marketable securities on Dec. 30, 1939, amounted to $10,747,860, of which $1,983,275 represented balances in Canada, $452,787 in Great Britain and other Dominions, and $73,115 in other foreign countries, principally in South America. The total inventory amounted to $19,887,903. Total current assets were $34,651,714 and current liabilities $8,816,135, leaving a net working capital of $25,835,579.

During 1939 the interest-bearing indebtedness of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries was reduced by a total of approximately $5,000,000.

All of Paramount's 6 per cent debentures, amounting to $9,689,576 principal amount, were retired during 1939. In order to provide the funds for this refinancing the company and several of its wholly-owned subsidiaries borrowed from banks approximately $7,500,000, the greater portion of which is repayable on a five-year basis, with interest rates averaging about three and one-half per cent per annum. On December 30, 1939 there was held in the company's treasury $1,394,000 principal amount of its three and one-quarter per cent convertible debentures which will be available for annual sinking fund purposes commencing April 15, 1941.

The funded debt of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries due after one year as shown in the balance sheet aggregates $34,486,446. Of this amount $6,276,669 represents obligations of Canadian subsidiaries which are payable in Canadian funds and $2,541,271 represents obligations of English subsidiaries which are payable in pounds sterling. The balance comprises (1) $11,113,200 of the company's three and one-quarter per cent convertible debentures which mature March 1, 1947 and require annual sinking fund payments commencing April 15, 1941, based on fifteen per cent of the consolidated earnings for the preceding fiscal year and (2) $14,555,306 debt of various maturities, subject to annual amortization by your company and its consolidated domestic subsidiaries.

outbreak of the European war adversely affected Paramount's foreign revenues, Mr. Balaban pointed out. While business in foreign currencies has been restored to a reasonably normal basis, the drop in foreign exchange has had the effect of reducing the dollar equivalent of this foreign business. Paramount's investments in foreign countries other than Canada aggregate $7,100,000, of which amount $5,000,000 is invested in England and the balance in Continental European and other foreign countries. President Balaban stressed that progress is being made in reducing costs and otherwise revising operations of the company to meet the uncertainty of the foreign situation.

KAO and Keith Report Earnings

For the 52 weeks ended March 30, 1940, Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiary companies report a net profit of $961,893, after all charges, including settlement of a lease obligation in the amount of $400,000. This is equal to $14.96 per share on 64,304 shares of seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock.

The following figures are in part estimated and subject to audit and adjustment at the end of the calendar year, as has been the company's practice heretofore:

GTE Quarter Net $212,681; Harder Made an Officer

General Theatres Equipment Corporation and subsidiaries, excluding the Cinema Building Corporation, reported a net profit of $212,681 for the quarter ending March 31st which compares with $145,544 in the first quarter of 1938. The 1940 first quarter profit is equal to 36 cents on 592,887 shares of common stock. In the corresponding period last year the earnings were equivalent to 25 cents per share.

CITES OHIO TAXES TO SHOW BUSINESS RISE

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in the organization's current service bulletin lists sales tax collections as released by the State Treasurer which, he says, "is the best barometer of business conditions in Ohio."

The total sales tax collections for the first three months of this year were $10,142,805.07, as against $8,916,748.87 for the corresponding period of 1939, an increase of 13.6 per cent.

Admission tax collections in this period were $379,829.44 for 1940, compared with $340,043.97 in 1939, an increase of 11.6 per cent, or 2 per cent below the comparative sales tax collections.

All except seven of the 88 Ohio counties showed increased sales tax receipts for the first three months of 1940.

R. N. Harder has been elected vice-president and treasurer of the corporation to succeed the late M. V. Carroll. R. B. La Rue replaced Mr. Carroll on the board of directors. Other officers and directors were reelected: Earle G. Hines, president; W. E. Green, vice-president, and Mr. La Rue, secretary.

Application Made To List RKO Stock

RKO filed applications this week to list 2,753,053 shares of the new RKO common and 128,170 shares of the new preferred on the New York Stock Exchange. Approval was also asked of the listing on notice of issuance of an additional 6,338,133 shares of common to take care of the conversion of preferred and for the exercise of subscription warrants.

The listing is subject to the approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Since RKO will not file the 1939 figures with the SEC until about May 15th, the actual listing of the stock is not expected before June 1st.

Northio Takes Over Five Shea Theatres

Paramount and the M. A. Shea Circuit have concluded arrangements by which Northio Theatres, Inc., Paramount subsidiary, will take over the operation of five Ohio theatres from Shea while relinquishing operation of two others to that circuit.

The houses being taken over by Northio heretofore were part of a partnership with the Shea circuit. They are the Paramount and Fremont in Fremont, Ohio; the Clyde, in Clyde, and the Ohio and State in Bellevue. The Shea circuit takes over two theatres at New Philadelphia, Ohio, formerly jointly owned with Northio Theatres.

Giannini Urges Budget Caution

Caution in drawing up production budgets, caution in making plans for future productions, caution in borrowing, and caution in the extension of credit is imperative under present conditions, according to Dr. A. H. Giannini, in New York last week end for a meeting of the Columbia board of directors.

Dr. Giannini stressed the point that the motion picture industry today is an important factor in the economic structure of the nation and that it has opportunities of becoming more and more prosperous but he warned that overextension in any branch of the industry may bring serious consequences. He mentioned the encroaching conflict in Europe and the legislative and judicial threats being directed against the industry as factors of serious importance to be reckoned with in planning for the future

"I am confident," he said, "that the producers are exercising extraordinary care and effort toward economy."

Holman Succeeds Diamond In Paramount Music Post

At a meeting of the directors of the Famous Music Company and the Paramount Music Corporation held in New York Friday Russell Holman was named president, succeeding the late Lou Diamond. Mr. Holman, who is now in Hollywood, will add the general supervisorial duties of this office to his other activities as eastern head of production.

Other officers elected were R. F. Murray, vice-president and treasurer; Norman Collyer, secretary, and Sidney Kornheiser, general manager. Mr. Murray will represent the company at both the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the Music Publishers Association and Mr. Kornheiser will direct operations of the company.

Schwartz Leaves Consolidated

George Schwartz, in an executive position with Consolidated Amusement Enterprises for the last five years, has resigned. In addition to operating the Ascot theatre for the company, where foreign offerings are shown, Mr. Schwartz booked the circuit's 15 Bronx theatres, was director of advertising for the company and did the purchasing of all added attractions, including giveaways.

"REBECCA" RUN REVEALS DIVISION OF EXHIBITOR OPINION ON EXTENSIONS

Half Say Long Showings, as Six Weeks at Music Hall, Reduce Subsequents' Income; Half Say They Help

The holding of "Rebecca" for six weeks at its regular first-run in New York, at the Rockefeller Music Hall in Rockefeller Center, this week started discussion among exhibitors in the area on the effect of such extensions of normal runs—not two-a-day, advance-scale roadshows—on the box offices of subsequents when such extended run productions reach those theatres.

Opinions of owners are about equally divided, a full half of them openly complaining that extensions such as that given the David Selznick production, as released by United Artists, can only reduce income on their subsequent exhibition. Others believe the attendant publicity and public attention during an extension benefits the subsequent showing.

As of mid-week, some "Rebecca" extensions included seven weeks in Los Angeles, four weeks in Chicago, six in Francisco, three in Chicago.

900,000 Estimated Attendance

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall, estimated that "Rebecca" had played to 900,000 persons when it ended its run Wednesday evening, establishing an all-time high in attendance at that theatre. Also, its six weeks established a precedent for the theatre's seven years. Walt Disney's "Snow White," two-and-a-half years ago, played five weeks. Only 20 of the 260 features which have played the Music Hall were held three weeks. Gross box office receipts from "Rebecca" at the Music Hall were estimated near its closing Wednesday by United Artists as approximating $600,000.

Near the end of the picture's fifth week at the Music Hall, Mr. Van Schmus advertised in regular newspaper theatrical columns the opening on Thursday, April 25th, of "My Son, My Son." Meanwhile, it was decided to extend "Rebecca" another week. Mr. Van Schmus then inserted display ads containing a "statement of apology" to the public "for any inconvenience our previous statement as to the 'final' week for 'Rebecca' may have caused."

"No one expected 'Rebecca' in the first four days of its fifth week to exceed the first four days of the fourth week, and therefore we announced the fifth week as final," said the advertisement.

Meanwhile, subsequent-run exhibitors began openly to discuss the effects of extended runs on their box offices. Some typical expressions follow, all from exhibitors in the Greater New York territory.

HERMAN SCHWARTZ, Former theatre operator and now chief film buyer for the Sam Silver Circuit:

"That six weeks' policy helps us; it gives us more publicity on the picture. It's happened before. 'Pygmalion,' 'Goodbye, Mr. Chips'—those were big pictures; yet, when they played around here, they did very well."

HARRY BRANDT, Head of the Brandt Circuit and President of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York:

A picture like "Rebecca" deserved extended playing time, Mr. Brandt conceded; but he also pleaded for "protection of subsequent runs."

INDIANA OWNERS HIT "SLOT MOVIES"

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., is the latest to go on record as being "unanimously and irrevocably opposed to any producer of motion pictures entering into the production of any film for the so-called 'nickel-in-the-slot' movies, inasmuch as these are definitely a threat to the established motion picture theatre owners."

MAX COHEN, Operator of the Cinema Circuit:

"I don't like the idea at all. But we're all in this business for money; and if they can play it six weeks, more power to them. You think it does me any good? No, of course not. It's good business for them. It's bad business for me. What the hell!"

BERNIE BROOKS, General Manager and Booker of the Rosenblatt-Welt Circuit:—

"The picture doesn't break on my house; we won't get it; but I can say definitely, anyway, that the six weeks at the Music Hall will hurt the subsequents. 'Gone With the Wind' at the Capitol proved that."

EDDIE STERN, Chief Booker, Rugoff and Becker Circuit, with theatres chiefly in Brooklyn, Queens and Long Island:

"We're very much against long runs on Broadway, or in that area. Without a question, it hurts our business. Without a question, any picture that plays six, seven, or eight weeks on Broadway is going to harm us. Didn't 'Grapes of Wrath' play eight weeks. There are about 7,000,000 people in New York. And the Music Hall plays to about a million."

MYRON STARR, Chief Booker for the Frank Moscato-Booked Group of Long Island Independent (16) Theatres:

"We don't know, yet, what the effect of the six weeks at the Music Hall will be. We don't play the picture for eight or nine weeks. And we don't know what Loew's will do, before us; that affects us more than what the Music Hall does."

HENRY BROWN, Operator of the Strand and Palace Theatres, Lakewood, New Jersey, and Former Manager of the Isle Theatre Circuit, New York and Staten Island, whose theatres have been taken over by Fabian:

"If I were in New York, I'd protest against the six weeks' practice, and against long runs. When one asks whether such runs milk the territory, I say that of course they milk."

LEO PRESTON, General Manager of the Endicott Circuit:

"I say it would be better for the subsequent runs if the Music Hall runs a picture six weeks or so; it makes the picture better known. I don't think the big houses like that 'milk' my neighborhoods."

I. ZATKIN, General Manager of the Lane Theatre Circuit (four theatres in Manhattan—they play about six weeks after the Music Hall):

"My opinion is that the longer 'Rebecca' stays in Radio City, the better it is for the subsequent run. When a picture stays only a week, the public doesn't think it is much good. The longer it stays at Radio City, the more advertising it gets."

SIDNEY LANE, Lane Theatre, Manhattan:

"I don't think the six weeks will hurt us at all. I think it's a big picture, and that there'll be plenty left for us. How many will see it? A million? That still leaves 6,000,000."

LEO BRECHER, Plaza Theatre:

"I can tell you a good deal more about it when the thing is over. It's a new thing; and I've had too many experiences with false prophecies to attempt to forecast what the effect will be on my theatre. However, I can say to you that they only do this thing when it's an exceptional picture; and that they did it with 'Snow White,' and the result was not disastrous for the subsequent runs."

JOE SEIDER, Head of the Prudential Circuit:

"I feel that it's a good thing. I read Charlie Moscowitz's statement in this morning's Motion Picture Daily, and I'm inclined to agree with him. When a picture gets all that publicity, the burden of re-selling it is something we don't have. Suppose people do go from our own neighborhoods, to the Music Hall? They come back and tell 15 or 20 people about it; and those people go to our theatres."

CHARLES MOSES, Moses Circuit:

"I don't know, really. When the picture starts playing Staten Island, where most of my theatres are, and if it doesn't go in the, let's say, Fabian houses here, why, then we'll know that the Music Hall hit it. It does seem stretching it too far. However, when 'Snow White' ran, that didn't seem to hurt it; so there you are."

JOHN J. O'CONNOR, Vice-President in Charge of RKO Theatres:

Mr. O'Connor did not think the six weeks of "Rebecca" at the Music Hall would hurt grosses at subsequent runs; first, because, he declared, New York has a tremendous potential film audience; secondly, because many Music Hall patrons were from "out-of-town." He said, however, that a long run of the picture in a city smaller than New York would deter subsequent run revenues. He predicted subsequent runs would be helped by the heavy advertising of the Music Hall run of "Rebecca."

LAWRENCE BOLOGNINO, Head of the Consolidated Amusement Enterprises Circuit:

Subsequent run exhibitors will not have as many customers as they could expect, because of the Music Hall run, Mr. Bolognino declared, pointing at the large number who will have seen the picture there.

JOSEPH SPRINGER, Century Circuit:

The subsequent run exhibitor has little reason to enjoy the extended run "Rebecca" is having at the Music Hall, Mr. Springer said. They will be hurt, he added, at the boxoffice.

WALTER READE, Head of the Reade Circuit:

Subsequent-run theatres in New York City and near the Music Hall will be hurt by the long run of "Rebecca" there; those outside of the vicinity, but within a 75-mile radius of New York City, will benefit, from the advertising and word-of-mouth commendation, Mr. Reade declared. He remarked that some of his New Jersey theatres had benefited.

CHARLES C. MOSCOWITZ, Head of Loew's Metropolitan Theatres:

"Big pictures deserve big treatment," Mr. Moscowitz observed, and added that a picture which could earn money for six weeks at the Music Hall "should" be able to earn more money than usual at the subsequent runs. He asserted that previous experience with pictures having lengthy runs proved that they drew to subsequent-run houses persons who were not regular film patrons.

If I Had My Way

(Universal)

Songfilm, with Story

Twenty-first of Bing Crosby's starring vehicles, this brings to the screen as Mr. Crosby's co-star young Gloria Jean, first seen in "The Under-Pup." Miss Jean appears as the daughter of a bridge worker killed on the last night before completion of his job, whereupon she is taken in hand by Mr. Crosby and another fellow bridge worker, enacted in dialogue by El Brendel.

Going to New York, the three are rebuffed by her uncle, welcomed by her grand-uncle, and stay together happily when they open a restaurant featuring such former vaudeville talent as Blanche Ring, Eddie Leonard, Grace La Rue, Trixie Friganza and Julian Eltinge.

With the latter names providing the appeal of reminiscence to an older audience, producer-director David Butler offers an all-age appeal through Miss Jean, with her contingent of younger adherents, and Mr. Crosby and his singing, for the great middle group of picture goers. James Monaco and Johnny Davis wrote four songs for the film, while also heard are "If I Had My Way," "Little Grey Home in the West," one of the songs delivered by Miss Jean; "Ida," and "Rings On My Fingers." All four are generally familiar.

William Conselman and James V. Kern wrote the screen play from a story on which they collaborated with Mr. Butler.

The cast includes in support Charles Winninger, Allyn Joslyn, Donald Woods, Claire Dodd and Nana Bryant.

Previewed at the Alexander Theatre, Glendale, Cal. A predominantly press and professional audience responded with enthusiastic and spontaneous applause to the singing of the picture's stars and to the comedy situations. The story itself, judged by audience reaction to situation and dialogue, served only as a thread to carry the cast from one song to another, with some restiveness evident at the characterizations of the villains of the piece.—WALTER SELDEN.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Produced and directed by David Butler. Screen play by William Conselman and James V. Kern. Original story by David Butler, William Conselman and James V. Kern. Musical director, Charles Previn. Songs by James V. Monaco and Johnny Burke; James Kendis and Lou Klein; Hermann Lohr and D. Eardley-Wilmot; Eddie Leonard, and Maurice Scott and Weston and Barnes. Photographed by George Robinson. Film editor, Irene Morra. P. C A certificate No. 6242. Release date April 26, 1940. Running time, when seen in Glendale, 94 minutes. General audience classification.

Alias the Deacon

(Universal)

Comedy-Drama

Stressing the comedy elements inherent in the story, this screen play by Nat Perrin and Charles Grayson, based on the stage play by John B. Hymer and Leroy Clemens, also involves melodrama arising from a prize fight and theft of a wallet. The play was the foundation of the picture of the same title in 1928 with Jean Hersholt, June Marlowe and Ralph Graves, and again in 1934, under the title "Half a Sinner," with Berton Churchill, Joel McCrea and Solly Blane. Both were Universal productions.

The leading role in the current version is taken by Bob Burns, in the role of a carnival card sharper who assumes the character of a "Deacon" and by combining the two callings, manages to straighten out affairs in a small town. Aiding in the comedy delineations are Mischa Auer, as a barber of Gallic origin; Edward Brophy in the role of the leading character's partner; Spencer Charters, town sheriff; Guinn Williams, prize fighter, and Jack Carson, his manager.

Romantic interest is provided by Peggy Moran and Dennis O'Keefe, while the villainy is handled by the town loan shark, "Jim Cunningham," portrayed by Thurston Hall.

Drama and Dancing

Casting Zorina of ballet fame in the role of a former jewel thief who renounces her career to marry a wealthy young man with whom she falls in love after swindling him, this film also offers comedy and opportunity for its star to perform in Tschaikowsky's Swan Ballet.

Zorina's performance in both acting and ballet assignments received favorable preview reaction. Seen with her are Richard Greene, in the role of the young man she marries, Erich von Stroheim and Peter Lorre, as her former associates, who return to trouble her new life, and Sig Rumann, Fritz Feld and Cora Witherspoon.

Comedy elements in the Karl Tunberg, Don Ettlinger and John O'Hara screen play, based on an original production by Gregor Rabinovitsch, derive from the characterization given by Lorre as a soft hearted kleptomaniac bullied by his more worldly comrade, Von Stroheim.

Gregory Ratoff directed, with Nunnally Johnson associate producer. The dances were staged by George Balanchine.

My Favorite Wife

(RKO Radio)

Bedroom Farce

In this latest variation of the Enoch Arden theme, Cary Grant and Irene Dunne play an unintentional bigamist and a wife who, believed drowned in a shipwreck, returns the day her husband remarries. They are again the rollicking comedy team of "The Awful Truth," but the plot and dialogue of the present offering lean on what has become to be known as sophisticated farce for comedy effects.

The comedy devolves from the husband's inability to tell his second wife why she is "kissless," from her disappointment at the postponement of their honeymoon which leads at length to her seeking advice from a doctor concerning her bridegroom's strange actions, and from the efforts of Wife No. 1 to convince her husband that her virile companion on an island for seven years after the shipwreck was not an aggressive specimen of manhood. That was her story. The plot development makes the fullest use of situations arising from these circumstances, with bedroom scenes underscored.

The complications are resolved in a courtroom scene which is a high spot of comedy, this time without innuendo. The second marriage is annulled but the husband is further harried by the fact that his first wife now thinks he was too hesitant about the whole matter. This final obstacle is overcome in a prolonged bedroom scene, with emphasis on what happens after the fadeout.

The supporting players maintain the comedy in the mood set by the principals, and the direction, by Garson Kanin, is an amplification of the type he evolved in "Bachelor Mother."

The audience of magazine and radio critics who previewed the picture in an RKO projection room in New York was swept with laughter punctuated by titters at the frequent lines of double meaning. Those which evoked giggles included the conversation between Wife No. 2 and the hotel manager after the husband has left the suite on a pretext in order to meet Wife No. 1. The lines include "I want him to come right up"; and "Isn't he up yet?" In a scene with Wife No. 1 there is repetition of the words "Come in." "All right, now I'm in." "Now you're in."—JAMES D. Turnabout

(UA-Hal Roach)

Biological Comedy

Thorne Smith, described in studio literature as "The 20th Century Rabelais," attracted wide attention some years ago with this fantastic novel about a husband and wife who got their sexes mixed. It is of exploitation usefulness for showmen to know that this is the third Smith novel to be produced by Hal Roach, the "Topper" pictures being likewise from his pen, and it is of exhibition usefulness to know somewhat more fully and in detail than commonly the story the picture tells.

The film opens in the luxurious bedroom of "Tim" and "Sally Willows," athletic mainspring of a high powered advertising agency and his indolent spouse. After a day in which he carries on his business at breakneck speed while she lolls in bed and bath, they quarrel at nightfall and express a mutual wish that they might change places. An idol given them by a remote relative, and said to possess power to grant them any wish, takes on voice and animation to assure them their wish shall be granted.

Next morning "Tim" and "Sally" awaken to find their personalities, voices and mannerisms transposed. Athletic "Tim," in the physical person of "Sally," stays at home and spreads consternation among the house servants and the wives of his business partners who come to call. "Irene," in the physical person of "Tim," goes to his office and creates confusion among his staff, estranges the agency's key customer and scores her only success in closing a deal with a customer "Tim" has been barring on grounds of effeminacy.

Late in the afternoon the family doctor calls on "Tim" and, believing him to be "Sally," gives him diet and exercise instructions preliminary to assuring him there is no reason why he should not expect a normal, healthy baby. When "Sally" returns from her day at the office as "Tim," the two, regretting their transposition, appeal to the idol for relief, whereupon they are seemingly restored to their original sexes and personalities.

That evening the restored "Sally" appeals to the estranged key customer and coaxes him back into a buying frame of mind by telling him she is going to have a baby. "Tim's" partners and their wives are brought to friendly terms again by news of the impending event, but the happy ending is upset by the idol, which whispers in "Tim's" ear that it has made a terrible mistake, what with all this transposing of sexes, and that it is "Tim" who is going to have the baby, after all. On this news, received by "Tim" as calamitous and by "Sally" as extremely funny, the picture ends.

This story material is handled at face value and without resort to dream devices or other narrative provision for optional interpretations. The production, directed by Hal Roach, is in the glistening format of the "Topper" pictures, yet contains many comedy points and situations which are characteristically Roachian. The extensively experienced cast is listed below.

Story, situations, dialogue and treatment are of a sort to suggest limitation of exhibition to mature audiences.

The Man with Nine Lives

(Columbia)

Thrill Melodrama

Boris Karloff, who was "The Man They Could not Hang," which had to do with artificial heart experiments, is again in the role of doctor, here concerned with the treatment of cancer by "frozen sleep." Credibility is maintained in the melodramatic action despite eerie twists. That is a tribute to the acting of Karloff and the direction of Nick Grinde.

"Frozen sleep" is not, of course, a Hollywood discovery, nor was the artificial heart, but, as in "The Man They Could not Hang," Hollywood goes beyond current medical discovery to do some crystal-gazing. At the same time doctor picture formula is avoided, and coupled with the "frozen sleep" experiments is a suspense-held melodrama set in an underground laboratory adjacent to an iceroom hewn out of a glacier.

"Dr. Mason" (Roger Pryor) has been experimenting with "frozen sleep," on the theories of "Dr. Kravaal" (Boris Karloff), missing for 10 years. When "Mason" is advised to take a vacation, he and his fiancee, "Judith Blair," a nurse, set out for the Canadian outpost where "Kravaal" disappeared. In "Kravaal's" home they stumble on a secret passage which leads to the ice room. There they find "Kravaal," unconscious. "Mason" revives "Kravaal," who tells a story of how, 10 years ago, a party of four men came to investigate his treatment and were trapped in the iceroom. "Mason" and "Kravaal" revive the four men. One of them destroys the formula. "Kravaal" determines to use the men as guinea pigs. Two are killed in attempting to escape and two die from the effects of the experiments. "Kravaal" is experimenting on "Miss Blair," with "Mason" tied to a chair, when the Mounties arrive.

Pals of the Silver Sage

(Monogram)

Western Melodrama

"Pals of the Silver Sage," the latest contribution from Edward Finney Productions to Monogram's releases, has Tex Ritter in the role of a hard fighting, justice seeking cowboy who saves the ranch from rustlers, with the help of Slim Andrews, the "Arkansas cowboy."

Originally titled "The Colorado Trail," the picture follows the ideal of the western in depending for the most part on action to develop the theme. Dialogue and romance are secondary.

"Tex Wright" and his pal "Cactus" are employed on a ranch owned by a child (Sugar Dawn). Rustlers, as a preliminary to gaining control of the property, are stealing the livestock. The obstacles overcome by "Tex" in proving the suspected criminals guilty provide most of the situations.

"Pals of the Silver Sage" was directed by Al Herman after adaptation to the screen by Robert Emmett, from a story by George Martin.

In Old Missouri

(Republic)

Sharecroppers with a Smile

According to the case presented in "In Old Missouri," all the poor land tenant has to do is to imitate the rustic good humor and hillybilly hijinks of the inventive Weavers or know some household equally talented, aim everything at breaking down the resistance of the plutocratic landowners, and in the end Ma will have an electric washing machine, daughter will be able to waltz the latest vacuum cleaner across the parlor rug, and pa will be able to sit back on his piazza in affluent ease.

Those sections which indicated approval of the Weaver family's preceding pictures, "Down in Arkansaw" and "Jeepers Creepers," have here parallel music and comedy elements.

The Weavers, "Abner," "Cicero," "Elviry" and "Violey," march upon their landlord to better the lot of his sharecropper tenants. Badgered by ill health, a frivolous wife, a playboy son and particularly by growing financial losses, the business baron instead signs over his estate to his backwood clients and disappears. His business associates are revealed to be a gang of chiselers. A charity fashion show clears the debts. The four locate the missing financier, and having him pretend to be dead, they bring the wife to her conjugal senses, the son to a determination to forsake French dancing girls and buckle down to work. For their reward, the sharecroppers in general get a better deal. The Weavers also find time to demonstrate their individual musical and comedy talents.

(Paramount)

South Seas Tale

Dorothy Lamour in a shortened sarong, Robert Preston in abbreviated trunks, a jungle fire and a typhoon which wipes out the fire and marauding natives, are the features of "Typhoon," photographed in color by Paramount. To "Dea's" atoll, on which she was cast away ten years before in a shipwreck, comes a party of natives led by two white men, one a pearl hunter and one a navigator "on the beach." "Dea" falls in love with the navigator, nurses him back to health and saves him and his white companion while the elements destroy the others.

20 Mule Team

(MGM)

Story of Borax

One of the oldest and most widely known trade marks in the United States is 20 Mule Team, applied to borax and its derivatives, and by putting the title of MGM's latest Wallace Beery vehicle on their marquees, exhibitors need do but little more to inform their prospective patrons that "20 Mule Team" is about borax.

The story, laid in Death Valley, is of the fight of a company to continue to seek new borax deposits, stave off bank notes, and continue to haul the crystals across the wastelands to the railroad. All the while a woman saloon-hotel keeper is trying to keep her young daughter from running off with the wrong sort of man.

Supporting Beery, who plays the role of a mule skinner, are Leo Carrillo as his Indian helper; Marjorie Rambeau in the role of the tavern keeper; Anne Baxter the daughter; Douglas Fowley the "city slicker"; Noah Beery, Jr., as "Mitch," whom the girl eventually marries; also Berton Churchill, Arthur Hohl, Clem Bevans, Charles Halton, Minor Watson, Oscar O'Shea and Lloyd Ingraham.

Cyril Hume, E. E. Paramore and Richard Maibaum adapted the story of Robert C. DuSoe and Owen Atkinson. J. Walter Ruben produced the picture.

Men with Steel Faces

(Nat Levine)

Condensed Serial

Back in 1935 Nat Levine's Mascot Pictures Company made a serial called the "Phantom Empire," with Gene Autry and Frankie Darro. It was a combination western and excursion into the realm of fantasy, into an underground kingdom miles below the surface of the earth. The serial now has been condensed into a feature length film called "Men with Steel Faces."

Since 1935 Gene Autry has become the number one cowboy of the film world under the Republic banner and Frankie Darro has risen in stature under the Monogram emblem, two facts which probably figured in the decision to reissue the serial in feature form.

In the familiar landscape of the western, Autry and Darro and the others are concerned with running a ranch, from which Autry broadcasts a radio program each day. Into this scene comes a group of "scientists" looking for the underground empire of "Moravia." The "Moravians" by television watch everything happening on earth, or at least in the immediate vicinity of their empire. The "Moravians" wear oxygen helmets when on earth and remind one of several of the adventure cartoons.

Autry and Darro and young Betsy King Ross manage to get themselves arrayed against both the "Moravians" and the scientists. Smiley Burnette was with Autry then, a less corpulent Burnette perhaps, but otherwise the same Burnette you know today.

Saps at Sea

(United Artists - Roach)

Slapstick Comedy

Reminiscent of the Mack Sennett form of slapstick comedy, the latest Laurel and Hardy endeavor resorts to exploding gas stoves, gas burning electric light sockets, refrigerators that play music, and ice producing radios. Spiced throughout with gags, both old and new, this type of comedy is sti mirth-provoking for the audience who appreciates it, and judging from the reaction of an early afternoon congregation in a Broadway theatre, those who enjoyed it were in the majority.

Directed by Gordon Douglas and with an original story and screen play by Charles Rogers, Felix Adler, Gil Pratt and the one-time famous comedian of the silent screen, Harry Langdon, the picture is typical of many of the Laurel and Hardy predecessors.

Ollie, while working in a horn factory, goes berserk from the constant tooting. He is advised by his doctor to take a sea voyage. After many adventures preparing for the trip Stan and Ollie compromise by hiring a boat and leaving it tied to the dock, only to be shanghaied by an escaped murderer. On the high seas the boys finally are rescued and the murderer captured. But Stan and Ollie end up in jail anyway.

The comedy team is supported by two additional comedians of the silent screen era, Ben Turpin and James Finlayson.

spirit of the American people is captured in the beauty of the film. "The Flag Speaks" was made by MGM following a suggestion of the American Legion to the Motion Picture Producers Association that a short be produced to teach the meaning of the Flag and its proper use. Emphasized is the unity of the nation, despite the great diversity of race, language and religion. The history of the Flag begins at Fort Stanwyx where, according to tradition, the first Stars and Stripes was unfurled in 1777. Subsequent trials and struggles of the Flag and the principles for which it stands are portrayed. The picture was directed by David Miller from a script by Robert Lees and Frederic Rinaldo. The narration was skillfully handled by John Nesbitt.—Release date, June 14, Flag Day. Running time, 19 minutes.

FitzPatrick Traveltalk

Continuing the All-American series of Traveltalks in color, James A. FitzPatrick presents a pictorial discussion of the city of Colombia. Here the audience sees the industries, traditions and policy of one of the more progressive nations of South America. The city of Cartagena is pictured, and Fort San Felipo, founded by the Spaniards more than four centuries ago and for 120 years the victim of much bloodshed until freed from its reign of terror in 1821 by Simon Bolivar.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Professional Racqueteers

Tennis got out of its swaddling clothes, or at least as the game is played today, with the arrival of Maurice McLoughlin. Following shortly on the "comet's" heels came "Big" Bill Tilden, who was to dominate the tennis firmament for man years. Now in his forties and a professional, "Big" Bill is still one of the world's best players and a magnificent stylist. Here "Big" Bill, Vincent Richards, Karel Kozeluh, George Lott, Bruce Barnes and Ed and Bill Kenney demonstrate fundamentals. While the film makers have not realized to the full here the inherent possibilities of a camera study of shot-making, court covering and tactics the subject is an interesting one for tennis fans and they are legion.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Interesting, as Usual

There is a bit of the newest scientific miracle here to interest any general audience. For the ladies there is an inspection of a one-room home, outfitted with all the newest conveniences. For the air minded, a visit is made to Langley Field in Virginia and the Government tests of sky ships. Professor Oakes, the screwloose inventor, pops in with a profanity-proof golf ball. A final sequence is devoted to the use of a dummy rubber head in the education of young dentists.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Establish Five Regional Centers For School Films

The establishment of five regional centers to facilitate nationwide distribution of Human Relations films, which use excerpts from Hollywood motion pictures to illustrate real life problems facing young Americans, was announced this week by the Progressive Education Association's Commission on Human Relations, 45 Rockefeller Plaza, New York.

The distribution points will be the commission's office in New York, the Extension Division of the University of Atlanta, the Division of Teaching Aids of the University of Boston, the College Film Center in Chicago, and the Extension Division of the University of California.

Dr. Alice V. Keliher, director of the commission, said that the visual education idea is making headway in classrooms and discussion groups throughout the country. Since a series of pictures was made available for general use at the beginning of the school semester last Fall, 145 schools and other organizations have taken up this method of education.

The commission also announced a new one day service in addition to the one-week, two-week and longer rental terms. Study materials will be sent out with or in advance of the films, so that teachers may be prepared to handle the contents and to lead discussions.

The Human Relations Films were prepared by the commission under a Rockefeller Foundation grant, with the cooperation of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Dr. Keliher and her associates selected 60 excerpts from 41 feature pictures of recent years.

The pictures are being used in high schools, grammar school classes above the sixth grade, universities and university extension courses, private, parochial and special schools. Young Women's Christian Associations, Young Men's Christian Associations, churches and other groups. The latest development is experimental use of the pictures in half a dozen Civilian Conservation Corps camps in the south.

Many of the problems presented in the film dramas have a strong bearing on the lives of those who see and discuss them. An excerpt from the "Jones Family" series presents the argument between "Jones," who wants his boy to be a druggist, and the boy, who wants to be an aviator. Another clipping gives one of "Andy Hardy's" heart-to-heart talks with his father. The dilemma of a girl who hasn't enough money to dress well is shown in the excerpts from "Alice Adams." Two selections from "Captains Courageous" delineate father and son relationships between pupils and teachers. A "Dead End" excerpt shows pitfalls threatening boys in a poor neighborhood.

The Human Relations films are shaped to provoke discussion. For this reason, study groups are kept small to permit a free interchange of opinion. An interesting by-product of this sort of study is that students go to the motion picture theatre with a more intelligent attitude, Dr. Keliher says.

Arkansas ITO Reelects O. G. Wren President

The Annual convention of the Arkansas Independent Theatre Owners Association was held last Sunday and Monday at the Marion Hotel in Little Rock, Ark., and more than 100 members were in attendance.

All officers of the Association were reelected. They are: O. G. Wren, Little Rock, president; K. K. King, Searcy, secretary, and W. E. Malin, Augusta, vice-president. Lawrence Landers, Batesville; C. C. Mundo, Little Rock, and H. E. Ruh, Berryville, were added to the board of directors.

Talks were made by J. F. Norman, Little Rock, and G. Z. X. Carey, Paris, Ark.

The board of directors of the Pacific Coast ITO held meetings in both Portland and Seattle to concentrate on plans to improve spring and summer business. In both Oregon and Washington, practically all the independents now are reported to be members of the Association.

Columbia Changes Film Title

Columbia has changed the title of its Vivien Leigh-Laurence Olivier picture, "Three Weeks Together," to "21 Days Together," as a result of its title dispute with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. MGM owns the rights to the Elinor Glynn novel title, "Three Weeks." The title registration committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America ruled in favor of Columbia but MGM took an appeal to the MPPDA board, whereupon Columbia made the change of title. The film was produced in England under the title "21 Days."

Company Baseball Starting

The Motion Picture Baseball League opens its season April 29th with a game between Consolidated Film Industries and Paramount. Others in the league are Skouras Theatres, Rockefeller Center, National Broadcasting Company, RKO and Universal. Harry Marcus of Republic is president of the league, and I. A. Goldberg of Loew's is secretary and publicity manager.

Artists Take Office

James J. Walker, former Mayor of New York, has taken space in the International Building, Rockefeller Center, for the headquarters of the National Association of Performing Artists, of which he is president. The organization is designed to protect artists from unauthorized use of recordings.

Set Harrison Dinner

A testimonial dinner will be given Tippy Harrison next Thursday at the Congress Hotel, Chicago. Mr. Harrison, a member of the board of directors of Allied Theatres of Illinois and associated with the Goodman-Harrison Theatres for many years, is retiring from theatre business to enter another business. Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, is in charge of the affair.

Altec Promotions

E. C. Shriver, formerly branch manager for the Altec Company in Cincinnati, has been appointed district manager of Altec's western district, with headquarters in Los Angeles.

H. W. Dodge, former western district manager, has been promoted to Altec staff representative on the West Coast.

Bonwick Succeeds Loach at Pathe

Monogram added a vice-president and Pathe Film Corporation a vice-president and treasurer, on Wednesday, in New York, as Thomas P. Loach, former vice-president and treasurer of Pathe, stepped into vice-presidency of Monogram; and as George J. Bonwick, formerly of the Wall Street firm of Young and Company, succeeded Mr. Loach at Pathe.

Mr. Loach enters Monogram as a representative of Pathe, whose investment in the independent picture company is somewhat under $100,000.

Mr. Bonwick was elected to his Pathe posts on Tuesday. The appointment became effective on Wednesday.

Mr. Bonwick's election occurred at the Pathe annual directors' meeting. Reelected were Kenneth Young, as president; M. M. Malone, as secretary.

There was a stockholders' meeting, also. The eight directors of the company were reelected by 70 per cent of the outstanding stock. These directors are Kenneth Young, Robert R. Young, T. I. Davis, Henry Guild, Charles A. Stone, Robert McKinney, Louis Phillips, and Allan P. Kirby.

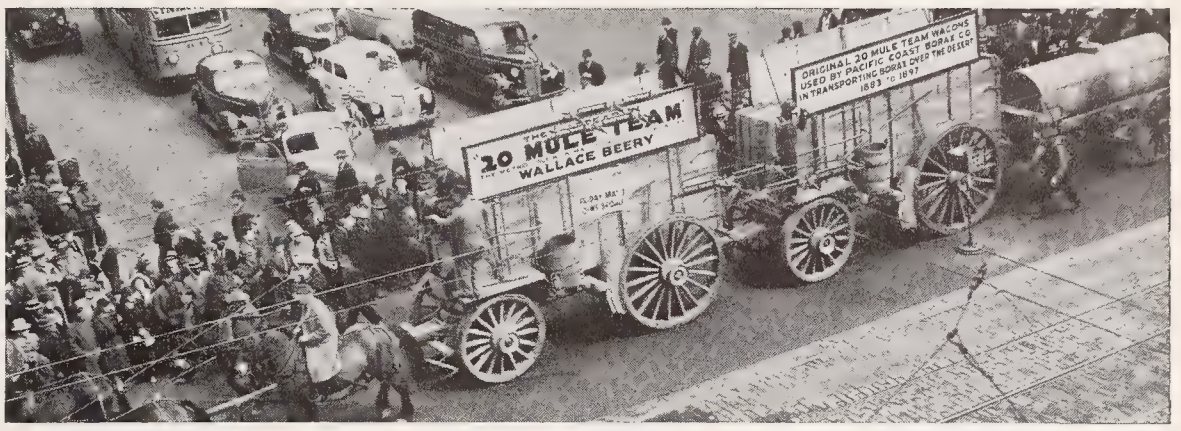
Eastman Photo Collection Opens in N. Y. Museum

Illustrating the growth of photography in its approximately 100 years' existence, the Eastman Historical collection will be previewed to an invited audience next Monday evening, at the New York Museum of Science and Industry, RCA Building, Rockefeller Center, New York, and will be opened to the public the next day.

Dr. Walter Clark will speak, at the preview, on the collection, which consists, not only of Eastman properties, but of the Cromer Collection, of Paris.

In the collection are some of the devices used by Niepce, Daguerre and others of the early days of photography. There are wet collodion outfits, 19th Century candid pictures; modern miniature cameras; displays showing the development of modern materials and techniques.

Radio Commentators To Speak at AMPA



Seventeen members of the National Radio Film Commentators Circle, all affiliated with radio stations in Greater New York, will be guests of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at luncheon next Thursday, Leon Bamberger, AMPA president, has announced.

David Lowe, president of the National Radio Film Commentators, will preside for the commentators and in addition to his ownd remarks will introduce four other speakers from his organization.

Reorganization Deadline

The creditors of Majestic Radio & Television Corporation were given until May 31st to file objections to the confirmation of the reorganization plan which was approved Tuesday in Chicago by Federal Judge John P. Barnes. Minority creditors, some stockholders and counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Radio Corporation of America objected to the plan which gives control of the company to DuMont Laboratories, Inc., Paramount television affiliate.

"20-Mule Team" Promotes for Both Metro Picture and Borax

The Metro-Borax Twenty Mule Team Caravan moves north in High Street, off Broad, in Columbus, Ohio, following a two-hour exhibition in front of Ohio's Capitol Building. Mayor Green is astride the wheel horse and Lieutenant Governor Paul Herbert is seated on the wagon—as the Caravan rides east again, from Hollywood, making stopovers at principal points en route to New York where it is to arrive May 23rd—for Borax and Metro.

What is said to be the largest exploitation advertising tieup ever effected for a commercial product with a single motion picture has been consummated between Pacific Coast Borax Company, makers of 20-Mule Team Borax and borax derivatives, and MGM for its borax picture, "20-Mule Team," starring Wallace Beery. (Showman's Review appears on page 41.)

The picture, its story laid in 1892, tells of the then infant industry of borax mining, the difficulties in transporting the crystalline deposits to the railroad and the rigors of Death Valley, locale long associated with Pacific Coast Company.

One of the oldest trade-marks in the United States is 20-Mule Team, adopted by the Borax company about 1878, six years after its organization. Its products go into 95.8 per cent of America's grocery stores, one other product, Fleischman's Yeast, being the only one to top it.

Company's Equipment Used

Some time ago the Pacific Coast firm had a nebulous plan to make a commercial film to be shown in the manner advertising films are shown, but was abandoned. In discussing the tieup on the MGM film, J. M. Gertsley, assistant general manager of the comporation, said Monday in Los Angeles: "Our company had nothing to do with the making of the MGM film nor have we had a voice in any part of it. We lent them our equipment and our mules."

On location in Death Valley, the MGM company used Pacific Coast Borax company's equipment, rebuilt a portion of the buildings and had the use of the company's mule caravan. However, principal workings of the borax company at present are on the other side of the Mojave Desert at Kramer, the Death Valley deposits having petered out except for certain types of borax bearing ore which is mined occasionally.

Features of the Borax tieup, made for Metro by Frank Whitbeck, advertising manager, and for the Borax company by McCann-Erickson (advertising) Agency, include a cross-country tour of a 20-Mule Team (see cut above) drawing two of the original wagons during which some 5,000,000 booklets telling of the picture and the Borax products are being distributed, cooperative advertising in which local newspapers and national publications are being utilized, display of placards by some 70,000 drug and grocery stores, renting of 25,000 billboards of 24-sheet size, and plugging of the film on the Borax company's NBC transcontinental radio program, "Death Valley Days."

To Be Exhibited at Fair

The mules and the wagons being used on the trek east—this week they were in Detroit—belong to the Borax firm. When the team reaches New York May 23rd, the wagons will be placed with appropriate ceremonies in the New York World's Fair Museum of Transportation. Once before the Borax company used the mule caravan to advertise its product, that being in 1919-20 when a similar cross-country trip was made.

Mr. Whitbeck, long in exploitation, said Monday at Culver City that, in his memory, this was the largest single tieup ever made. In addition, theatres are displaying a 10-foot-long 20-Mule Caravan with the wagons, all made of Borax crystals, as well as various Borax products. Such displays are already installed in the lobbies of Grauman's Chinese United States, Fox's Wilshire and Loew's State Theatres, all Fox West Coast Theatres in Los Angeles. At the picture's preview, last Friday, at the Westwood Village (F. W. C.), Los Angeles, a similar display was exhibited. In addition to various types of Borax crystals, other products such as Boraxo and boric acid were shown. The NBC air program of the Borax company has been on the air for the last seven years. It consists of a 15-minute narration of a story dealing with early Death Valley days.

The picture, which opened at Grauman's Chinese and Loew's State, Los Angeles, Wednesday, has a release date of May 3rd.

I Take This Oath

(Neufeld-Producers Releasing Corp.)

Melodrama

Based on an original story by William A. Ullman, Jr., "I Take This Oath" relates a tale of a boy who joins the police force in order to avenge the death of his father, a patrolman killed in the line of duty. The screen play is by George Bricker, who wrote "Buried Alive."

The cast includes Gordon Jones, in the principal role; Joyce Compton, Craig Reynolds, J. Farrell MacDonald and Robert Homans. Sigmund Neufeld produced and Sherman Scott directed. Scott handled "The Invisible Killer."

Release date: To be determined.

Island of Doomed Men

(Columbia)

Melodrama

An original screen play by Robert D. Andrews, "Island of Doomed Men" relates a tale of what is described as a "modern slave racket," the luring of paroled convicts into hard labor on an island in the Pacific.

As the head of the racket appears Peter Lorre, with Robert Wilcox cast as a secret service operative assigned to break up the gang. Feminine interest is provided by Rochelle Hudson.

Charles Barton directed. He was the director of "Five Little Peppers at Home."

Release date: May 16, 1940.

Doctors Don't Tell

(Republic)

Dust Bowl Doctor

Charles Coburn, Sigrid Gurie and John Wayne are principals, in a story which concerns a doctor and his daughter, German refugees.

The original screen play was written by Doris Anderson, F. Hugh Herbert and Joseph Moncure March. Miss Anderson last contributed dialogue to "Mickey, the Kid." Herbert wrote "That Certain Age," March, "Forgotten Girls."

Sol C. Siegel was associate producer, with Bernard Vorhaus directing. Vorhaus handled "Meet Dr. Christian."

Release date: To be determined.

Tom Brown's School Days

(RKO Radio)

Classic

The second of the Gene Towne-Graham Baker productions made for RKO Radio release, "Tom Brown's School Days," is based upon the book of the same name written by Thomas Hughes.

The public schools (which, like Rugby, correspond to American private schools) were in need of reform, and the firm depicts those reforms made at Rugby by Dr. Thomas Arnold, played by Sir Cedric Hardwicke. The title role is done by Jimmy Lydon. Also seen are Freddie Bartholomew, Josephine Hutchinson, Ernest Cossart and Billy Halop.

Gene Towne, Graham Baker and Walter Ferris wrote the screen play. Robert Stevenson directed.

Release date: June 14, 1940.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Rebellion

The equivalent, in Canadian history, of America's Continental Congress was re-enacted in Hollywood this week with the depiction of the Metis Legislature's session during the Riel Rebellion of 1885.

Led by a school teacher, Louis Riel, the French-Indian Metis Nation rebelled against the re-shaping of their Western Canadian territories, the story of that rebellion providing the subject of Cecil B. De Mille's forthcoming "North West Mounted Police," with the Legislature's meeting place, a trading post in what is now Upper Saskatchewan, currently recreated on a Paramount sound stage.

Taurog Topics

Recipient, this week, of an extended Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer directorial contract, Norman Taurog is working with Lionel Houser on Houser's original screen story, "Third Finger Left Hand," described as a "light romantic comedy."

Having recently directed "Broadway Melody of 1940," "Young Tom Edison" and Boys Town," Mr. Taurog hopes soon to do a sequel to "Boys Town," of which he "loved every minute." Now 41, and directing from the time he reached the age of 19, he has had 14 of his films appear as monthly box office champions in FAME, with one of them also a semi-annual champion and four annual champions.

Describing the story of "Third Finger Left Hand," in his memento-filled office, these recognitions from former assignments including a silver football from the crew of 1934's "College Rhythm"; a silver microphone and lantern, marking, respectively, the completion of "Big Broadcast of 1935" and "Young Tom Edison," Mr. Taurog says he "hopes to get the services of Gable and Loy" for his latest picture. The story concerns itself with a girl who's seen so many marriages end in divorce or annulment that, as a self-protective measure, she invents a husband, wears a conventional wedding ring, pretends to have married her fictitious mate in Paris. Complications come thick and fast with the appearance of a young man who falls in love with her, pretends to be the husband in the case. "No 'screwball' comedy, this," says the director, "but real comedy drama."

Starting in the entertainment field when he was 11 years old, Mr. Taurog appeared on the stage until the ripe age of 15, in "Good Little Devil," with Mary Pickford and Ernest Truex, and in "Broadway Jones" with George M. Cohan. Then followed two years in stock, with Lowell Sherman and Bunny Granville, after which came "kid parts" at the old IMP studios, on New York's 11th Avenue between 43d and 44th Streets.

First Hollywood experience, according to Mr. Taurog, was his trip made for LKO, symbol of Lehrman's Knock Outs, from which developed a job as prop man, then the director's assignment at the age of 19, earning him the title of the "Boy Director" of the class of '18.

STUDIOS FINISH NINE; START TWELVE

Finishing work on nine pictures, as was the case last week also, Hollywood's studios this week started 12, nine less than the week before; had 48 shooting, three more than in the prior period, and had 25 being prepared and 61 being edited, as against last week's 28 and 63 in the same categories.

Completed were "The Return of Wild Bill" and "Keep 'Im Alive," Columbia; "The Mortal Storm," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; "Riders from Nowhere," Monogram; "The Young People," Twentieth Century - Fox; "Hot Steel" and "You're Not So Tough," Universal, and "The Sea Hawk" and "All This and Heaven, Too," Warner Brothers.

Warners started work on "No Time for Comedy"; Hal Roach, for United Artists release, on "Captain Caution"; Republic on "Grand 'Ole Opry"; RKO Radio, "Dreaming Out Loud," and the third of the "Dr. Christian" series; Paramount, "Rangers of Fortune" and "Dancing on a Dime"; Monogram, "Wild Horse Range"; MGM, "Gold Rush Maisie" and "To Own the World," and Columbia, "West of Aboline" and the sixth of the "Blondie" series.

Both RKO and Twentieth-Fox had six films shooting, while MGM and Paramount each had five; Warners, four; Columbia, three; Republic, Universal and Walter Wanger, two apiece, and Edward Small, one.

Two short subjects were completed and three started.

Complete Franklin Film

Franklin-Blank Productions, Inc., Hollywood, of which Harold B. Franklin is head, has completed production of "The Villain Still Pursued Her," for RKO release. The film stars Hugh Herbert and Anita Louise and was directed by Edward Cline.

FINCH, FACSIMILE INVENTOR, SEES MEDIUM AS NEW AID TO PUBLICITY

Predicts Many Uses by Both Producer-Distributors and Theatres; Thirty Stations Licensed by Finch System

Facsimile, the radio transcription of words or photographs and their reception as recorded copy, is seen as a future medium for motion picture exploitation. Although the film companies as a whole are not furnishing material for television, two of the majors, Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are cooperating with facsimile. Both companies supplied for a time both printed copy and photos; now only photos are provided.

At the Federal Communications Commission FM hearing recently Judge Eugene O. Sykes, representing the Finch Telecommunications Inc., said that bands which are allotted to FM should be wide enough to accommodate facsimile as well as sound broadcasting. A special type of facsimile machine made by the International Business Machines Corporation was described at the hearing.

Popular, Says Inventor

W. G. H. Finch, inventor of the facsimile system that bears his name, explained that the photos of stars and scenes from current releases were very popular at the Finch Telecommunications exhibit at the New York World's Fair. People preferred pictures to printed copy and we used all the photos we could get. Motion picture stills are excellent for facsimile due to their superior photographic qualities."

Facsimile in the future will have many motion picture uses, Mr. Finch declared. Not only can publicity material be sent out by film companies but individual theatres may transmit word on their evening's program and other exploitation material. Another possible use of facsimile was cited by Mr. Finch: theatre circuits or company branch offices could be joined by facsimile units by which messages and photographs could be transmitted all over the country in a very few minutes. A teletype can print about 65 words a minute, while facsimile can take care of 150 words, he said.

30 Stations Licensed

Over 30 stations have been licensed to use the Finch facsimile system, including four powerful 50,000 watt stations and seven stations in Cuba. The Des Moines station sends out facsimile bulletins of interest to the farmer: weather reports, stock and market price information. The Finch station in New York City, W2XWF, is the first one to be licensed by the Federal Communications Commission to operate on frequency modulation. His other station, W2XBF, operates on AM. Under the frequency modulation system both facsimile and sound can be sent at the same time on the one wave length.

The Loew's, Inc., radio station, WHN, in New York, is allowing the Finch FM station to rebroadcast its regular programs.

Mr. Finch said that facsimile will have great uses in education. He hailed it as "the radio blackboard in the home" and cited the Chicago epidemic of a few years back when radio was used by the Board of Education to carry on home study as an instance when facsimile would have given much more efficient service as a medium of instruction.

As another advantage in his system, he said that any power supply, AC, DC or batteries are satisfactory. He has also taken out patents for color transmission by facsimile. In this system three separate copies in the primary colors are transmitted at once and joined in one colored picture at the receiving point.

Sees Limited License

The prophecy that "facsimile will receive a limited commercial license by the FCC this year" was expressed by Mr. Finch. His company will open a new factory soon.

Finch has developed a special mobile unit that has a weight of only 25 pounds and can both send and receive facsimile messages or drawings. This equipment has special application in police, aircraft, ship and in industrial use. In fact, according to Mr. Finch facsimile can improve any kind of an intercommunications system by furnishing a printed copy of the message sent. Of interest to theatres is a projector used in connection with a Finch receiver to throw the received words or pictures on to a screen. In the future this kind of equipment perhaps would have use in a theatre lobby to show the latest news bulletins.

The Radio Corporation of America did pioneer work in facsimile and has been conducting experimental work on facsimile broadcasting. At present some stations use the Finch system, some the RCA; only one, WOR, uses both systems for facsimile transmission. All the work is of an experimental nature. There are very few receiving sets in the whole country, probably not over 1,500, or about as many or just a few more than television sets.

The first experiments on transmitting pictures by wires began in 1842. From that developed the wire-photos which are taken as a matter of course in our daily newspapers. In 1924 the first radio photo was sent from New York to London and back to New York. Now radio-photos are common and frequently are almost as good as wire-photos. But it is quite a different problem to send facsimile into the home than to send it from one station to another. The machine for home facsimile would have to be very simple and free from need of constant attention. Printing words and pictures instantly in every home and office in the country is a theoretical possibility and may become a fact. If it does it would be a threat to newspapers and to other forms of communication and entertainment.

At NBC the RCA facsimile is considered superior to that developed by Finch. The systems are quite different, both in the manner of picking up the impulses for transmission by the scanner and in printing at the receiver. The RCA uses a stylus and both white and carbon paper; in the Finch system the reception of the facsimile image is on special sensitive paper. Engineers do not like too many prophecies but the opinion was expressed at NBC that perhaps in 10 years the radio would receive sound (broadcasting), sight (television) and printed matter (facsimile). If that combination ever is realized, it was said, there will be even more entertainment to keep folk at home than they have today—hence more competition to the theatre.

WOR Station Operates Daily

The recent activity in facsimile is attributed to a suggestion made by an FCC official at a radio convention several years ago that something be done about broadcast facsimile. Both Finch's followers and his competitors acknowledge that he energetically pushed the problem of broadcast facsimile. Mr. Finch said that he began work on facsimile around 1920. RCA has also been working on it for many years.

WOR is considered in the best position to know what's what on facsimile, since that is the only station using both systems. A special facsimile station is operated from 2:00 to 4:00 P. M. daily, using the Finch system and facsimile signals are sent out on the regular WOR transmitter three nights a week on the RCA system and two on the Finch system. The night broadcasts are from 2 A. M. to 4:30 A. M. Despite this use of facsimile, J. R. Popple, chief engineer of WOR, speaks of it as something of the future.

"Facsimile must be developed by amateurs just as radio was," according to Mr. Popple, who looks to the generation coming up from technical schools for the men with enthusiasm and skill to contribute the inventions that will make facsimile a general means of communication. "The engineers at present are preparing the way." Mr. Popple pointed out that while a radio system was basically simple, the receiver is really the reverse of the transmitter and is easily tuned in, there is a great synchronization problem facing facsimile. The human ear can bridge gaps in sound transmission but facsimile has to be exact and perfectly synchronized.

Cites Care Required

The present facsimile equipment is about 50% mechanical and 50% electronic and the moving mechanical parts require careful adjustment and expert attention. Mr. Popple commented on the fact that the average person is not mechanically inclined: "We are victims of convenience; victims of specialization and few people go outside their own field." The result is that equipment placed in homes must be virtually foolproof, he said. For facsimile to be generally acceptable, according to Mr. Popple, the mechanical part of the receiver must be cut down to 2% or 5% and the electronic increased to 95% or 98%. When it is possible to merely turn a few dials, like the radio, and get good facsimile reception, it will find public acceptance.

NIGHT BASEBALL TO START IN NEW YORK

Night baseball, which has become increasingly prevalent with each year throughout the country, will start in several New York cities this month. Albany, Elmira and Binghamton, all members of the Eastern League, will begin night games by the middle of the month.

Night baseball for Amsterdam and Gloversville is scheduled. In Gloversville, home of the Schine circuit, the move is to be financed by public subscription. Utica installed lights and drew heavily at night last year, while similar action is to be taken in Ogdensburg and Oneonta, also Schine circuit cities. In Rome, too, the move is contemplated. All of these cities belong to the Canadian-American League.

Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse of the International League will start night games late in the month.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

"BUGS" BAER donated a Spring Sunday to a visit to the Museum of Modern Art, one of our neighbors over here at Rockefeller Center, a film and art museum financed by John Hay (Jock) Whitney, of the Whitney millions and Selznick International Pictures, aided and abetted by one John Rockefeller, of RKO and some other interests, mostly moneyed.

Syndicate-columnist Baer emerged from the Museum with the impression that modern art is surrealism with a relapse, impressionism with a hangover and dadaism with malice aforethought, that it is non-objective in color, form and space, has no coherent diagnosis and is minus intellectual significance, sort of like making mud pies indoors without any moisture, the crystallization of spiritual exuberance for the concentrated purpose of climaxing all that is beautiful, that it is boondoggling and knick-knacking by subsidy.

By way of an afterthought, "Bugs" Baer found that modern art is all angles, parabolas with sprained arches, frozen chimeras and the Man on the Flying Trapezoid, twisted into irrevocable junk by the leverage of cubism, aggravated by futurism engineered by an idiot with more time than technique.

In one Museum room, Baer found two quoits, a homeless triangle and a three-cornered waffle representing the Spirit of Ajax defying Lightning Bugs, and in another a group of sofa springs, metallic pig's knuckles and gear shifts balanced on a busted axle. It looked like a coffee grinder built by a man who was trying to break himself of the habit. But it was called Moonlight on a Lagoon. Another collection of spasmodic celluloid, spangled with steel filings and interlaced with artistic odds and ends resembled nothing so much as a starving cannibal eating himself. Yet in the Modern Art catalogue it was classified as a Gypsy Lullaby.

In Paramount Sales News, editor Sam Palmer tells the story of how, following the late return of a short subject by a small Arkansas situation, Paramount's Memphis branch forwarded the exhibitor the usual form of inquiry to be filled in and returned. Under "Cause for Delay" the exhibitor stated: "Negro delivery man sick with pneumonia—now dead—new man overlooked."

Great sins are committed in the name of "entertainment." The World's Fair in New York has announced—a bit regretfully, too—that it was forced to turn down a proposal for a "Screamatorium" concession in the Amusement Area, consisting of sound-proof cubicles where fretful visitors would pay to enter and yell to their heart's content.

Describing the idea as a "scream-lined safety valve," the author suggested that "it is a project based upon sound psychological laws, and its effect will be soothing and relaxing rather than superficially disturbing." For an extra nickel, customers would be permitted to smash a few glasses and light bulbs.

The Young Men's Christian Association in Detroit is starting a discussion series on "Love in the Movies." The announcement discloses that "We hope to use this as a new approach to the age-old custom of falling in love, marrying, and living happily ever after—using the latest movie versions of romance and family life as a basis for discussions, pro and con."

The smooth and legalistic brains of Hollywood have run head-on against the immemorial wisdom of the Tennessee hills. Out of California came one of those authentic Big Ideas, to produce a motion picture entitled "The Life of Sergeant York," with York's assistance and approval. Alvin C. York, the great World War hero, was agreeable. But when the motion-picture company's lawyer pulled forth a typical Hollywood contract—a wondrous document—Mr. York was confused by the maze of circumlocutions, clauses and whereases. It might be all right, he opined, but it was "not for him," so he handed it to his own lawyer, who explained: "What we want is a plain old Tennessee contract that simply says what you shall do and what the sergeant shall do."

It is probable that a contract finally will be drawn that is mutually agreeable, but it will be something that York can understand. He's an old hand at mule trading up in those hills.

Just how far motion picture employes may go in interfering with patrons was an issue in a $5,000 damage suit heard in the Circuit Court in St. Louis the other day.

Ervan Craft, plaintiff, filed the suit against the Senate Theatre, downtown second-run house. He said he suffered nervousness, humiliation and embarrassment when he was asked to leave the theatre with his wife and 12-year-old because the boy was eating peanuts. He testified an usher warned him twice to keep the lad from eating peanuts and finally ordered the three to leave. Craft said he and his family left, but failed to obtain a refund from the box office. He said the boy only ate 10 peanuts and placed the shells in the bag. Judge James McLaughlin dismissed the case before it reached the jury, but one of the jurors told a reporter he thought Craft was entitled to a ticket refund of 40 cents.

War has struck at New York's Motion Picture Pioneers, club composed of men who have been in motion pictures in the USA 25 years or longer.

Last February, Ernest A. Rovelstad, managing editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, received a letter from Ingvald O. Oes, of Charlottenlund in Denmark. Having been identified with motion pictures since 1908, the first eight years of his 32 in films in New York, for Nordisk Film Company, Mr. Oes claimed eligibility to membership in the Pioneers. His letter was turned over to Columbia Pictures' Jack Cohn, but did not get to the attention of the club's executive committee for several weeks, when it was unanimously decided that Oes was qualified and an application was sent to him. That was about April 1st, but around that time Hitler was stricken with another attack of itchy-footie, an ailment which can be cured only by marching. So he marched into Denmark forthwith, apparently eliminating Oes' chances of becoming the first international member of the Picture Pioneers, for he hasn't been heard from since.

The Tailwaggers is an organization composed of dog owners and dog lovers. Many hundreds of motion picture Hollywoodites are members, annual membership, $10, up to founder membership, $500, with many varying degrees in between. Income is turned over to "seeing eye" institutions, where blind persons get trained guide dogs. A blind person stays at the institution four weeks, becoming accustomed to the dog, and the dog to his new master. Hollywood's Hugh Herbert is president of the Tailwaggers. Thomasville, Ala., which recently celebrated its maturity by installing its first traffic light, claims a solution to all traffic problems.

"If pedestrians and motorists won't stop and go and obey the usual red and green signals, we know how to make them do it," Mayor V. C. Wilkinson said.

"We will use movie stars."

And so the Mayor obtained translucent pictures of Ann Sheridan and Humphrey Bogart.

The picture of Miss Sheridan adorns the green light.

"Why, anybody'd go for her," Mayor Wilkinson said.

Bogart, known for his many villain roles, has his picture on the red light.

"It's obvious," the Mayor added, "If I saw Humphrey Bogart coming at me, I'd stop!"

Asked if he might use other pictures when his city needs more lights, Mayor Wilkinson said:

"Well, sir, we have a few dangerous curves just outside of town. Think we should use pictures of Lana Turner—or Dorothy Lamour?"

OPENINGS FOR 'RUSSELL', 'EDISON', 'FAVORITE WIFE'

Irene Dunne at Louisville Premiere; "Lillian Russell" in Two Cities, "Edison" in Four

The large companies went ahead this week with additional "big" picture premieres in key cities. RKO's "My Favorite Wife," reviewed in this issue, was opened in Louisville, on Thursday; Twentieth Century-Fox's "Lillian Russell" will open in Pittsburgh and in Clinton, Iowa, on May 15th; and MGM's "Edison, the Man," will open in the Oranges, New Jersey, on May 16th, all three getting special exploitation attention.

Irene Dunne at Louisville Opening

For Louisville's "first full-fledged Hollywood premiere" on Thursday evening, at the Rialto theatre, Irene Dunne, a native of that city and star of the picture, was to fly from Hollywood on a chartered airliner, accompanied by Leo McCarey, producer; Garson Kanin, director; Gene Fowler, author; Hal Roach, and others.

Participation by Miss Dunne in a Stephen Foster Memorial Celebration at Bardstown, Kentucky, on Friday; attendance by her at the Derby, in Louisville, on Saturday, and her "reign" as Belle of the Derby Ball, in the same city, that night, all were on the program.

Miss Dunne, interviewed in, and over, the air, on Thursday, by Louisville and Nashville newspapermen, was to be greeted at the airfield by the Kentucky Governor, Keen Johnson; the city's director of safety, Sam McMeekin; 50 clubwomen; the massed bands of six high schools; the student body of Loretta Academy, which she attended; an honor guard of national guardsmen, and a welcoming committee of "Kentucky Colonels." She was to be welcomed at the city hall by Mayor Joseph D. Scholtz; to appear at the theatre; at a dinner that night; at a dozen parties during the three-day stay; she was to sing "My Old Kentucky Home" at the memorial celebration on Friday, and at the Churchill Downs race track, on Saturday.

The RKO delegation from New York included George J. Schaefer, president of RKO; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales; S. Barret McCormick, in charge of advertising and publicity; and Samuel and Bella Spewack, co-authors of the story.

"Russell" in Pittsburgh, Clinton

Twentieth Century-Fox's "Lillian Russell," starring Alice Faye, will open at four theatres, in two cities, on May 15th: at the Alvin and Senator, in Pittsburgh; and at the Capitol and Palace, in Clinton, Iowa. Each premiere will feature local celebrations. Miss Russell, whose life the film relates, was born in Clinton and lived many years in Pittsburgh.

At Clinton, there will be a three-day celebration. Governor George A. Wilson and other state officials are expected to attend. There will be civic luncheons, a parade, a ball at the local Auditorium; a "most beautiful blonde" contest; and other events—all arranged by a staff of exploiteers headed by Earl Wingart of the Twentieth Century-Fox New York office, and by Lionel Wasson, of the Central States circuit, which operates the theatres. The picture will continue at the Capitol, for one week. Fox studio players in Clinton will be headed by Don Ameche, Lynn Bari, and Cesar Romero. Mid-western correspondents will be guests.

At the Clinton and Pittsburgh theatres, at the opening, there will be a $1.10 reserved seat policy.

The Pittsburgh premiere and two-day celebration will be arranged by Rodney Bush and C. W. Wilbert of the Fox home office. There will be a party in the local Variety Club; a dinner; Alice Faye and Edward Arnold, of the studio, will be present; there will be other events. The Harris circuit operates the two Pittsburgh houses.

"Edison, the Man"

Coincident with the opening of MGM's "Edison, the Man" on May 16th at four theatres in the Oranges, in New Jersey, five of those communities, East, West, and South Orange, Orange, and Maplewood, commonly regarded as the inventor's "home town" communities, will hold a "Pageant of Progress" from May 14th to 16th.

The picture will be shown at 9:00 P.M., for the one night only, at the Hollywood, East Orange; the Palace, Orange; the Windsor, West Orange; and the Cameo, South Orange.

There will be an "Edison premiere ball" at the Orange Armory, on the evening of May 15th; picture stars, local notables, other friends of the late inventor are expected. There will be a parade on the afternoon of May 16th, through the streets of the four Oranges.

"Those Were the Days"

Paramount's "Those Were the Days" is to open at Galesburg, Illinois, on May 21st, in connection with a talent-beauty contest.

The company's "All-American College Queen Beauty Contest" ended on Thursday, 48 preliminary winners having been selected. Readers of the Movie and Radio Guide, a weekly national fan magazine, are to select 12 finalists, from among these. These finalists will be Paramount's guests of honor at the premiere. That night, J. Theodore Reed, director of the picture, will crown one girl as "All-American College Queen." She will go to Hollywood for a studio tour, entertainment and screen test.

No Opera for Deanna

Universal Pictures Tuesday issued the following statement: "Recent reports to the effect that Deanna Durbin has signed a contract to sing for the Metropolitan Opera Company are completely unfounded. Neither Miss Durbin nor any of her representatives have been approached or consulted by any representatives of the Metropolitan Opera Company concerning this rumored proposal. Miss Durbin is under exclusive contract to Universal Studios."

Rockefellers Back New Negro Film, First of Series

Aimed toward the approximately 400 Negro film theatres in the country and possibly the other 15,000 film houses, and toward the thousands of educational and other non-theatrical forums of America, a two-reel film on Negro problems and achievements, the first commercial and theatrical production of two organizations, the American Film Center and the Film Associates, of New York, is underway, with production expected to begin the third week in May. It will begin a series, and will be Rockefeller-financed.

Film Associates, a new producing company, with its plans set towards educational and documentary films, will produce the picture, its first since formation several months ago, Felix Greene, its head, and Henwar Rodakiewicz, a board member, were this week in the South, preparing the film's script and visiting Southern Negro educational institutions. Theodore Lawrence, another partner in the firm, is in New York, on the technical phases. Negotiations are being conducted for a camera crew and production location.

Film Associates is making the picture at the behest of the American Film Center, of New York, an organization partially financed by the Rockefeller Foundation, and the purpose of which is to promote the production and use of films "of educational value."

The Center received, for this picture, a grant from the General Education Board, New York, a Rockefeller unit, which in turn was interested in such a film by a Chicago Negro newspaper.

Film Associates, in the present plan, is to make the picture and deliver the negative and one print to the Center, which will arrange distribution—distribution which will be "theatrical, we hope, as well as non-theatrical," according to Donald Slesinger, director of the Center.

Pictures made with its "cooperation" up to now have been non-theatrical. There have been nine films made by the United States Department of Agriculture; one for the University of Chicago; two for the Children's Aid Society, of New York; another for the Progressive Education Association.

Film Associates, for whom the coming Negro film is the first, theatrical or non-theatrical, comprises, apart from Messrs. Rodakiewicz, Green, and Lawrence, Irving Reis, Gerald Heard, and the British author, Aldous Huxley. The three last-named are on the coast. All are equal partners.

A committee of prominent educators and writers in the field, is supporting the Negro films project. They comprise: Charles S. Johnson, director of the Department of Social Science, Fisk University, Nashville; Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, Atlanta; F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskeegee, Alabama; Claude A. Barnett, the Associated Negro Press, Chicago; Arthur D. Wright, president of the Southern Education Foundation, Washington D. C.; and Channing H. Tobias, of the Y.M.C.A., the chairman.

U. S. DISTRIBUTORS AGREE TO NEW MONETARY FILM QUOTA IN BRITAIN

Each American Company to Acquire One British Feature for Each 100,000 Feet of Features Imported

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Parliament is expected shortly to receive and act upon the proposals for a monetary film quota worked out by the Board of Trade and approved last weekend by American distributor representatives in London. The new arrangement will be effective as of April 1st last and will be an alternative to the present footage basis quota, running concurrently with it.

Under the new plan, details of which were announced by Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the Board of Trade, each American company will have to acquire one full length British feature for every 100,000 feet of feature films imported, with labor costs equaling three pounds per foot on the British film, also fulfilling other provisions required under the present Films Act.

Additionally the American distributors must invest a pound total equaling 29 per cent of their imported feature footage. As an example, importation of 400,000 feet of features would necessitate an expenditure of £116,000 ($406,000) by the importer. This money could be allocated on four or five pictures, instead of the larger number previously necessary to meet quota requirements.

The distributors can elect whether to continue under the provisions of the present Act or proceed under the new requirements at the beginning of the next quota period.

Following the lead of the Government, British exhibitors, facing the problem of wartime survival, have virtually translated themselves into a Ministry of Economic Warfare.

Such a conviction provoked the campaign for reduction of film hire, and more vital probably is the battle for an adjustment of the theatre tax.

Conditions of trading have changed considerably since 1918. Revenue has decreased and costs have increased. Exhibitors say film hire has gone up, and that working expenses of British picture houses have risen £2,250,000 ($7,875,000) in a year, with employees demanding wage increases which would amount to £1,500,000 ($5,250,000) per annum, the while they are debarred by economic circumstance from altering their prices.

Appeals have been made directly to the Chancellor that he not only permit raising the sixpenny seat to sevenpence without imposition of the present tax of three-halfpence, but that he also reduce the tax on seats over and above that sevenpence to a starting level of one penny.

Because of the taxation at present, to get an extra halfpenny for himself the exhibitor would have to increase his price to the public by twopence.

The war has reduced theatre revenue by at least 10 percent. Three prime causes found by the CEA have been the compulsory closing in the War's early stages, the blackout, coupled with transport cuts and petrol rationing, and evacuation.

The Government's own financial policy too comes in for CEA criticism, not so much on ethical as on practical grounds. Severe control of inflation, if it continues successfully, must leave the prospect of diminishing receipts.

The estimate of higher overhead amounting to £2,250,000 ($7,875,000) annually brings with it increased costs as follows:

	Percentage
Film transport	15
Carbons	10
Lighting, heating and fuel (including coal, coke, electricity, oil, etc.)	33⅓
Electrical sundry supplies and repairs	12½
Projector parts	15
Stationery, paper and printing	25
Cleaning materials	15
Torches and batteries	15
General publicity	10
Theatre tickets	10
Uniforms	10
Repairs and maintenance (other than electrical)	10
Seats and seat parts, carpets, linoleum and draperies	25
Active service payments and wage increases	15

Meeting the requirements of ARP (Air Raid Precautions) means a minimum expenditure of £40 ($140) per annum. Exhibitors have been finally ordered by the Home Office to make these protective arrangements for their staffs: to set off a special room in the basement or ground floor, to allow six feet for each person, to arrange alternative exits, ensure six inches of concrete overhead, fortified by corrugated iron sheeting and joists.

Until the tax is adjusted British exhibitors are not officially agreeing to the 15 per cent war bonus demands of their employees' union.

Whatever the reaction to the theatre tax adjustment plea, Sir John Simon is unlikely to tread on the corns of the Minister of Labor by tackling something which does not concern him.

Howl over "Wind" in Britain Drowns War News in Commons

"Gone with the Wind" reverberated through the British industry this week, discussions and protests on the rental terms and requirements for advanced admissions finally reaching the House of Commons, where they overshadowed, for a few hours, news of the war, according to a cable to the New York Times on Wednesday. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced that an exhibition contract had been signed with John Maxwell's Associated British Theatres for a selected number of key houses, but two other circuits, Gaumont British and Odeon, announced they had no intention of showing the picture at their 700 houses unless the rental was reduced.

Meanwhile Major Sir Jocelyn Lucas rose in Commons and asked why, in view of the efforts to conserve dollar exchange, film rentals should not be reduced. Neil MacLean, opposition Laborite, continued the discussion with a demand that the Government "investigate the manner in which American companies are abusing their powers." Major Lloyd George, Parliamentary secretary for the Board of Trade, replied he understood the rental of 70 per cent for "Gone with the Wind" was not higher than the fee charged American exhibitors for the same film. He pointed out that the Films Act does not give the Board of Trade power to regulate rentals.

Mr. MacLean concluded his protest with the prediction that when the war ends film theatres in Britain will be in the hands of American producers.

Sam Eckman, MGM British managing director, emphasized in an announcement to the press that the guarantee of a minimum profit of 10 per cent to any exhibitor showing the picture is made in England as in the United States. Admission price requirements for the picture in England are a minimum of 70 cents in the afternoon and 90 cents evenings.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association challenged MGM on the Associated British deal and "Wind" sales in general in a second manifesto in its war on rentals, issued Wednesday. The Association insisted that "no one" had paid the 70 per cent terms for the picture. The statement concentrated especially on the Metro guarantee of 10 per cent profit, charging that the offer of the guarantee conditioned upon examination of the exhibitor's books was aimed at a survey of British exhibition "prior to its acquisition by Americans."

Currency Control Body Asked

The Board of Trade in London has requested British distributors handling such product as Universal, Republic and Monogram to form their own control body to administer the currency agreement in effect between the Government and American film companies.

The principal objective is to provide a check on remittances to American companies which do not maintain their own distribution organizations here. It is believed probable that the Kinematograph Renters Society will function for the distributors to whom the Government's request applies.

The same currency regulations agreed upon with the other American distributors apply to British distributors handling American product. Half of their three-year average revenue must remain frozen here.

QUEBEC PROMISES END OF BAN ON CHILDREN

Michael Powell To Produce in Canada; Famous Players Enlarging Maritime Holdings

by R. J. O'LEARY
in Montreal

The end of Quebec's 12-year-old law prohibiting children under 16 years of age from attending theatres is at last in sight to exhibitors of that province. Premier Adelard Godbout this week announced that children will be permitted to attend approved motion picture shows without the necessity of special concession by the Quebec attorney general as a result of legislation which will be introduced in the Quebec Legislature this session.

"The motion picture is a powerful educational influence," the Premier explained, "provided it is properly used. And education should start with children. Naturally, this opens up a problem that must be approached with care. It must be carefully supervised, in order that only suitable matter is placed before children.

"The Government intends to bring in legislation to create a special board of censors for children's films. This board will be presided over by the chairman of the present Board of Censors and its members will include representatives of the Protestant and Catholic clergy."

Plan Ambitious Film

Michael Powell, of London, England, producer, director and author, has announced that the "biggest and most ambitious" British film to be produced this year will be made in Canada in summer. Mr. Powell will produce and direct the film from a story now being written by Emeric Pressburger, who wrote the screen play for "U-Boat 29." They and other members of the advance guard of the production, including Rolland Gillett, associate producer; Alfred Seabourne, film editor, and William Paton, personal assistant to Mr. Powell, have conferred with Government officials. They plan to visit Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria.

More Maritime Theatres Planned

by VICTOR SERVICE
in St. John, N. B.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation is enlarging its theatre operations in the maritime provinces. With the Vogue, Sydney, N. S., completed and functioning as a sister house of the Capitol, the circuit is now expanding in Moncton, N. B. Famous Players entered Moncton several years ago, acquiring the two Torrie & Winter theatres, Capitol and Empress. Now, arrangements have been made for the construction of a new theatre, to seat between 1,000 and 1,200. Fred W. Winter, who had been a partner of A. R. Torrie, has continued with the Capitol and Empress and will also be local manager of the new house, with a financial interest.

Famous Players added the operation of the Orpheus and Oxford in Halifax, N. S., last year. They had already built the Capitol and taken over the Casino in Halifax. The circuit's first house in the maritimes was the Capitol, St. John, renamed from the Imperial, and acquired from RKO. With 10 units Famous Players is the second largest circuit in the maritimes. F. G. Spencer, of St. John, has 19 houses, either leased or owned, and Franklin & Herschorn, St. John and Halifax, has seven houses.

R. C. Roddick, manager of the Capitol, Halifax, recently has been given general supervision over Famous Players theatres in the martime provinces. Mr. Roddick is making a tour of Nova Scotia delivering addresses on the film industry as an ambassador of good will.

The women employees in the film exchanges of St. John, N. B., have formed the Film Girls' Patriotic Club. All the dozen exchanges of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, eastern Quebec province, and the island colony of Newfoundland, are represented in the new organization. Alice Fairweather, secretary of the Maritime Film Trade Board, St. John, is president.

Vancouver Business Increase Noted

by E. S. ROBERTS
in Vancouver, B. C.

In response to improved trend of business, the Capitol theatre at Vancouver has installed a new neon and incandescent vertical sign, 40 feet in height, and is completing installation of a new air conditioning system. Weekly stage features have caught on here. The Orpheum has been playing dance bands and special stage attractions Friday matinee and evening performances for some time. Ivan Ackery, manager, staged a table tennis tournament as his latest attraction.

At the Capitol "Stump the X-Perts" has been packing them in on Thursday evenings. Stu Keate, critic of the Vancouver Providence, handles questions submitted by patrons. Local celebrities are selected to answer the questions.

Vested Estates, business property owners, will start construction of a new 1,200 seat downtown theatre about June 1st. It will cost $75,000 and will be leased to an independent operator. Another new house is to start shortly at White Rock, Summer resort town, to be operated by F. Guy Graham, of Vancouver. It will cost $20,000 and seat 450.

Canadian Picture Pioneers Meet

The Canadian Picture Pioneers held their formal charter dinner at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on Wednesday with Clair Hague, chairman, presiding. Jack Cohn, president of the Pioneers Club, New York, and other visitors from the United States attended the dinner:

Following a business session at which J. E. Lawson, former member of the House of Commons and one of the first exhibitors in Toronto, presented the Government charter, the life members received engraved copper membership "cards" and the program wound up with an old-timers' floor show. There are 125 charter members in the Canadian organization.

The provisional committee meeting in Toronto and working on clearance reforms in Canada reports that substantial progress has been made. The committee, consisting of N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario; Marsh McMillan of Paramount, and Louis Rosenfeld of Columbia, will draw up a skeleton plan for the establishment of Regional Clearance Boards and also of a National Appeal Board and then submit the plan to a meeting of the Film Section of the Toronto Board of Trade to be held this month for the purpose of ratification and setting it in motion.

The film regulatory measure, known as Bill 92, enacted by the Nova Scotia Legislature but never finalized, is seen as setting a dangerous precedent not only for Canada but the United States by A. J. Mason, chairman of the Nova Scotia Board of Conciliation, who is urging its repeal.

The measure was designed as a threat to American distributors, who were accused by Nova Scotia independents of unfair treatment. Finalization was withheld a year ago while a conciliation plan was tested.

E. R. Lynn, of Sydney, also a board member, opposes repeal on the ground its protection still is needed.

IN COURTS

Malco Circuit Fights Two Local Ordinances

Malco Theatres, Inc., has filed suit in chancery court in Morrilton, Ark., asking that the city be restrained from enforcing recent ordinances for a theatre tax and limiting the number of theatres which one company may operate. The case will be heard May 10th.

Malco, headed by M. A. Lightman, former president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, charges that the theatre limiting ordinance is unconstitutional, and that the proposed annual license fee based on seating capacity is unreasonable and discriminatory. Plans for a new Malco house in Morrilton have been held up pending the outcome of the suit.

Columbia Seeks Suit Dismissal

Columbia Pictures this week filed application in New York supreme court to dismiss three causes of action in the suit of five minority stockholders against it. The application is in reference to an action which demands an accounting, damages and cancellation of stock purchase warrants held by officers of Columbia.

Fight Suit Dismissal

Norman Wolf and Mannes Fuld, minority stockholders of Loew's, Inc., this week filed a notice of appeal from a dismissal by Louis A. Valente, New York supreme court justice, of their suit against Loew's, American Telephone and Telegraph, Western Electric, Chase National Bank and others. The action seeks recovery of approximately $5,000,000 charged lost through excessive rates for licensing of sound equipment.

Claim Expunged

The claim of the National Rockland Bank of Boston and Harold G. Storke, trustees, against Paramount Publix for $667,287 was ordered expunged April 26th by Alfred C. Coxe, federal judge. The order confirmed a report of Referee John E. Joyce which said that the claim, based on a debenture issue of G. B. Theatres, Inc., had been discharged by Olympia Theatres, Inc.

Wins Theatre Suit

Mrs. Salvatore Adorno was awarded a verdict in superior court in Middletown, Conn., this week by Judge William H. Comley, which permits the operation of a 300-seat open-air theatre, completed as a larger house more than a year ago, but kept closed by charges of violation of the building code.

Spaeth Sues Warners

Warner Brothers were named defendants this week in a suit for $500,000 damages filed in New York supreme court by Sigmund Spaeth, "tune detective" and music expert. The plaintiff contends that Dick Powell ridiculed him while playing the part of a professor in the Warner film, "Naughty But Nice." Warners have applied for a transfer of the suit to the federal court.

Columbia Artists Sued

Columbia Artists, Inc., this week was sued for $195,800 in New York supreme court by Albert Zugsmith, who claims to be the defendant's former orchestra division head. The plaintiff charges the defendant failed to pay a percentage on increased business for 1933, 1934 and 1935 under an oral contract of employment.

Fox Theatres Plan Confirmed

Aaron J. Levy, New York supreme court justice, April 26th, confirmed an accounting and a 1940 plan of operation filed by Milton C. Weisman and Kenneth P. Steinreich, as trustees of Fox Theatres Corporation. The accounting, covering the period from March 17th to December 31st, 1939, disclosed that the company had cash assets of $168,278, of which $80,750 consisted of a reserve for a claim of William Fox.

Under the proposed plan of operation, Fox Theatres at the end of 1940 will have cash assets of $121,259 exclusive of all reserves, the trustees' report said. The trustee pointed out that the company had netted eight per cent for 1939.

The order allowed Mr. Weisman and Mr. Steinreich $2,500 each for services up to January, 1940, and awarded their attorneys, Hirson & Bertini, $3,000.

GN Film Sale Protested

Vincent T. Leibell, federal judge, New York, was asked Wednesday by Gustave DeLemos, a bidder, to set aside the sale of Grand National films to Mohawk Pictures Corporation. The court reserved decision after counsel for Mr. DeLemos argued that the sale, made after competitive bidding at a creditors' hearing, had been improperly conducted.

Change Newsreel Tonal Quality

Walton C. Ament, general manager of RKO Pathe and editor of Pathe News, announced this week that the future newsreels and short subjects of the company would be recorded at the sound level prevalent for feature productions. "This is the first step in the complete coordination between newsreels and features for common sound levels," he said.

Hoffberg Acquires Donat Pictures

Three Robert Donat pictures, originally scheduled to be released by United Artists, have been acquired by Hoffberg Productions for the New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco territories. They are "Men of Tomorrow," "Cash" and "Over Night."

Hart Joins Law Firm

Vincent G. Hart, for the last ten years on the staff of Will Hays, President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., as assistant to the general counsel and assistant to the director of the Production Code Administration, has joined the law firm of Friend, Holbrook, Reiskind & Hart. The company has offices in the RKO building in New York. Mr. Hart will specialize in motion picture law and censorship matters.

Sells Lease

Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc., which originally took a 21-year-lease for the New York theatre from the New York Life Insurance Company, has sold its leasehold interest to Myles E. Rieser.

OBITUARIES

Arthur W. Weil Dies, Copyright Authority

Arthur W. Weil, attorney and an authority on copyright law, died April 29th in New York. He was 59. Mr. Weil was the author of "Weil on Copyright," a standard work on copyright law used in law schools.

Mr. Weil was instrumental in drawing the contracts for the introduction of sound films in 1929 when he was attorney for Electrical Research Products, Inc. He had also represented the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in copyright matters and in drafting legislation. He was for many years chairman of the copyright committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

Ray Clifton Dead

Ray Delano Clifton, 62, motion picture writer, died April 25th in Los Angeles of a tropical fever which he contracted while traveling in India 18 years ago. He first became associated with motion pictures when he joined the old American Film Company in Santa Barbara, Cal. Later he was with the British Cinema Company.

Josef Pasternack

Josef A. Pasternack, 59, died April 29th in Chicago after a heart attack while rehearsing his National Broadcasting Company orchestra for a program which was to have been broadcast that night. At one time he was music director for the Stanley theatre circuit. He joined NBC in 1927.

Mrs. Selma Stevens

Mrs. Selma Stevens, film inspector at the Universal exchange in St. Louis for 20 years, died in that city April 26th.

Herbert Elder

Herbert Elder, for many years connected with the motion picture industry and having worked for Warner Brothers and Paramount, died April 26th at the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital in Saranac, New York.

Rodney Ranous

Rodney Ranous, 54, Chicago actor, who was well known in the 1920's for leading roles in many stage plays, died April 23rd in Chicago.

Thomas E. Shea

Thomas E. Shea, 79, former head of a stock company and wellknown in this country and in England for his stage roles, died in Cambridge, Mass., April 23rd. Dustin and William Farnum, later destined to be screen stars, had their first stage opportunity from Mr. Shea at Winterport, Me.

Mrs. Winona Sper

Mr. Winona Winter Sper, 49, retired stage and vaudeville actress, died in Hollywood April 27th. Mrs. Sper was the wife of Norman L. Sper, sports authority and magazine writer.

Royster Gets New Post

Harry L. Royster, with Paramount many years in theatre departments and other executive capacities, has been appointed chief aide to Sam Dembow, Jr., and Leonard Goldenson, home office theatre executives.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas—Very entertaining picture which pleased the very small crowd it drew. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BEWARE SPOOKS: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle—They still like Joe Brown. Why does not somebody make some real pictures with him?—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—This is the first "Blondie" feature we have played and it seemed to please our patrons. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 11-13.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

First National

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Pat O'Brien, Burgess Meredith—Oh hum, another prison story. You know the answer. No business. This is the best picture Ann Sheridan ever made. An excellent picture but the public does not want prison stories. Very disappointing. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—This feature has everything in it that a small town audience enjoys. Just a real good story and my audience reacted in a very splendid manner. We have to thank Warners for such down to earth entertainment. It will bring good business by word of mouth advertising. Recommend this. Running time, 89 minutes. Played April 18.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH, THE: Pat O'Brien, James Cagney, George O'Brien, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Dennis Morgan—As an argument against war it is superb, as entertainment it is a little heavy. Acting is all very, very good, plenty of music, mostly Irish, to liven it up. Brought out some who seldom come but it is not a good Sunday night show. These all-men, all-women shows do not click here. A few Red Cross nurses and glamour girls would have doubled the gross. However, it is an excellent production. The last sequence is wonderful. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 12-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh—Played this one a year late but it is still a better drawing card than some of the new ones. The crowd was well pleased with the entire cast, especially Priscilla Lane, John Garfield and May Robson. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 5-6.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—I though it rather silly but the patrons seemed to like it. The three Lanes and Gale Page are excellent; Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains and Dick Foran are good while Frank McHugh, as usual, furnishes plenty of comedy and May Robson is superb. What a grand trouper she is. It is the type of picture my patrons like but run into our usual week-end storm. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 29 31.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Good picture; poor business. I played it too old and it is not a small town picture anyway. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER: Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Fay Bainter, May Robson, Roland Young—So far any picture these two stars are in is a real box office special. The crowd just eats this kind of picture up. Why can't we have more of them? Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 1-2.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey, Bobs Watson—Entertaining from start to finish. Excellent entertainment. Played March 31.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—A grand picture that gave us the best week-end business so far this year. George Murphy almost steals the show from the two headliners. Pictures of this type please everyone and we never fail to make money on musicals. The entire cast is excellent. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 20-22.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

CHAMP, THE (reissue): Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Irene Rich—Never played it and needed picture badly. It pleased 100 percent those who came. Played April 7.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Think we've had enough of these Maisie stories. Really one was plenty, as business on this was not as good as on the first one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 29-30.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Nice comedy with lots of laughs. Ann Sothern good as "Maisie." Give her some help on these pictures and they will be great. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 7-8.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—Of the greatness of this picture there is no doubt. I am of the opinion that it will stand for a long time without its equal. But with the terms that Metro have set up, I think that the small towns should give a lot of thought, especially if they are against a run in a larger community as we were. To aggravate matters we could not secure any commitment much longer than our term of availability called for. Our town as were others were milked by the city run. That we know. Hence, we had to go out into the highways and byways for our business. This entailed more money for advertising than it should have done. But we had to get the business somewhere and it sums right down to this. With the terms demanded by Metro, we would have been better off to have played it at popular prices next season, basing an average Friday, Saturday, Sunday, Monday business against the gross of "Wind," and the take of Metro. The clamor for the picture swayed our judgment. Live and learn.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—A splendid high class picture. My patrons prefer Tracy in action pictures. However, no kicks on this one. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 24.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Better than we anticipated because there had been so much talk about it being shelved. Lamarr is certainly easy to look at and does a very good job of acting. Tracy is always fine but somewhat miscast. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—This picture drew better than we had expected and for the most part seemed to be thoroughly enjoyed. Not nearly as bad as some exhibitors have reported. Running mtie, 97 minutes. Played April 13-15.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

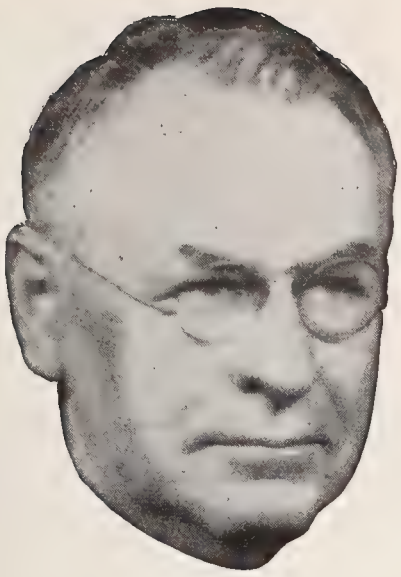
JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, Lewis Stone, William Gargan, Walter Brennan—This may satisfy the few who attend but that's not much solace. The worst Sunday in months. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 14-15.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Up to the very high standard established by this swell series. But it does look like they are slipping a little at the box office or is it that we are slipping generally in our grosses? Looks like the latter is more correct. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 14-15.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, June Preisser, Margaret Early, George Breakston—The usual good picture from this family but they are not going over so well now. Stories are very much alike and people soon tire of them and want something new. The cast gives an excellent performance and two new stars, Margaret Early and June Preisser, are great. Hope Leo gives them more, bigger and better parts. We would like to see George Breakston again for he is very good. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 22-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, June Preisser—After all's said and done, they don't make them any better. Excellent from start to finish. My crowd are asking for some more pictures with that June Preisser in them. She certainly was good in this one. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 23.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—Fair picture that did not draw. Wallace Beery usually good attraction but our customers do not like war pictures of any sort. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 20-22.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.



NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—A small town natural. Just as good an action picture as you will use in a long time. When there is such a picture, not much comment need be given. Running time, 127 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Not for small towns. Excellent picture, well played by a fine cast but it just isn't for the rank and file of small town audiences. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—A very clever picture that for some reason or other had no box office.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—A better picture of its kind has never been made nor will any better picture ever be made. Mickey is a born star and of the highest order. His supporting cast all superb in their various parts and not a dull moment from start to finish. Fay Bainter is a regular Irene Rich mother and Virginia Weidler is a regular Jane Withers in the types they portrayed and, of course, George Bancroft, Eugene Pallette and in fact the entire cast were true components of the several characters they represented. The picture will please all classes, both old and young, males and females,

Paramount

CAT AND THE CANARY THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Excellent picture. Pleased 100%. Don't see how any exhibitor can go very wrong playing it. Played April 4.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

FARMER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Martha Raye, Charles Ruggles—A hodge podge of nothing. Several funny situations thrown together in an effort to make a 60-minute feature. Played on Bank Night to average business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 11-12.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—Historical early day story well played but what bloodshed! Probably very authentic but too much slaughter to satisfy the average movie fan. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—They don't make them any better for our box office. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 29.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

LAW OF THE PAMPAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna—Good picture; good business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 19-20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NEVER SAY DIE: Bob Hope, Martha Raye—This is the best picture we have ever shown with Martha Raye in it. She was 75% acceptable in this. Bob Hope did well. The box office shows up well on this one. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 12-13.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—Excellent for us. Good crowd and they seemed satisfied with the show. Played March 22.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Frances Farmer, Martha Raye—Played this one about two years old but it is far better than many of the new ones. Don't know how we missed this one. If you haven't played it and can get a good print you will register with it. Crosby and Burns are fine. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 15-16.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope, Judith Barrett—An excellent picture, tropical in nature but full of exciting events and not a dull moment from start to finish. But we believe that Bing Crosby and Bob Hope equal as stars and that Miss Lamour and Judith Barrett also co-stars, one as good as the other. Word of mouth about this smash laugh, love and song hit is sure to make one of the builders of the year and the picture held over for second week at the Plaza. Running time, 83 minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Republic

FIGHTING THOROUGHBREDS: Ralph Byrd, Mary Carlisle—Well received. Had the Knights of St. Andrew as our guests. Did nice business on week-end.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GLAMOROUS NIGHT: Otto Kruger, Mary Ellis—Republic should never have released this one. It's "n. g." Played March 21-23.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

KANSAS TERRORS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo), Jacqueline Wells—Suitable for dual billing. Did nice business. Metro will say they carry the industry. I'll take westerns.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RANCHO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Another Autry with box office. We note a little more production value. Better cast, new scenery and good story. Music excellent as usual.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Lulu Belle and Scotty, Doris Day—First Saturday in three years we played anything but a western and we enjoyed the second biggest gross in history of our theatre. These radio stars very popular with Saturday crowds and many asked when we would have them again. A real money making picture. Running time, 74 minutes. Played April 20.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

MEXICAN SPITFIRE: Lupe Velez, Donald Woods, Leon Errol—Just a two-reel comedy stretched out into a feature. Running time, 67 minutes. Played April 12-13.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—First real business in 1940. Excellent picture and pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SAINT'S DOUBLE TROUBLE: George Sanders, Helene Whitney, Bela Lugosi—Just another program picture that got by for us on gift night. Not even as good as previous Saint Picture. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 18-19.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Terry Kilburn, Freddie Bartholomew, Tim Holt—A fine picture that pleased and drew. But for the overacting of Mitchell would have been a knockout.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—An excellent picture that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne ,Anne Shirley—The world's worst picture for us. English dialect with a strong musical background while cast talking. Might have pleased some if it could be understood. The producers will make them up this way every so often. I can't answer the question why. Trouble recording. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 12.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Just an average picture sold as a special production. Did not do the business that other Sonja Henie pictures have done. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 15-17.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FREE, BLONDE AND TWENTY-ONE: Lynn Bari, Joan Davis, Henry Wilcoxon—Fair picture; fair business. This is just a program picture, so don't try to play it on Sunday. Was allocated as high as a Sunday picture, though. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin, John Carradine—Good picture; fair business. This is a real show if you can get them to come in and stay in. However, it is very depressing and some of the working class found it too much like home. Running time, 120 minutes. Played April 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOLLWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton—The color was beautiful. The action seemed to lag too much and we did not do quite as well as expected. Running time, 93 minutes. Played March 29-30.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLE: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—This is not a bad picture where Jane Withers goes over but I am wondering if there is any place the Ritz Bros. would help draw a crowd. Perhaps, this is their last chance. Let's hope so and may Fox give the kid a chance at something better. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 8-9.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Good story, beautiful color. Second night gross equal to first night. Enough said. Played April 11-12.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, Jackie Moran, Ann Gillis, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Bring this back again. You will be surprised what it will do for you. It's worth bringing back. Kids and adults too will back you up on it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 7-9.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: Ralph Richardson, John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith—The first and only English picture that ever clicked at my theatre. One of my patrons told me: "Enjoyed 'Four Feathers' far more than I did 'Gone With the Wind.'" When I bought and booked "Four Feathers" I thought to myself here is another English flop but in this case it wasn't so. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 28-30.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Our patrons seemed to enjoy this screwy picture. Not much sense, just "hokum." Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 14-15.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

INTERMEZZO, A LOVE STORY: Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best—The men and children came out to the doorman and inquired "how much longer does this run?" I believe this is what most exhibitors would call a class picture. It sure is out of our class. Don't gamble; shelve it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 19-20.—A. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

MADE FOR EACH OTHER: Carole Lombard, James Stewart—Traded for this one and will say it is a honey. Better than most of the new U. A. pictures. The crowd really go for Lombard and Stewart. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 20.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Betty Field, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Our patrons did not like this picture. We would prefer to leave this type of picture in the exchange if they make any more of them and we have the misfortune to have them under contract. Running time, 106 minutes. Played April 8-10.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—A very remarkable film but what poison at the box office of a small town. I was afraid of it but thought that it might give me an even break. I had the worst crowd in my history and certainly would not recommend it in any small centre. Even the kids walked out on me. Running time, 101 minutes. Played April 11.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—This one fared better than any of her previous pictures. I don't think Universal should change away from its regular sound setting as it did in this picture. Changing from its regular Universal average four to six D.B. is not a good thing to do. In my case it made no improvement in sound but it did bring all the badness, undesirable noises and hums. I wish someone in the Sound Department at Universal would give me some information as why this change was made. Played April 11-12.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GAMBLING SHIP: Robert Wilcox, Helen Mack—An average program picture. Played on a double feature program. Running time, 61 minutes. Played April 11-13.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Constance Moore, Johnny Downs, Mary Carlisle—Just a program filler. Nothing to rave over. Played April 4-6.—Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS, THE: Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey—Well, it just isn't possible and that sort of took away the desirability of the story. Don't think it took very well because we heard quite a number of unfavorable comments. Running time, 81 minutes. Played April 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BLACKHAWK: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Played this one in place of a western to average business. Plenty of action. Played April 13.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Tom Brown, Peggy Moran—A nice little comedy. The title gave us an extra good drawing for gift night. Running time, 63 minutes. Played April 16.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, Ind. Small town patronage.

TOWER OF LONDON: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff—Very good for this situation. Played March 14.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Warner Brothers

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE: Boris Karloff, Margaret Lindsay—Skip it. No comments. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Ronald Reagan, Peter B. Good, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman—Screwy comedy but that's what they like. Cast good with Ronald Reagan and little Peter B. Good stealing the show. Light entertainment but it is entertainment and that is what they want. Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 5-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, Jane Bryan, William Holden—Very good program picture but we'll certainly be glad when Warners give up the idea of making about a third of their product based on the prison angle. Running time, 80 minutes. Played April 12-13.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IT ALL CAME TRUE: Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart, Zasu Pitts, Jeffrey Lynn—The most enjoyed picture this company has made this season. Despite the terrible weather, we had some customers come to see it a second time. A small comedy with one sure fire song hit. Ann Sheridan never better and Zasu Pitts thoroughly enjoyed. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 17-18.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—This fellow Cagney has won a place in the hearts of the fans and of course Priscilla Lane cannot be improved upon. Let's hope these two are used in another top picture. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 22-23.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

GANG WAR: (Popkin) Ralph Cooper—Good all colored cast picture. Million Dollar Pictures have pleased very well. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 28.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

HARLEM RIDES THE RANGE: (Sack) Herbert Jeffries—Good colored cast western. This series are better than the average western. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 28.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

SMOKY TRAIL: (Metropolitan) Bob Steele—Poor. This is the worst Bob Steele yet played. There are very few good westerns today. Too much singing and comedy. Cowboys have turned "sissy." Played March 30.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ANDY CLYDE ON BROADWAY: Broadway Comedies—As good a comedy as you will see. Plenty of funny situations that bring down the house. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CALLING ALL CURS: Three Stooges—Real good. Lot of laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LIFE IN PARIS: Columbia Tours—An excellent black and white travel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE LOST SHEEP: Fable Cartoons—Very mediocre. The cartoon market seems to have been very overdone, although Columbia color cartoons of late are becoming increasingly more popular.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Columbia Tours—A very good travel talk by this company. Well made and the talk is excellent. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NOTHING BUT PLEASURE: Buster Keaton—A typical Keaton comedy that drew plenty of laughs. Very good. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ROCKIN' THRU THE ROCKIES: Three Stooges—A weak sister. No story, nothing but slap them in the face. These comedies have been the best of the slapstick comedies. We hate to see them degenerate. Leave the women out of them. Give them good lines and slapstick.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROUGH HOUSE FIESTA: Sport Thrills—This sports reel of two wrestling teams highly enjoyed by our farmer trade. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SAVED BY THE BELLE: Three Stooges—Stooges always please here. Running time, two reels.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

WORLD OF 1960 (FUTURAMA): Cinescopes—Interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YANKEE DOODLE HOME: Music Hall Vanities—American propaganda. Our patrons did not find much entertainment in it but should be liked by American audiences. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S DOUBLE: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN VICTORY: Passing Parade, No. 11—Another fine miniature. Give it preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THAT INFERIOR FEELING: Robert Benchley—Amusing Benchley short. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WRONG WAY OUT: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another Crime Doesn't Pay subject. All this series very good and thoroughly enjoyed. Running time, 20 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

CHAMPAGNE MUSIC OF LAWRENCE WELK: Headliners—This is a nice musical reel worth the price and worth a place on anybody's program. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

DOG IS BORN, A: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Swell short and well liked by all.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

GEORGE OLSEN AND HIS MUSIC: Headliners—A fair orchestra short that seemed to lack pep. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MIAMI MIRACLE: Nice build up for "Gulliver's Travels."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

CANADA AT WAR: March of Time, No. 8—An interesting subject, although our patrons thought it slightly exaggerated. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

CRISIS IN THE PACIFIC: March of Time, No. 5—These reels always bring me extra business. Good buildup for any program. Play them. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

FLY CASTING: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Thoroughly enjoyed by our local fishing enthusiasts. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SOCIETY DOG SHOW: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

AFRICA SQUAWKS: Terry-Toons—A good cartoon and seemed to please. Running time, 7½ minutes.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 7: Fashions—In color, this fashion reel is the most beautiful yet turned out by this company. Filmed on the Warren Wright estate in Miami Beach, this short is excellent. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIRST ROBIN, THE: Terry-Toons—This was one of the nicest short reels we have had. The colored Terry-Toons are fine. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Universal

BIRD ON NELLIE'S HAT: Lantz Cartunes—Very good cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BIRTH OF A TOOTHPICK: Lantz Cartune—The Scandinavian dialect used in this caused many a chuckle in the audience. Running time, seven minutes.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RHUMBA LAND: Two-Reel Musicals—Fair. Running time, two reels.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SQUEAKS: Looney Tunes—One of the best of the Porky's. When you need an out of the ordinary cartoon, book this one.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ALI BABA BOUND: Looney Tunes—The best cartoon Vitaphone has made in a long time. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BUSY BAKERS: Merrie Melodies—A swell cartoon. No kicks and plenty of laughs. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CRAWFORDS "AT HOME," THE: Vitaphone Varieties—One of the best shorts of the year. Play it by all means. Brings back memories of good releases such as "Footlight Parade" that we used to be proud to show. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

CURIOUS PUPPY, THE: Merrie Melodies—A dandy colored cartoon. Pleased the grownups as well as the kiddies. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

FAGIN'S FRESHMEN: Merrie Melodies—A good colored cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FRANCES CARROLL AND THE COQUETTES: Melody Masters—Fair band short. Running time, one reel.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

FRESH FISH: Merrie Melodies—This colored cartoon is not quite up to the average Merrie Melodies. However, the color is perfect. Running time, nine minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—These Merrie Melodies are getting better all the time. Nice color, nice work. Keep them coming. Running time, 10 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT MICE: Merrie Melodies—Just fair. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE DAY STAND: Vitaphone Varieties—A circus is my favorite entertainment so I booked this one mostly for myself, but it pleased everyone, especially the kiddies. Fine shots of the animals, especially the little cubs. Good circus acts and entertaining narrative. Would like to see a two-reel short on this subject. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ONE FOR THE BOOK: Broadway Brevities—Good two-reel musical from Vitaphone. Business with a minstrel show and dancing. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ONE FOR THE BOOK: Broadway Brevities—This series is slowly improving with age and this little offering is nothing to be sneezed at. Give it your dates when you need something to build up a weak feature. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ON THE AIR: Leith Stevens and Orchestra—A peach of an orchestra short. Running time, 8 minutes. Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PRESTO CHANGE: Merrie Melodies—A good short. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Broadway Brevities—Very good for colored house.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N C. Colored patronage.

RIDE, COWBOY, RIDE: Broadway Brevities—Ridin', shootin', and robbing, when the west was wild and woolly, all in beautiful color, with music and dancing. Pleased. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

RITA RIO AND ORCHESRA: Melody Masters—Not so good. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SNIFFLES AND THE BOOKWORM: Merrie Melodies—Just a fair colored cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

SHADOW, THE: Victor Jory, Veda Ann Borg—First three chapters good. Almost as good as "The Spider's Web," which I think the best serial of the year.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Universal

GREEN HORNET, THE: Gordon Jones, Anne Nagel—Very good serial. If you want good serials, watch for Ray Taylor's direction.—John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

MENTAL FLEXIBILITY

Among the more important aspects of showmanship are the intangibles, the certain box-office "somethings" outside of prepared campaigns. Usually, these "somethings" come about as a result of a mind trained to be on the lookout for the undiscovered exploitation possibility: a quick-thinking, a mental probing that turns up that extra selling idea.

To keep pounding here on the virtues of quick-thinking means little unless sufficient instances come to hand in support. Thus, currently are reported various ingenuities as further proof.

The community of Lake Charles, La., boasts an annual rodeo and stock show, when the town and the visitors go completely "cowhand" in atmosphere, dress and action. Immediately in character, the Southern Amusement folks broke out in costume, decked their Arcade Theatre with a hitching-post, hung lobby signs inviting riders to stop in, ran an ad campaign in keeping.

Result: The theatre became a center of all activities rather than a place to go when other entertainments concluded.

In Altoona, Pa., the Mayor instituted a campaign against gambling, particularly aimed at slot machines. The newspapers whooped it up for front-page spreads. In a flash, Dave Murphy got aboard for the benefit of the State. He booked the M-G-M short, "Jackpot", set up a lobby display of dismantled slot machines, broke widely into the general publicity.

Result: More business than the program otherwise would have attracted, at little extra cost.

With "Tom Edison" dated for the coming program at the Capitol, Pittsfield, Mass., one of the theatre's cleaning women casually revealed to Horace DeCelles, assistant, that she had once been employed in the home of the great inventor, possessed one of the earliest Edison phonographs. DeCelles at once made newspaper contact for feature attentions.

Result: A three-column cut of the woman posed with the machine, plus a full-column story of her experiences, a few days ahead, with generous theatre credits.

Learning that a local clergyman had in mind a sermon on happiness, Will Harper, at the Strand, Trail, B. C., was able to sell the minister the idea of preaching on "Wizard of Oz" as a worthy subject. To spread the word, the young people's class of the church relettered theatre posters, planted the advertising in spots where it usually could not be placed.

Result: Due to the cooperation, a highly creditable gross.

Keeping the audience entertained when the sound goes dead has been told here time and again. The same species of quick-thinking is apparent in the experience of Ben Stewart when it happened at the Gorman, in Framingham, Mass. Playing vaudeville, Stewart sent scouts far and near to round up the acts, scattered around town between shows.

Result: The performers saved the day, no refunds were necessary, the papers played up the event in columns of extra space.

The instances here described are intended as no portrayal of magic. Neither are they meant to indicate that mental flexibility is necessarily a matter of pure instinct. By continuous training, the theatremen have sharpened their perceptions to recognize boxoffice instantly. They give reason to believe that flexibility of mind, as of muscle, can be attained.

The famed Rockefeller Center ice-skating pond is now a roller-skating rink. The boys and girls of the Music Hall are disporting themselves in the sun below. Between sneezes, allow us to remark that Spring is here.

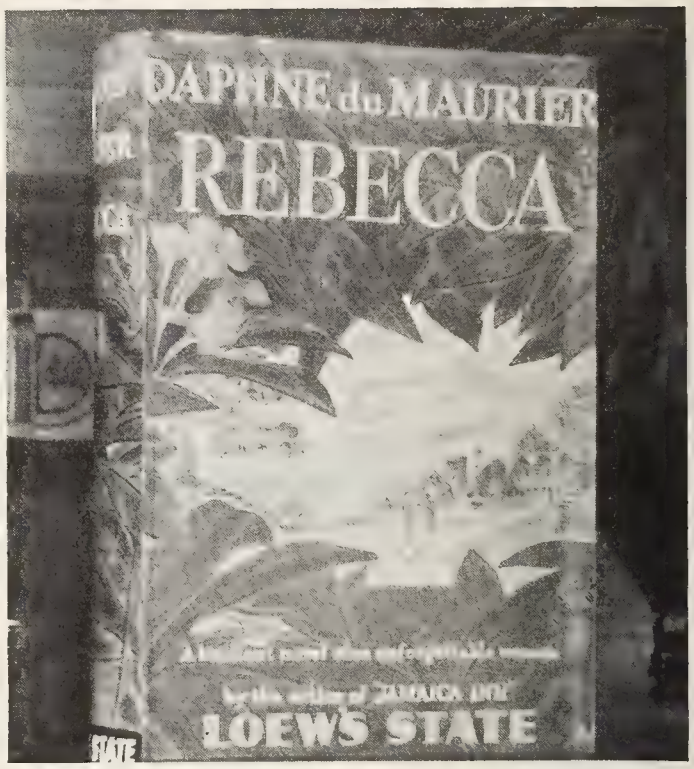
Previously honored by promotions for their successes in the Quigley Awards, Lew Chatham and Ted Kirkmeyer are again recognized for bigger jobs.

Announced by C. B. Akers, division manager, is the appointment of Chatham, 1936 Silver Grand winner, to supervisor of Griffiths theatres in Tulsa, Okla., and Springfield, Mo.

Selected by Rick Ricketson, Fox Intermountain head, Ted Kirkmeyer, 1937 Silver Grand winner, moves up to city manager of all the circuit's operations in Ogden, Utah.

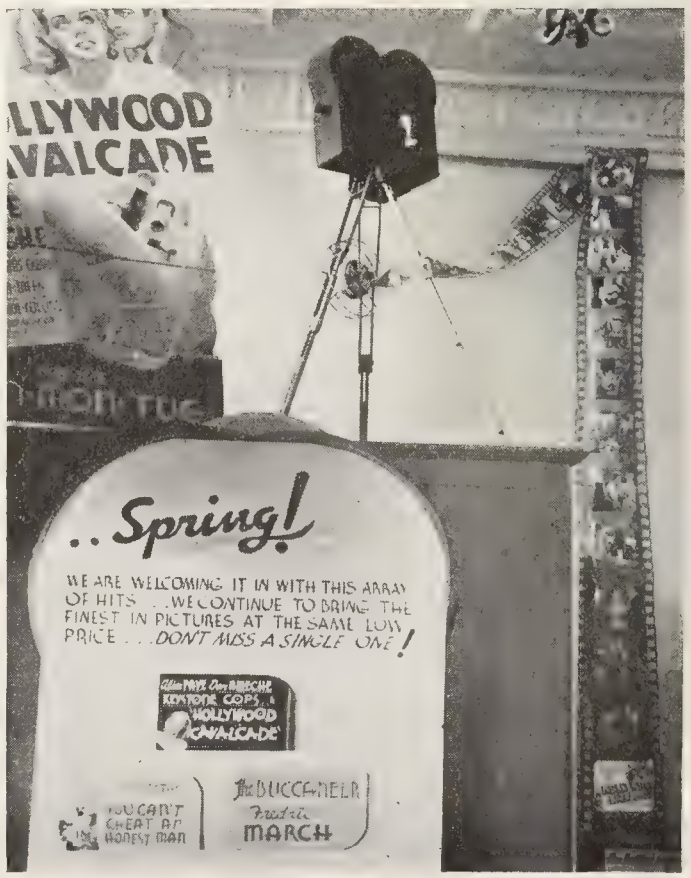
In extending the best wishes of the membership to Lou and Ted, your Round Table takes this further opportunity of emphasizing the continued value of the Awards as a direct means of advancement.

Round Table In Pictures



Tying in with local Edison high school, Sam Gilman, before leaving Loew's, Harrisburg, for a post in Dayton, arranged for the presentation and dedication of an Edison plaque to the school in connection with his date on "Young Tom Edison." Above may be seen some of the students on way to the ceremonies.

Streamlined display for his lobby heralded Gerald Westergren's coming attractions at Basil's Genesee Theatre, in Buffalo. Train wheels, headlight, and road signs all carried titles. Cab of engine had a flasher of red to portray opening of fire box. Entire display measured 15 feet in length.



That's Charlie Pincus of the Centre Theatre, in Salt Lake, standing next to the old prairie schooner which he unearthed and bannered for street bally in connection with his date on "Virginia City." Bally which covered streets ahead and during run broke in daily papers with art and stories.

Arranged by Milt Harris, publicist Loew's State, Cleveland, was the colorful blowup of the book, "Rebecca," which was planted on revolving table and placed in lobby of theatre ahead of opening and moved to cooperating store window during run.

Ties Horse Stunt To 'Florian' Date

A modern Lady Godiva, costumed less sketchily than the original, rode the streets of Houston, Tex., as one of the top tieins in the "Florian" campaign put together by Manager Francis Deering and publicity director, Homer McCallum, for the date at Loew's State. Mounted on a thoroughbred horse, loaned by a local horsewoman, covered with a royal purple robe carrying the title in cutout letters, the rider, masked, covered the main streets and appeared out front for the first two days of the showing. Silvered horseshoes, appropriately tagged, were mailed to prominent horse owners and sportsmen.

Liberty carriers were tied in to distribute heralds with copies of the magazine, and serialization of the story were distributed in office buildings, restaurants and hotel lobbies. Teaser tieins included advance ads and three-sheet mounted posters, these carried on the main streets by theatre ushers, who stopped for traffic lights so that the posters could be seen by the waiting crowds. To publicize the dancer, Baranova, featured in the picture, special advertising cards were directed at the city's dancing schools.

Publicity started two weeks ahead, the papers carrying feature stories and photos of the Godiva stunt on the tiein that the date marked the 900th anniversary of the original ride. Week ahead, ads were taken inquiring for the whereabouts of Austrian war veterans in that area to be interviewed by the press and over the air.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Quarterly Cartoon Carnival Works Well for Marquis

No-school vacation weeks in Brighton, Mass., come four times each year, which allows Manager Joe Marquis, of the Egyptian, to put on what he terms a "Cartoon Carnival," of five cartoon shorts, plus the regular feature showings. These special showings are plugged two weeks ahead by trailer, in programs, in newspaper ads, and most impressively, Marquis reports, by direct verbal announcement from the stage at the two previous Saturday and Sunday matinees. A few days ahead, heralds are distributed at schools.

Over a period of two years, the Carnival has been built up so that the youngsters in the theatre territory have come to look forward to them, bringing sufficient of their elders along to turn in a fat profit to the theatre in addition to endless goodwill. No extra expense is involved, as the shorts are included in the regular bookings with Paramount, according to the Round Tabler.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Saunders Co-op Page

Effective was the full page of photos promoted by Manager Matt Saunders in the Bridgeport Post for his date on "Young Tom Edison" at Loew's Poli there. Numbering some 13 large reproductions of scene stills captions tied in with the picture and playdates which were prominently mentioned.

INSTITUTIONAL TIEINS

Firm believers in institutional goodwill advertising and publicity, the boys in Harry Black's division of the Fabian Staten Island theatres are not neglecting any tieins that will keep the theatre in the limelight as a community institution. Along these lines, Edgar Goth, divisional publicity chief, and Manager George Evans, of the St. George, have arranged a series of interseting exhibits in the grand lounge of the theatre.

Recently a tiein was made with the New York City Art Project for a two-week display of paintings, sculpture, murals and prints. The Island's personalities, educators and civic leaders served as sponsors of the exhibit which was productive of much publicity. Through W.P.A. cooperation the theatres were able to crash the municipal ferryboats to downtown New York with colored posters announcing the showing. Posters were displayed at all public schools on the Island and the Art Project made up attractive catalogs including prominent mention of the St. George.

An exhibit of children's paintings arranged by the Art Project also served as a promotion for "Pinocchio", the display timed to plug the date in advance. For "It's A Date", the theatremen obtained an exhibit of original Esquire cartoon drawings, heralds on the attraction carrying a front-page illustration with balloon copy reading, "It's a date to see", etc.

Scheduled for early showing at the theatre is a print exhibition by the Island's Camera Club, since amateur photography is very popular locally. There is considerable excitement about the show. The press is playing it up and the camera fans are spreading the word. Other lobby activities to follow are a soap sculpture exhibit and a display of auto license plates from every state in the Union.

Callow Conducts "Edison" Contest

A four-way tie-up with Radio Station WPEN, Philadelphia Daily News, Franklin Institute and key Stanley-Warner theatres in Philadelphia was arranged by Ev Callow for "Young Tom Edison." Each theatre conducted preliminary contests to find "the most interesting invention" made by a boy between the ages of 10 and 17; two winners entered for the grand prize of a "Mickey Rooney Trophy" presented at a dinner at the Franklin Institute, where all inventions submitted were on display. Free membership to the Institute went to all preliminary winners.

The Daily News carried running stories on the contest and in addition to announcement on the contest, WPEN conducted an essay contest on Edison, awarding 80 pairs of movie tickets. The runners-up for the grand prize got one-day trips to New York.

A movie short has been made of the award dinner and trailers are being shown at all S-W houses heralding the contest.

Schine-men Promote Baseball Jamboree

Reported to be a first-time in Syracuse, was the baseball jamboree put on by Gus Lampe, district manager, and Manager Harry Unterfort, of Keith's, the night before the season's opening. The event was sponsored by Station WSYR, and sponsors of two of the station's programs, Wheaties and Atlantic Refining.

The first game scheduled with Rochester, introduced from the stage were Mayor Marvin of Syracuse, a representative of the Mayor of Rochester, owners, managers and players of both teams. Entertainment included radio names and the university glee club, the program transcribed and later broadcast. This was done to encourage the public to come to the theatre for the actual proceedings instead of remaining at home for a direct broadcast.

Spot announcements for two weeks ahead stressed that gifts would be distributed by the sponsors including prizes to largest families attending. The show held on the last night of a run was built up with extra advertising, and Lampe reports some extra business as a result.

Morrison Promotes Merchant On "Tom Edison" Campaign

Tying in with largest wholesale baker in his parts, Mel Morrison for date on "Young Tom Edison" at the Strand, in Dover, N. H., promoted special imprinted wrapper inserts which were distributed with baker's output throughout that part of the state. In addition, merchant gave the picture prominent mention on its radio program beside bannering its fleet of trucks ahead and during run.

Contacting the electrical engineering department of the university, Morrison secured enough valuable material to make interesting and attractive lobby and window displays of electrical pieces dating back to the inventor's time. Two broadcasts were purchased over WHEB three days ahead and opening day, program cards were spotted on bulletin boards in all dormitories, fraternities and sorority houses at the University and stills were placed on boards of public schools.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Brizendine's Teletype Gag

Through cooperation of Western Union for date on "The Road Back," Will Brizendine, at the Rialto in Baltimore, installed a teletype printer in his lobby, continuing typing out copy on the picture. Also displayed in lobby was a giant board map on which colored pins pointed out different places of interest in the present European conflict.

USHER: HE WANTS HALF HIS ADMISSION BACK. . . . SAYS HE COULDN'T SEE HALF THE PICTURE.

Boy Meets Girl Contest Held by Hensler for "Shop"

Small lucky number tags, each bearing a cut of either James Stewart or Margaret Sullivan, were distributed by Lew Hensler on the campus of the University of Kentucky, in connection with his date on "Shop Around the Corner" at the Schine Ben Ali in Lexington. Object was for students to match cards and those presenting duplicate number tags were admitted as guests of the management. Stunt was controlled by limiting number of free admissions.

Street bally consisted of truck laden with packages prominently lettered with picture title. At intervals, driver would stop truck, attempt to take off a package, knocking most of them down as he did so. As crowd gathered bally man, leisurely replaced the lettered bundles and moved on for the next crowd.

Tieup was effected with exclusive shop, whereby display was arranged in lobby with full credit as were attractive window displays in the cooperating store. Newspaper coverage included teaser campaign ahead of opening, on all of which assistant Arthur Stadler aided.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Bannan's "Gulliver" Contest

In an effort to make the prize big enough to insure the success of his contest, George Bannan at the Van Wert, in Van Wert, Ohio, for "Gulliver's Travels" put on a giant coloring contest for which 3,000 contest blanks were distributed with a large radio as first prize. Machine which was promoted was displayed in lobby two weeks ahead.

Caldwell's Street Ballys Help "Northwest Passage"

Seven foot compo book, reproduction of cover of "Northwest Passage," was used as street bally by Wally Caldwell of Loew's Valentine, Toledo. Mounted on baby carriage wheels and operated by boy within, bally traversed downtown area three days ahead of opening. In addition, travelling billboard posted with six sheets was mounted on auto body truck and covered streets.

Through tieup with public library bookmarks were distributed. Bus line, aided by use of window cards in all stations within a 50-mile radius. Special letters were sent to principals of high schools, P. T. A.'s university and civic organizations. Numerous tieup windows were effected, imprinted napkins used in restaurants and co-op page run in newspaper from leading jeweler.

MINERS SEE "GWTW" AT SPECIAL SHOWS

Realizing that a lot of the miners in that sector, working on the night shifts, would not be able to catch either of the regular showings of "Gone With the Wind," at the FPC Capitol, Sudbury, Ontario, Manager Sid Scott obtained cooperation from the mining companies for two extra performances. Held at midnight and early morning, the showings were stressed in all advertising.

The result was over 1200 admissions, which Sid reports would otherwise have been lost.

'Cyclops' Featured By Standout Stunts

A strong series of lobby and street stunts was conceived by Charley Taylor in Buffalo for "Dr. Cyclops" at Shea's Great Lakes, outstanding being what was termed an "atom chamber" in which a series of lenses reduced a girl to 14 inches in height. Poster over her head read, "A victim of Dr. Cyclops," with patrons invited to look through a glass panel. Chamber measured seven feet by seven, and in the lobby a week ahead, attracted long lines. Another lobby stunt was a 14-foot chair, built of heavy lumber and varnished, with built-up books placed beneath.

The lead suit and mask worn by Albert Decker in the picture was inspiration for a street stunt, usher wearing costume made up of a revamped cardboard waste basket, rubber rain coat and rubber boots. Signs tied to front and back identified the tiein. On opening day, barker out front in costume used p.a. system to call out headlines, such as "the most amazing picture," "see human beings reduced to 14 pitiful inches by this mad scientist," etc.

Radio contest was planted on the subject, "The time you felt smallest in life," with guest tickets for best answers. The university paper interviewed college students on "People you would like to shrink," and a hat hookup was made with the line, "No matter how small Dr. Cyclops can shrink a person, there's an Adams Hat to fit him," with small hats made up especially to tiein the display. Shoe stores used the angle that even the giant doctor could get a proper fit, and similar ideas were planted for other prominent windows. The front was circused with cutouts from the regular posters combined in a black and white background.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Cooper Displays Antiques To Build "Old New York"

From local collectors and antique shops in Glen Cove, Long Island, Max Cooper promoted the loan of rare antiques and prints for display on "Little Old New York" at Skouras' Cove. Among these were original Currier & Ives prints and furniture of the period of the picture and a hitching post, the latter also used out front as a ballyhoo. Gag copy on the post read, "Hitch your horse here while seeing," etc., and Cooper followed through by digging up an old-time horse and buggy for street use. Program quiz contest for the date offered guest tickets to those giving correct answers to a number of questions having to do with the background and stars of the picture.

With "Charley McCarthy, Detective" on the same bill, Max mounted a McCarthy doll on a 40 by 60, attached to a two-way speaker system through which the public was invited to ask Charley questions about both pictures. Poster copy stressed the invite. The Round Tabler also used cuts of McCarthy and his pal, Mortimer Snerd, on the front page of his program, the two discussing the coming pictures in balloon copy, with heads and cuts of the stars in the attractions set immediately below, to tie in the idea.

ALL MANAGERS EQUALLY REWARDED IN RKO JOHN J. O'CONNOR MONTH

Theatremen in Greater New York Area Vie in Competition to Honor Circuit Head; Dinner Concludes 5-Wk. Drive

Unique because it was a drive in which all theatremen participating won the prizes, the John J. O'Connor Month, put on by the RKO theatres in the Greater New York area in honor of the highly-held bossman, finished on April 10. It was a first-time drive for the circuit and entirely successful, according to headquarters, which recognized the efforts of the men in the field with a dinner at the campaign's conclusion. Headline event of the evening was the distribution of checks of the same amount to all managers in recognition of their work.

JOHN J. O'CONNOR

The circuit's Greater New York area, in addition to New York City, includes Newark, Union City, Trenton and New Brunswick, all in New Jersey. Brief outline of top promotions on the pictures played during the "month" are herewith set down.

Veterans Cooperate on "69th"

Most of the theatremen started the campaign with "The Fighting 69th," the entire circuit stressing tie-ups with veterans' organizations, parades, display of world war trophies, band concerts on the stage and similar stunts.

At the White Plains, C. M. Oelreich, had veterans of the 69th attend the opening, posing for newspaper pictures in front of theatre, as they saluted Father Duffy's flag.

Large heads, cut out from 24-sheets, of the stars were carried around by three men as a street ballyhoo for this picture for the RKO Kenmore, arranged by Leon Kelmer. Boy Scout fife and drum corps played music in front of theatre. At the 58th Street, Ansel Weinstein had a bust of Father Duffy in the lobby. An anti-aircraft searchlight machine was used to attract attention, as Father Duffy Boys' Band paraded to the theatre. On the stage there was a massing of colors by members of the Coast Artillery. Another attention-getter was a "private" peeling potatoes in a local store window, with card giving theatre and playdate. The ushers wore overseas caps during the showing of film.

A colored unit of Father Duffy's cadets promoted by Max Mink created attention at the Regent, while at the Royal, Sam Truk issued Irish heralds on the picture. The Gun Hill Post gave an impressive concert on the stage of the theatre and two members of the original 69th were introduced to the audience.

Stork Derby for "Child Is Born"

"A Child Is Born" was another picture which lent itself to numerous exploitation stunts, which were taken advantage of by most of the theatres. All the houses conducted a "Stork Derby." Parents registered in advance and first child born in each neighborhood, on opening day of picture, received many practical presents promoted from merchants. Many houses also had co-op pages in local papers. There were also tie-ups with laundries, which awarded free diaper service as prizes.

One of the most amusing incidents in connection with the "Stork Derby" occurred at the Yonkers, John C. Hearns, manager, when the winners of their stork derby proved to be twins. All the prizes promised to the winner were doubled and the local newspaper ran gag stories about it. At the 86th Street, Emil Groth tied with a laundry on a give-away of heralds, carrying lucky numbers, with the winners receiving free guest tickets. The New Rochelle, J. DiLorenzo, manager, tied up with the New Rochelle Hospital, giving gifts to the first child born here, after opening of picture. Diapering contests for men on the stage, using dolls, created many laughs at the RKO Bushwick Theatre, R. F. Hodgdon, manager, and at the RKO Colonial, where Maxwell Levine also used a baby carriage street ballyhoo. Crying record in carriage attracted attention. Winner of the stork derby at Prospect Theatre, Harold Heller, manager, received a complete layette, besides many other promoted gifts.

Baby incubator in lobby of the theatre, promoted from a chemical company, resulted in interesting display at the Mt. Vernon, Baker Shelton, manager. Another lobby display was a blowup of Winchell's column on babies, which was used in all the theatres. The Fordham, Irving Gold, manager, tied up with laundry, which carried large signs on all of their trucks. The RKO 125th St., David Lustig, at the 125th Street, tied up with East Harlem Health Center, which had an exhibit on child care and health. The RKO 23rd Street, James O'Donnell, manager, augmented its extensive campaign on this picture by writing special letters to nurses and doctors.

"Pinocchio" Widely Exploited

"Pinocchio" campaigns topped all the rest for activities at all the theatres. All houses used 24-sheet heads cut out and mounted on marquees of theatres, animated, with eyes rolling. Pinocchio songs were played at all the children's shows, with coloring contests and other ballyhoos to attract juvenile trade. Some of the theatres had fishbowls in lobby, with one gold fish. Copy read, "This is Fleo, Sister of Cleo, famous Hollywood movie star, appearing in," etc. This gag was inexpensive and brought many laughs. Boys with Pinocchio heads and costumes were used on marquee, in parades and at stores to act as guides. George Dunn, at the 81st Street, gave out Pinocchio aprons to all the newsboys in the vicinity.

At the RKO Albee, Larry Greib, manager, a Victoria, drawn by two horses, was used to cover Brooklyn, with boys in costumes seated in carriage. The Greenpoint, Frank Howard, manager, used the members of its house staff, dressed in Pinocchio outfits to parade. Ushers dressed in costume, from the RKO Columbia, W. Bartlett, manager, visited the local schools and were allowed to enter classrooms. Tie-ups with cheese companies, to give away Pinocchio glasses were made up by the Albany, T. W. Wright, manager, and the Flushing, John Heinz, manager, which also issued Pinocchio heralds in Italian, gave away dolls as prizes, and had co-op pages.

Usher dressed as Pinocchio, standing in front of Palace, Ray Conner, manager, with pencil and slate, writing down answers to questions asked by children, practically tied up traffic here. Lee Koken, manager of the RKO Richmond Hill, had staff artist draw water color paintings of Pinocchio on several local store windows, with appropriate copy. The organist of the theatre played special parodies on picture which children sang.

Schools Tie In on "Lincoln"

The double feature which attracted the greatest attention during the John J. O'Connor month was "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The Bluebird." On both pictures extensive publicity and exploitation were used. On the Lincoln picture, managers went after high schools and colleges, while on "Bluebird," they appealed to children in the lower grades. Lincoln records, for instance, recording dialogue, directly from the picture, were distributed to numerous schools. The Alden, Harry Lyons manager, had these records used at the Queens College and at the Capitol, H. School, manager, at the Central High School. The Parkhill, M. Kresner, manager, had tie-up with Collectors Stamp Center, which organization furnished for display stamps and currency of the Lincoln era. A contest which consisted of patrons reading parts of the Gettysburg address from the stage of the theatre created attention at the Hamilton, G. Baldwin, manager, with promoted prizes to the winners. A Quiz Contest, pertaining to questions on Lincoln, was a stage feature at the Dyker, Sigurd Wexo, manager. Seventy-six-year-old authentic Lincoln election posters, used in his second campaign, made an impressive lobby display at the Parkway, John Berger, manager. An usher, dressed as Abe Lincoln, was used for street ballyhoo by the Park, Arthur Gilgar, manager.

Coloring Contests Favored

The RKO Orpheum, Harold F. Daly, manager, held a scrambled photo contest, using for cut-ups faces of Massey and Shirley Temple. Prizes were given for the neatest, correct solutions. At the Lincoln, Eugene Spencer, manager, was able to show trailers on these pictures at the Mark Twain Memorial High School.

Many novel publicity stunts were used to exploit "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." At the Chester, William E. Cook, manager, had a tie-up with local cigar store, where they displayed "magic bullets" in a bowl. Those who came nearest to guessing the right number of bullets received guest tickets. Jewish heralds were used at the RKO Franklin, Sam Rydell, manager, which house also sent out letters to physicians' wives, urging them to see picture.

Publicity on "Swiss Family Robinson," directed mostly at schools and libraries, brought good results. The Roosevelt, Max Sloven, manager, held coloring contests in schools as did the Madison, Harry Weiss, manager. This house also gave away books as prizes to pupils writing best essay on picture. Tie-up with milk company resulted in use of bottle caps. Jerome Baker, manager of the Capitol, Union City, made tie-up with local paper on a contest, seeking North Hudson's "Swiss Family Robinson." Winners were entertained at dinner and theatre.

On "Grapes of Wrath" most theatres worked

PLAY SWEET POTATOES ON "SINGAPORE" TIEIN

For the last day of "Singapore" at the Bonham, Fairbury, Neb., Jim Redmond drummed up a stage contest for high school students to make music on sweet potatoes, as in the picture. Built up ahead, the contest brought the days' top business for the run.

Campaign Briefs On Recent Dates In Various Cities

Staged every Sunday night with government permission is a song fest at the Grand Theatre, in Kingston, Ontario, arranged by Tom McCoy. Collections are made at each performance and the proceeds donated to some worthy organization. Also, with a military camp located nearby, Tom takes entertainers over each week to put on a show for the boys.

Lobby display that created comment is the one used by Lew Harris at the Fairbanks, in Springfield, Ohio, for "The Invisible Man" consisting of black drop on which was tacked a dicky, collar and tie, pair of white gloves and top hat set half way into panel. On one side was an electric chair with dickey wired in the middle, collar and shoes and on the other a scaffold with dickey, collar and tie hanging loose. Sign on chair read "He was electrocuted and on the scaffold he was hanged until dead."

For his campaign on "Our Neighbors, the Carters," Max Page, manager of the State Theatre, in Greenfield, Ind., planted a good neighbor contest which was sponsored by local paper and theatre. As per announcement run in cooperating daily, residents were invited to vote on a ballot printed in the paper, for Greenfield's most neighborly couple. After the winner had been decided upon, they were taken to the Mayor's office and presented with a six month's pass to the theatre. Picture of the presentation together with story was run by the paper opening day.

Discovering that he had an old picture in his family album of Geronimo shaking hands with his uncle, Rupert Koblegard, Jr., manager of the New Sunrise Theatre, in Fort Pierce, Fla., contacted local paper and planted the picture together with story in advance of his opening of that date.

Local daily carried 150 lines recently on Bill Burke's "Black Friday" and "Seven Gables" gag at the Eckel, in Syracuse. Management offered ten dollars in cash to any couple who would sit alone through a midnight screening of the dual show in absolute darkness. Photographer was to be on hand to take candid shots of reactions, but there were no "takers."

English teachers in local high schools were covered by Ted Irwin of the Star Theatre, Lyons, Kan., with the result that students wrote essays on the text of "Invisible Stripes" then current at his theatre. Newspaper contest offered tickets to those submitting best 500 word letters on whether or not they would hire an ex-convict.

Reported as highly successful was the spring fashion show put on by George Pappas at the Point Theatre, in Powhatan Point, Ohio. Local shop furnished the models, gowns and music at no cost to the theatre. Daily paper covered the event.

Temple Coloring Contest Arranged for "Bluebird"

Through the cooperation of local five and ten chain, a Shirley Temple coloring contest was put over for "The Bluebird" by Manager Pete Egan and publicist George Shafer at the Palace, Calgary. Contestants were obliged to purchase the coloring book at one of the cooperating stores and color three or more drawings for prizes. Window displays were devoted to contest well in advance in addition to picture plug.

On "Charley McCarthy Detective," one of the highlights was the scene mat and story that was planted in a local radio magazine which is distributed gratis weekly by station and covering Calgary and surrounding districts. Also tieup was made with Chase and Sanborn for window displays, five and ten featured the McCarthy dolls and suckers.

Bannan Cracks Ace Window With "Allegheny" Display

The gas company windows on Main street in Van Wert, Ohio, are the hardest to crack, writes George Bannan, in describing how he finally landed the display space with an exhibit of antiques on "Allegheny Uprising." What did the trick included flint lock guns some six feet long, an early wooden pistol, Indian tomahawk, buckskin ammunition bags with powder horns, arrow heads, etc. All the items were placed on a board, four feet by 10, which occupied the entire window, to create more attention than anything similar Bannan has yet used.

Libraries and book stores were covered by cards, pictorial sheets placed in the high school and YMCA. For a gag, George placed a sign on an old cigar store Indian in a popular smoke shop. Copy read, "See me and all my tribe in," etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Waltmon Ties Pilgrimage To Theatre Showings

The annual Spring Pilgrimage, in Columbus, Miss., wherein owners of historical homes open their residences to visitors from all over the country, was tied in to his program by Manager Burgess Waltmon, at the Princess via a stage show the day ahead, in form of a fashion exhibit of the past. Local girls, wearing ante-bellum costumes which were a part of the festivities, appeared in their costumes, the program arranged by Waltmon being in keeping with the event.

Entitled "Garden Fete," the Round Tabler promoted some 60 girls to take part, at no extra expense to the theatre, the proceedings stressed in all the newspaper publicity, including front page mentions.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hosts Ehrlich's Family

Since the daughter and granddaughter of Dr. Ehrlich are residents of Waterville, Maine, Round Tabler Jim O'Donnell succeeded in having them accept invitation to attend opening of that picture at the M. & P. Haines theatre. Interview was also granted the theatreman which was good for story in local paper in which title and theatre were prominently mentioned.

NEWSPAPER

ADVERTISING ON LATE DATINGS

(Below) Repetition as noted here even to the theatre slug was tied to the title in the third week holdover on "My Son" at Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, by adman Milt Harris, who doesn't come from Walla Walla. Size: 80 lines on 2 col.

for extra newspaper publicity, which resulted in special columns and editorials. Newark newspapers gave much publicity to picture's showing at Proctor's, Newark, where Manager Bob Ungerfeld also arranged for numerous bookstore tie-ups. At the Coliseum, A. E. Arnstein, manager, had huge book ballyhoo with stunt man walking inside of replica of book.

"Gulliver's Travels" resulted in many tie-ups to attract juvenile trade. J. Goldberg, manager of the Shore Road, tied in with Home-Talk, local weekly, for coloring contest. At the Jefferson R. Rockwell, manager, in co-operation with a macaroni company, gave away free Gulliver model stages. The Uptown, R. Kramer, manager, in connection with drug store, gave away Gulliver glasses.

During John J. O'Connor month, the Yorktown, Millard Ochs, conducted a beautiful child contest in neighborhood, winners being judged from photos. The Broad, James Conklin, manager, went after juvenile trade by giving away "mystery funnies" at kiddie parties. David Levin of the State made book store tie-ups on "Northwest Passage," giving away books as prizes. The Palace at Trenton, H. Josephick, manager, received much extra publicity on "Earl of Chicago." At the Alhambra, Herbert Heintz, manager, tied in with shoe store on several pictures for give-away of shoes. Manager J. B. Anderson, Rivoli, New Brunswick, received much extra space in papers when for "Seventeen," opening day, he admitted any boy or girl free, who was just 17. The State, at Trenton, Walter Grove, manager, promoted free ads in Rider College News and local Italian newspaper, for several of the shows.

The handling of all this publicity and exploi tation was directly under the supervision of Harry Mandel, head of the RKO theatres publicity and the press agents for the various divisions, who include Fred Herkowitz, Ed Sniderman, Pat Grosso and Maurice Harris.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

Well Joe!

I'VE PUT IN THAT PAIR OF "ONE KILOWATT" ARCS

● Believe me, they are the real thing. These low wattage High Intensity arcs mean a lot to the small theatre.

You ought to see the difference in my screen light — I wouldn't have believed it possible.

Do my patrons notice it? You bet they do! I defy anyone to put on a better show either in color or black and white.

And you'd be surprised, Joe, how little it costs to install and operate these new arcs. It's the best investment I've made in a long time.

You'd better get on the band wagon!

THE NEW "ONE KILOWATT" ARCS USE "NATIONAL" "SUPREX" AND "OROTIP" CARBONS.

HIGH INTENSITY CARBON ARC LAMPS

supply all the spectral colors in essentially even balance. That is why they give true color reproduction.

The words "National," "Suprex" and "Orotip" are registered Trade-Marks of National Carbon Company, Inc.

POPULARITY

Popularity is earned. International Chairs have received public favor through merit alone. Greater comfort—greater beauty—greater value —minimum maintenance — greater structural features account for their popularity. All welded steel construction; Freedom from exposed nuts and bolts; Hingeless seat suspension; Upholstered backs without tacks; Floating comfort seats; Exceptional durability; Formfitting postures; Exclusive designs and color.

Before you buy any chair, see—compare—test International. You'll be glad that you did.

MARKET NOTES:

Evaporative Type Cooling Unit

A SELF-CONTAINED cooling unit, employing the evaporative method of heat absorption, has been brought out by the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation of New York. It has been developed to be placed in any relatively small area, such as a projection room, lobby, in a balcony or in toilet rooms. Where necessary for proper cooling effect, several units may be placed together. This equipment is available in units ranging in capacity from 3,500 to 22,000 cubic feet of air per minute, recirculating 4 gallons of cooling water per minute. Each unit is equipped with a rotary atomizer, and a fiber filter chemically treated to eliminate odors and pollen.

S. O. S. also announces the issuance of new pieces of descriptive literature on their multi-cellular horn system, screen, sound systems and heads, and projection lenses.

Display and Traffic Equipment

A LOOSE-LEAF booklet devoted to theatre art metals, for display frames, lobby posts, push bars, ticket booth shutters, speaking tubes and metal letters, is available from the Decorative Metal Products Company of Detroit. The display frames in this line are of solid aluminum with bronze hinges, or frames of bronze, stainless steel or chrome may be specified. Lobby posts are of either chrome or aluminum.

Named Distributors

APPOINTMENT of the Indiana Theatre Equipment Corporation, Indianapolis, as distributors of Motiograph projection and sound equipment in the Indianapolis territory, is announced by the manufacturer. It is also stated that the newly formed Central Theatre Supply Company of Louisville, Ky., is now associated with the Indianapolis Theatre Equipment Corporation in the distribution of Motiograph projection and sound products in the Louisville area.

Color Book on Formica

A NEW COLOR chart on Formica, laminated synthetic finishing material, has been issued by the Formica Insulation Company of Cincinnati. Available in practically all standard colors, Formica is also obtainable in simulated marble finish, and simulated linen and simulated wood finishes.

District Office Changed

THE DISTRICT office of the Century Electric Company in Chicago, has been removed to 600 W. Van Buren Street, according to an announcement of the company, who are manufacturers of a complete line of motors as well as of motor-generators, with general offices located in St. Louis.

STRIKING, DURABLE DOORS

AND WALL COVERING FOR THEATER LOBBIES!

FORMICA is colorful and attractive when used on theater doors and lobbies. Almost any color or combination is available and the widest variety of decoration in designs inlaid in one color over another, or metal inlaid on color can be had. The striking beauty of these doors has made them very popular with the leading theatrical architects like John Eberson, who designed the doors on the Washington Theatre shown in the pictures.

Formica is very hard and durable; it is stable in color; it is much easier cleaned with less polishing than are metal doors. Hundreds of new and remodeled theaters have installed these doors in the past few years and in many of them the material was used also for lobby wall covering, box office panels, etc.

Let us send you the facts.

SMPE Turns Its Light on Exhibition

IT IS conventions of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers like the latest one that demonstrate how closely the interests of such a group are linked to the practical affairs of theatre operation. The connection is always there, but the Atlantic City meeting in April made it clearer than usual. Even the prominent attention given television, which represented an entirely proper desire to keep well up with technical developments pertinent, however indirectly, to the industry, was given a rather practical turn theatre-wise, while projection had a field day.

The projection session burst through the generous limits given it by the convention schedule. Expected to take one morning, it continued through an afternoon supposed to be devoted to boardwalking. There were papers by practical projectionists as well as "laboratory fellows."

Growing interest in "black light" decoration has inspired a distinctly new type of ornamentation in synthetic veneers. Illustrated is fluorescent Formica, development of which has just been announced by the Formica Insulation Company of Cincinnati. Already widely used for theatre doors, wall paneling, wainscot, box offices and fountain backgrounds, Formica can now be applied to "black light" decorative features. The design shown, for example, would be uniquely attractive as a background for a foyer drinking fountain.

Obsolete Equipment

T. P. Hover, who works in a theatre in Lima, Ohio, had a paper on projection hazards in which he blamed obsolete equipment quite as much as negligence of managements and staffs for the unsafe conditions that may be found here and there. He also pointed out that inadequate projection room layouts were prime causes of accidents and projectionists' illnesses, which ultimately cost the theatre operator money, either in inefficiency or compensation.

Unquestionably, Mr. Hover put his finger on a matter of the utmost practical importance to the exhibitor which is nevertheless constantly overlooked because of preoccupation with the more superficial aspects of operating economy. There are one or two notable exceptions, but the rule is that obsolete equipment, producing low-grade results, also is expensive in the long run.

►The SMPE itself has provided standards for guidance in planning and wiring the projection room, and in general the newer theatres provide a safe, efficient, commodious workshop for the projection staff. But plenty of the old theatres, even though remodeled to present quite handsome public areas, have projection rooms below the requirements of the average code, not to mention those of now accepted practice, while the increasing establishment of extremely small theatres, many of them in little towns and characteristically in existing commercial buildings, is tending to nullify the efforts of the industry to reduce theatre hazards and to create better projection facilities generally. The scheme submitted in the Modern Projection department in this issue, as a basis for the planning of projection rooms in such small theatres, is offered specifically in response to this situation.

New York adds another theatre to its Times Square. Called the New York, the new house, located directly across from the Paramount on Broadway, and originally intended to present feature pictures, is devoted to newsreels. It is another property in the growing Brandt circuit. The seating capacity is 600. Incidentally (this issue being especially concerned with such matters), the attraction display in this view, using Wagner 10-, 16- and 24-inch letters, offers a good example of "typographical" handling of copy.

Projectionist's Role

Doubtless for the first time in the SMPE's career (and this was the 46th semi-annual convention), the projectionist was drawn into the activities of theatre planning in a paper addressed directly to him by a theatre architect. Ben Schlanger, who is chairman of the committee on theatre design, pointed out that although the projectionist is not likely to be able to influence much that the architect does, he can advise concerning the provision of facilities that will directly affect his work, and more especially can he bring to the attention of the management, conditions in an existing theatre which impair picture presentation. Mr. Schlanger cited screen size, position, illumination, masking and borders as critical points for the projectionist to watch for the purpose of suggesting changes that would effect improvement.

►Somewhat along the same line, Harry Rubin, Paramount supervisor of projection, placed among the duties of circuit projection heads, the examination of the blueprints of theatre projects so that hazards, inefficient arrangements, and technical mistakes may be eliminated before, rather than after, the theatre is built.

Audience Noise

Expressing, in a sense, the new interest that Hollywood is taking in the way its product is offered to the public, W. A. Mueller of Warner Brothers, described the volume problem raised by audience noise. Traffic up and down aisles and along rows, shuffling of feet, whispering, etc., creates noise of a level amounting, according to tests he had made, to about 8 decibels, which, he pointed out, represents a substantial portion of the total sound volume sensible to the human ear (something like a third for the general run of people).

He urged theatre operators to make every effort to eliminate all equipment noise in order to counterbalance audience noise. He might have added, but didn't, that audience noise itself is least when the customers can see the screen without going through neck calisthenics, and when they can breathe and sit comfortably. Also when they are not bored by the picture—but that's another story.

►In the April issue of BETTER THEATRES,

W. B. Rayton of Bausch & Lomb was reported as saying that cleaning of the new coated projection lenses should be done at the factory. In a paper at the SMPE meeting on these lenses, Dr. Rayton indicated that they could be in service about six years, according to present observations, before cleaning of the lenses internally would be necessary. While the Super-Cinephor lenses are now coated, he said that a cheaper series of uncoated lenses (the Cinephor f. 2) had also been issued. This is not an anastigmat type, as is the coated Super-Cinephor.

Sound Planning

One of the most impressive of the papers dealing directly with the practical interests of Exhibition, was that of Charlie (otherwise known as C. C.) Potwin. Emphasizing the importance of planning for good sound and of distributing materials most efficiently, he urged greater control of auditorium cubage as a means of simplifying the acoustic problem. He called the auditorium "the most expensive single unit of the sound transmission system."

The shaping of walls and ceiling to control sound reflections (and this enters into the reduction of total cubic contents of the auditorium as well) can follow many forms, he pointed out, that have decorative value. Among the design devices cited were angular and splayed forms, running either vertically or horizontally. Horizontal convex curves are also of value, and a projection of only about an inch to the running foot is sufficient, Mr. Potwin said, for such angular or curving surfaces, in most instances.

With architectural shaping to control reflections, acoustic correction materials can be used with maximum efficiency, he continued, with the materials so distributed that reflection is toward absorbent surfaces.

As to control of cubage, Mr. Potwin declared that this was most difficult in the case of single-floor auditoriums, easiest with balcony houses. This is due to the fact that balcony houses provide a greater amount of dispersion of sound at the rear. He pointed to the prospect, however, that the cubage of single-floor auditoriums will be readily reduced by the introduction of ceilings which slope or step down somewhat rapidly at the rear and sides, and of walls which, instead of closing in toward the screen end, converge rather toward the rear of the auditorium.

My Competitors proved to me . . . It Pays to Modernize with a Pittco Front

WHAT THEATRES in your neighborhood are drawing the crowds? Two to one they're theatres with modern fronts. The Paramount Theatre in Kinston, N. C. has found that a modern Pittco Front is one sure way to increase its eye-appeal—win it new customers.

"I WATCHED my competitors modernizing. Saw business slipping away from me as new and remodeled theatres kept taking my customers one by one. I had thought that my reputation and the quality of the entertainment I provided were enough to insure my continued success. But I can see now that if theatregoers don't like the outside of your theatre, they just won't come inside. And that's why I'm going to remodel my theatre with a Pittco Front. I want to be sure that I get my share of the entertainment business."

When you remodel your theatre, see your architect to assure an economical, well-planned job. Our staff of experts will gladly cooperate with him in planning a Pittco Front to suit your needs. WHICH DO YOU WANT—

Building or Advertising Appeal?

• On this decision depends a sound choice of modern or traditional front treatment, declares the theatre architect who here discusses application of each style

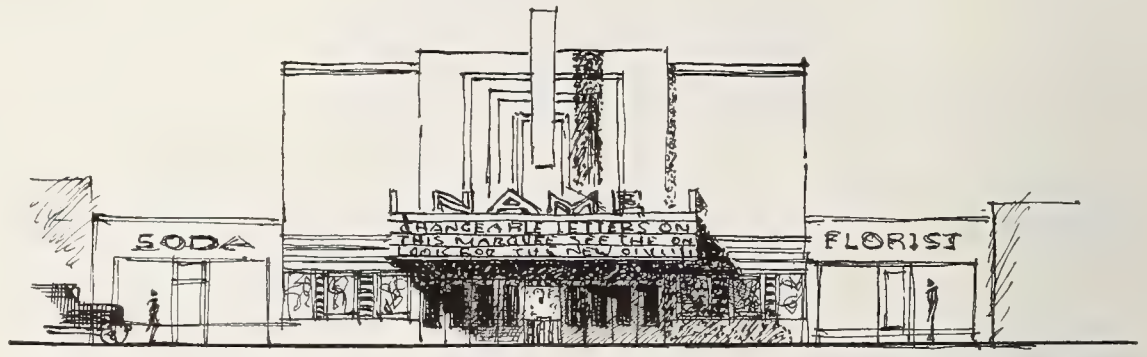
By BEN SCHLANGER

MORE AND MORE there are being erected motion picture theatre structures which possess facades that are architecturally suited to their surroundings. While these newer fronts are based on both traditional and modern architecture, in all cases their general scheme and treatment present a complete departure from tradition as it used to be applied to motion picture theatres.

They depart from tradition in one significant manner, and that is the refinement of advertising display. Marquees are better formed and often are reduced in projection, while display frames are better distributed, leaving sufficient front surface available for architectural treatment.

Most of the recent theatre construction is to be found in other than the busier, transient city locations. The small towns, city suburbs and residential areas of cities are the places where most attention is being given to theatre design today.

In these instances, two factors stand out as being important influences in establishing theatre facade character. First it is recognized that in outlying districts street advertising need not be blatant to create patronage; and second, land costs permit greater frontage widths for the exclusive use of the facade.



It is almost impossible to create any architectural character for the theatre front if doors, display frames and marquee signs literally cover the building. It is also difficult to create the necessary architectural impressiveness when the entire facade is limited to the width of the lobby, with the theatre proper hidden at the rear of the plot. A great many theatres have been built in locations where the above handicaps and conditions did not exist, yet the finished buildings unfortunately showed that these unrelated influences had their effect in the design.

The tendency now is to locate theatres closer to residential areas rather than on downtown streets, and for this reason there is justification for getting away from the gaudy, lithographed type of front. These new theatres must express permanence, stimulate confidence in the management, relate themselves intimately to the communities they serve.

The theatre front must be attractive in daylight as well as at night. Toning down of displays and signs does not mean that the facade should be lifeless at night. On the contrary, there are innumerable architectural lighting schemes which can create refined attractiveness.

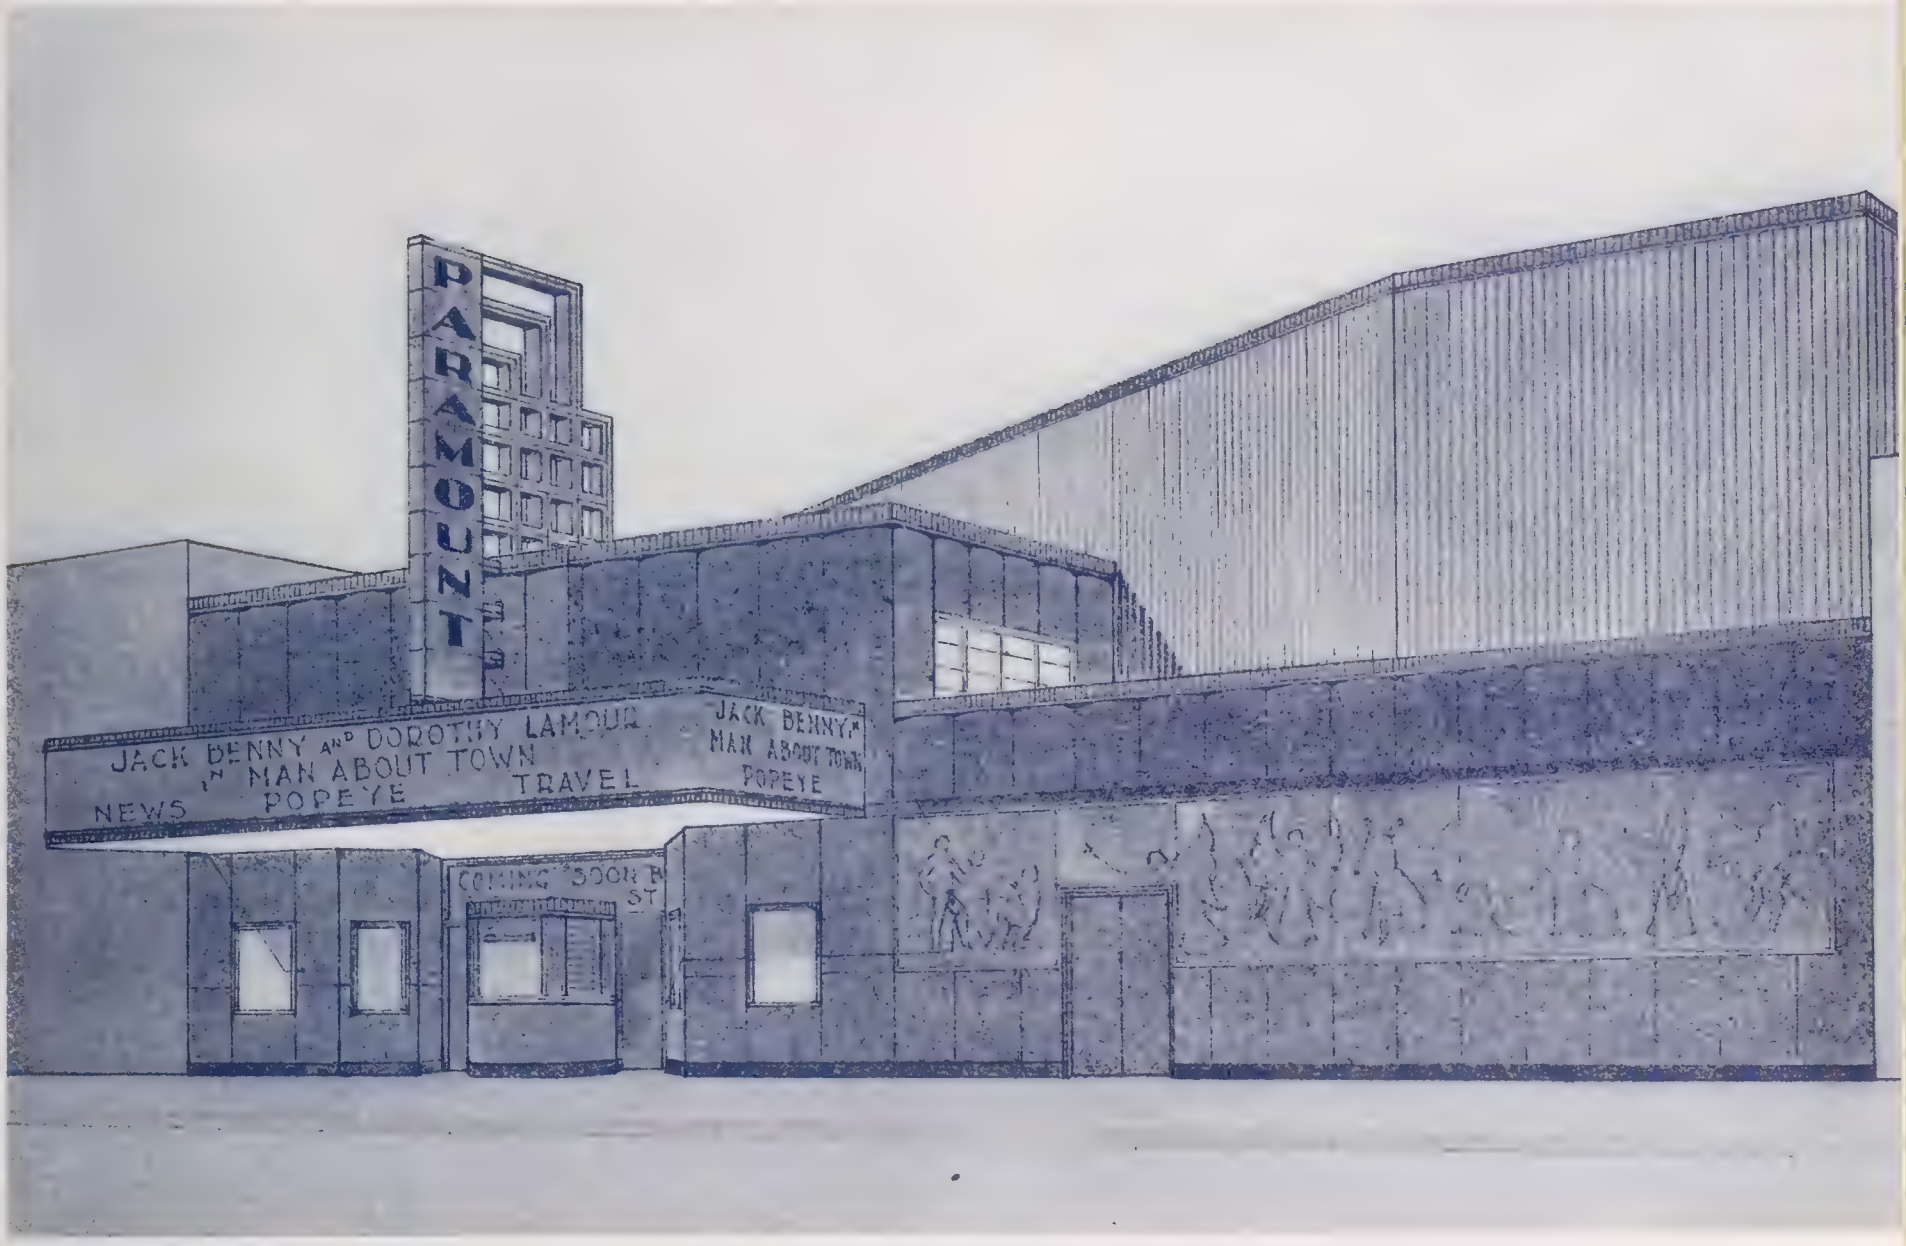
A theatre front today may very well be either modern or traditional in character. The approach to design, however, is different in each case. For example, in such traditional styles as Colonial, Georgian, Classical, etc., it is advisable, from a design point of view, to eliminate attraction advertising from a projected marquee. It is even best to avoid the conventional marquee altogether. It is also necessary to avoid large electric name signs, at least in their usual location. For the average situation, where electric signs and prominent attraction advertising may be desired, it would be better to use a modern design rather than to try to mix a period style with modern devices.

Further, the use of an inside, or lobby, ticket selling arrangement is preferable with the traditional design. Nor is an outside ticket booth always essential if the first set of lobby doors are made completely of glass, or almost all glass. Glass doors make an inside ticket counter visible and even attractive to people on the street.

An example of the rigidly balanced type of front. It has modern lines, but on a traditional basic form. General impression is that of too much detail for the surface area.—THE AUTHOR.

A composition avoiding "static balance," introducing instead the balance of directional lines (horizontally and vertically). General impression is one of rhythm and simplicity.—THE AUTHOR.

Old Style, Modern Devices



In those instances in which it is felt that some electric sign display, changeable letter panels, and an outside ticket office, as well as a marquee are necessary, and when it is also desirable to obtain architectural character consistent with a traditional background, there is still another logical design approach. In such cases a modified and modernized Classical or Georgian design can be used. The theory of this design is to greatly simplify the traditional forms, even taking license to break away somewhat from the original forms; however, the original type of finish materials must be adhered to, such as brick, stone, wood, slate, copper, etc.

For example, you might have an extremely simple red brick wall treatment, trimmed for traditional purposes with a Georgian cupola or tower, or some other top piece. This would leave the lower

Emphasizing Architectural Glass and Porcelain Enamel

THREE ORIGINAL TREATMENTS

By CHARLES C. BURTON
Architect and Engineer,

OUTLYING SHOPPING DISTRICT

■ The design on this page is based on one for which porcelain enamel was specified as the main facing material, but architectural glass would of course be as well adapted from a design point of view. Although no specific colors are mandatory, many combinations being as suitable, the following treatment indicates the effect intended by the designer: Buff or tan facing above red base and green wainscot, with upper facing fluted. Vertical sign of yellow glass supported by steel frame of decorative design. Marquee attraction panels yellow glass.

THREE FRONT DESIGNS

DOWNTOWN BUSINESS DISTRICT

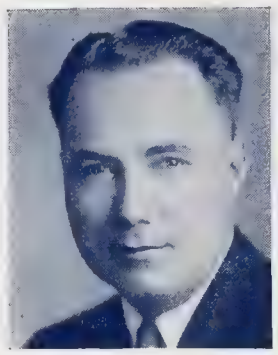
THREE FRONT DESIGNS
By Charles C. Burton

RESTRICTED RESIDENTIAL SECTION

■ The general features suggested in the design below are a capacity of 600, limited ground dimensions with 60-foot frontage, parking space in rear reached by driveway on side of building. Further, generous lounge provisions would be made, with these being placed (as is feasible in a community theatre) on the second floor, where they provide prominent features of the front treatment. The designer's front suggestions are: Dark blue architectural glass base with vermilion band above in glass or porcelain enamel. Parapet of glazed brick in buff. Ticket booth with vermilion glass base and light blue venetian blinds. Attraction panels of cream-colored glass. Bronze (preferably) or aluminum display frames, recessed, with fluted glass panels underneath frames, in buff. Fluted glass panels also on corners of ticket booth.

MODERN REPLACEMENT

Charles DePaul's new Princess in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Kaplan & Sprachman, Architects



FRONT VIEW OF THE NEW THEATRE (presenting, too, Manager Chilton and members of his service staff).

CHARLES DE PAUL The St. Mary's river separates the United States from Canada, making Charles DePaul a working internationalist, for besides the Princess in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, he operates the Soo, Temple, Colonial and Strand across the river, in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan. Charles DePaul has been an exhibitor for 28 years, but he didn't begin his business career as one. Coming to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., as a young man, he took a partnership in a hotel. It was the theatre next door to the hotel that finally got him. He saw in "moving pictures" some interesting possibilities, and he ultimately persuaded the owner of the theatre to take him in as a partner. Later on he talked as effectively to the operator of another theatre. The Princess on the Canadian side is the latest acquisition of the group he now owns. The present Princess, as was its predecessor, is managed by William Chilton, who has taken charge of the new property in his tenth year in showbusiness.

THE Princess theatre in Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, owned and operated by Charles DePaul, had a good location and a steady patronage, but not enough seating; nor did it meet today's standards in style and plan.

It was a small theatre, only 31 feet wide, and any plan of expansion could not increase the seating appreciably by lengthening the building. Widening was considered but rejected. The existing building was not fireproof and major structural alterations would have necessitated fireproofing the old portions including the roof. A new building was really required, and Mr. DePaul agreed that it was good business to wreck the entire theatre, even though this meant losing business while the new structure was being erected. Nothing remains of the old building except a portion of a wall at the south.

WILLIAM CHILTON

The new Princess seats nearly 1,000. The building is now 62 feet wide, with an average length of 138 feet. A stadium type floor was decided upon to give the maximum seating without the expense of a balcony. Except for space occupied by the projection room gallery, seating extends to front wall over foyer and lobby.

General Plan

The plan is irregular due to the front of the building being at an angle of 20° to the side walls. Entrance to the auditorium is by ramps at side walls to cross aisles. Except for the first three rows, the stadium is stepped. The edge of the stadium is 3 feet, 8 inches above the cross-aisle. Public rooms include a lobby 22 feet wide, with an average depth of 10 feet; a foyer 14 feet deep and extending across the building to ramps; and a lounge 30 feet wide and 9 feet deep. The lounge is down three steps.

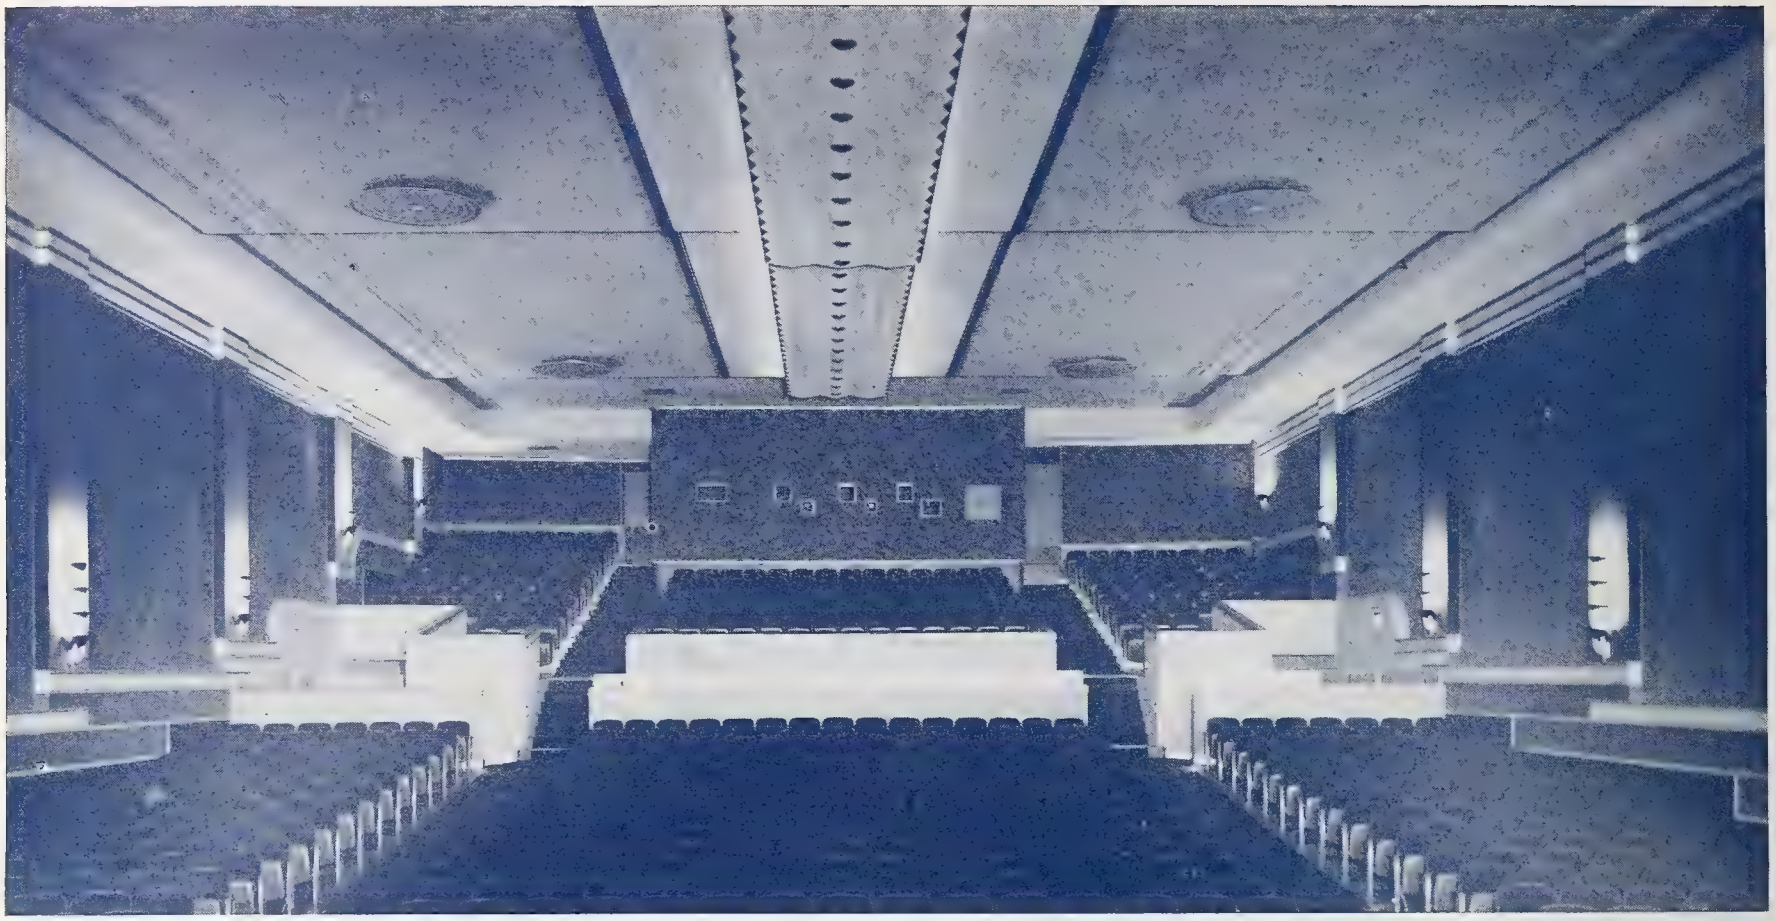
Other rooms, under the stadium, include men's and women's toilet accommodation, while the remainder of the space is used for a manager's office, an usher's room, and a storage room. The heating and air-conditioning equipment was placed under the stage.

The projection gallery is supported on the stadium. This contains a projection room 19 feet wide with an average depth of 11 feet, a rewind room with toilet, and a generator room. The projection gallery is of acoustical plaster.

The Front

The owner stipulated that the existing marquee, which was only a few years old, be reused; however, the marquee was modernized with Adler silhouette type attraction boards using flashed opal glass.



The front is of simple modern design in buff pressed brick relieved with darker brick. Below the marquee, however, the entire front is surfaced with Vitrolite structural glass to a height of 11 feet above the sidewalk. The color is mainly black, with some primrose and red.

There are six entrance doors with semi-circular glass panels. Jambs are splayed, permitting wider display boxes. The ticket booth is in Vitrolite—black trimmed with primrose and red—and a sanded panel below the deal plate has a sanded ship design.

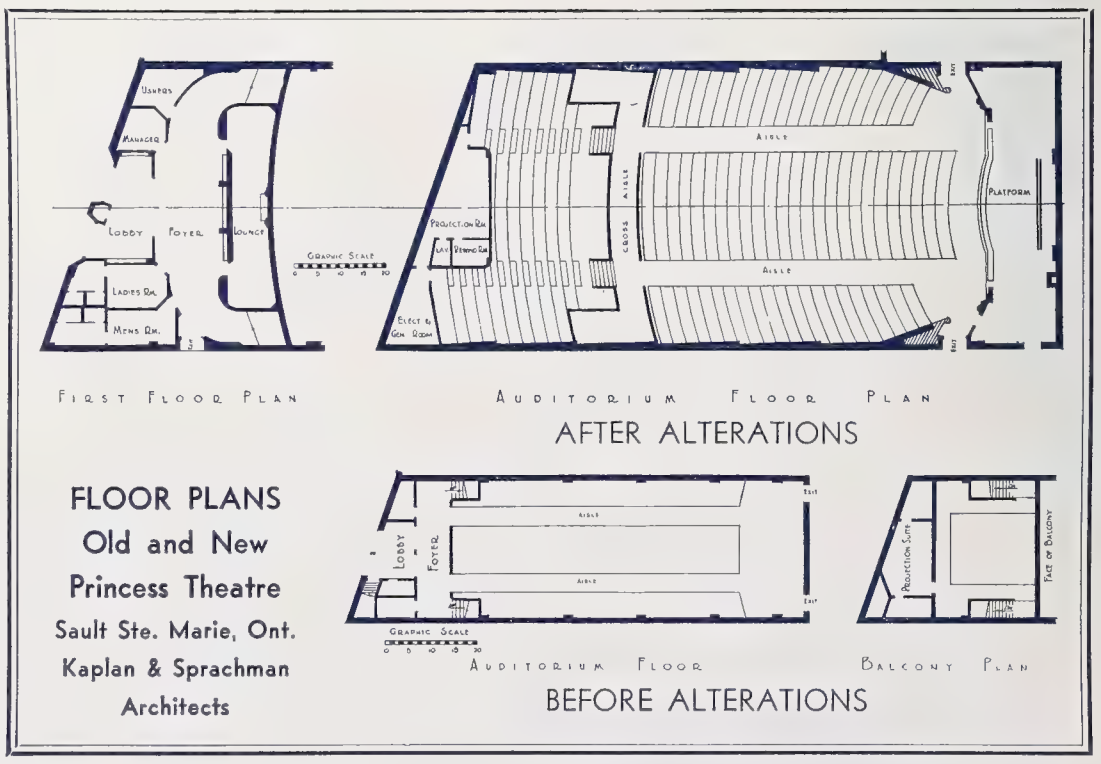
Lobby and Foyer

The lobby is simple in design, with tan walls and an asphalt tile floor patterned in black and two shades of tan. Shadow boxes are located at each end. Gold neon in a plaster cove provides the lobby illumination.

The foyer has textured plaster walls and ceiling and a dado of three wood strips horizontally extending from the walls, up ramps, to the auditorium. Lighting is by plaster trough at lobby wall with orange amber neon, and ceiling slopes down to a "waiting room," or foyer lounge. Walls and ceiling are in three tones of tan and buff, graduated to the ceiling. The carpet is patterned, but predominantly red. There is a china drinking fountain with a black Vitrolite and mirror background.

The "waiting room" area is down three steps from the foyer, and at the steps between the two sections are two rectangular Vitrolite and mirror columns. On the wall opposite the steps is a simple plaster mantel. Carpeting in this foyer-lounge is burgundy. Walls are light mulberry, the ceiling eggshell. Lighting is from a trough over the mantel, and by torchiers.

The Auditorium



The auditorium is done in a colorful modern style, with walls (except at the proscenium) covered with red patterned velour from the wainscot to a frieze, or stripe effect along the upper edge. Pilasters are of blue velour, unpatterned. Rock wool is used behind all wall panels for acoustical treatment, and in some portions for insulation. The wainscot is of hard plaster painted in three graduated tones of red and trimmed with wood strips.

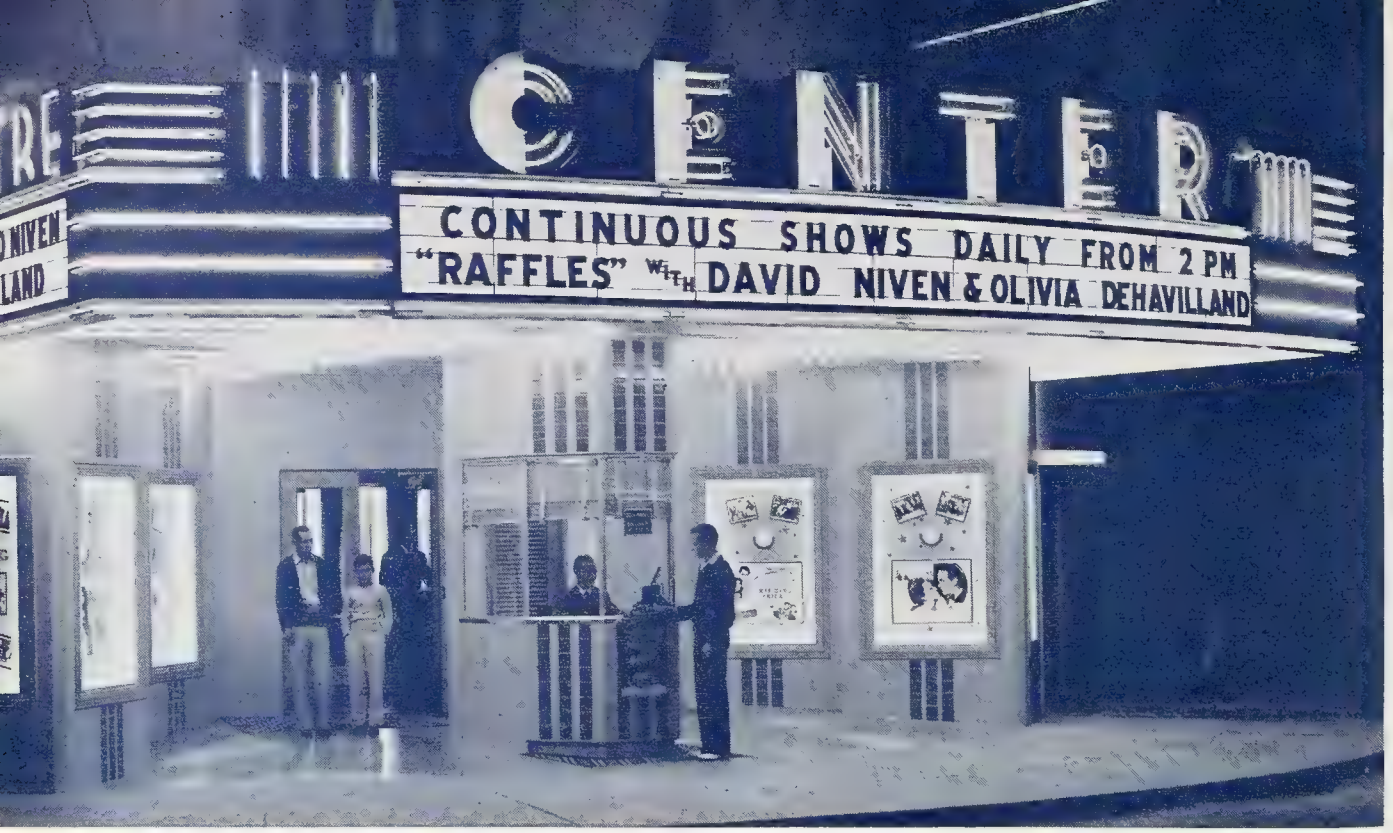
The treatment at the proscenium arch is in striking contrast to that elsewhere. Where the wall extends from the arch, a panel effect has been created in plaster painted white and with a block pattern in gold, harmonizing with the frieze along the upper edge of the side walls.

The ceiling, which is finished in hard plaster, is painted buff, for ground color. Given a stepped formation, rising to the rear of the auditorium, the ceiling is longitudinally divided by a plaque running its full length, so suspended as to form two light-troughs containing neon tubing.

The portion of the ceiling near the arch is 2 feet higher than normal and in this area is concealed luminous tubing providing a line of yellow light. This and the ceiling troughs are the sources of running light; house illumination is supplied by pilaster fixtures consisting in four half-spheres with plate-glass vertical fins.

The seating, arranged in three banks with two aisles, and employing the American Seating Company's "Bodiform" model, enters the color scheme boldly through the mohair back and leatherette seat coverings, which are coral.

ILLUSTRATING



SHOWMANSHIP OUT FRONT

■ The use of colorful patterns to give the whole front the ballyhoo touch, with the flash of a great "litho," but in fine materials that lend quality to the treatment. This is the front of Ray Allison's Rivoli theatre in Altoona, Pa., as recently remodeled, using Davidson porcelain enamel, and with an Artkraft porcelain enamel marquee, attraction advertising equipment, and extruded aluminum display frames, which it will be noted, are drawn into the entire front design.

■ Providing for eye-attracting "life" and attraction advertising with a narrow front on a busy city thoroughfare with many competing signs. This treatment is that of the Empire in Syracuse, which uses Adler attraction advertising equipment in a clever marquee arrangement and also across the entrance doors. The latter also is illuminated. Note use of 4-inch letters in combination with 10-inch letters; the Empire also employs 16- and 24-inch letters as advised by the copy. Also of interest is the location of the ticket booth, which leaves the relatively narrow vestibule clear for both traffic and view of vestibule poster and still displays.

■ Making advertising display the front, with marquee and vertical sign designed integrally, with weight (note the supporting marquee appears heavier than the sign) nicely adjusted to building proportions. Dominating even the name sign are the attraction boards, which provide plenty of space for variation of copy and also for perfect legibility and smash by the use of 24-inch letters as well as the smaller sizes. The theatre is the new Nortown in Flint, Mich., designed by C. Howard Crane. With wall construction behind the marquee in tan face brick, this front is otherwise constructed of Maul Macotta (concrete blocks faced with porcelain enamel), in tan above a green base, while columns are Chinese red. The neon illumination is red and green and white fluorescent.

Front Planning to Get Effective Advertising Display

THE THEATRE FRONT, including, as it does, four elements, is the showman's first contact with his public. Like all first contacts, the impression created here in the mind of the prospective theatregoer is definitely a permanent influence working for or against the theatre. The four elements referred to are:

(1) The front of the building above the marquee;

(2) The marquee;

(3) The attraction signs;

(4) The display frames.

Each of these elements has its relation to the whole and contributes to the first impression of the prospective patron. The importance of the front of the building above the marquee depends to some extent upon the width of the street and the opportunity that the general public has to view the front of the theatre as a building.

The theatre marquee had first a utilitarian purpose: that of protecting the front, the ticket booth and the display cases, and the public from inclement weather. Also, it was a means of getting adequate lighting on the sidewalk in front of the theatre.

The marquee attraction boards are perhaps the most important means of advertising that the theatre man has. They appeal to the pedestrian, as well as to the passengers of street cars, busses, and automobiles and afford an opportunity to create brilliance on the street, which in itself attracts attention.

Because of the various local ordinances, the width of marquees from building to curb is definitely established. Generally a minimum height above the sidewalk is established also, so that it requires ingenuity in designing a marquee to afford the theatre manager maximum use of the space available.

Attraction Panel Size

The tendency too often, even today, especially in the smaller cities and towns has been to economize by making these attraction frames too small and using changeable letters that are too small. Changeable letters are, however, available today which permit the use of a variety of sizes, placing at the disposal of the theatre man great variety in the set-up of his marquee advertising.

Unfortunately, most of the marquee attraction frames installed were designed too small to afford such facility to the theatre manager. In my opinion, it is a mistake to retain them, and shortsighted policy not to take advantage of the letters obtainable.

Confusing Decoration

I feel that much of the neon and incandescent lamp decoration of marquee attraction boards has been made so intricate and confusing that it definitely detracts from the effectiveness of the marquee advertising. Some of our marquee boards are as intricate as the iron work trim on some of the old buildings in the New Orleans French Quarter. Such decoration may be intriguing at first, but it does not last long and it does not sell anything.

Display Frame Function

With regard to the display frames that are designed especially to give color at the sidewalk level and to appeal especially to the pedestrian, they can stand a great deal more thought than has been given them in the past. Too frequently, the theatre manager has felt that merely covering every square inch of his front with an attraction board of some sort adds to the appeal of his theatre, whereas a judicious selection of location, size and design of a few boards would have had many times the appeal of the cluttered-up front. I have observed many theatre fronts on which there have been advertised as many as four different pictures at one time.

The sidewalk display frames should perform basically the functions of exploiting the current attraction in the theatre. The patron should not be confused.

marquee attraction boards definitely present a problem in design for the architect, and in connection with the vertical sign and the marquee attraction boards, the architect's design might be tempered by suggestions from the theatre manager or a good advertising man. With regard to the sidewalk frames, these may well be submitted to the judgment of the theatre manager. In many instances, the architect has not provided sufficient depth so that adequate display frames can be installed.

Shadow Box Advantages

We might place display frames in two classes: (1) the surface type frame, which really has no depth; and (2) the shadow-box type of frame that is lighted inside to add brilliance to the attraction display. There is no need for me to say that in this stage of theatre design, the shadow-box type of frame is the most desirable. It contributes brilliance to the front, and a degree of general lighting which is very desirable.

Placement of Displays

Perhaps the most antiquated phase of our theatre fronts today is the arrangement of our material in relation to the eye level of the observer. We are all fully aware that stills are a great attraction, from Broadway to the Sticks, yet you will find theatre operators setting up their sidewalk frames with stills 18 inches or 2 feet from the sidewalk level. If stills have the value which many of us attribute to them, they should be so arranged that adults can observe them carefully without stooping down.

In reference to one- and three-sheets, even paper as large as such material has its proper "horizon," and the frames should be set up so that they can be observed with the least discomfort to the observer. It can be expected that the average adult eye-line is 5 feet, 2 inches from the sidewalk, and with this five-foot-two measurement, the display should be so arranged so that from that point of view and 3 feet back from the display, the display would be most effective.

Be Equipped to Use Effective Attraction Copy

ESSENTIALLY, changeable letter attraction panels for the front of the theatre, on the marquee and elsewhere, represent outdoor advertising, for which general advertisers pay huge sums in rental, service and lithography. Considered in this light, the theatre front—most especially, of course, the marquee and the area immediately above it — provides advertising space of high-price value, in comparison with which the actual cost to the theatre operator is low.

Even to make the fullest use of this space (which managements are only now beginning to do), the cost remains relatively low with attraction board equipment available today. Cast aluminum silhouette type displays are far more efficiently lighted than those that employed solid back glass letters, and while first costs are comparable, the metal letters are not susceptible to breakage—indeed, when properly racked, they will outlast any theatre.

What we are after, of course, is the most effective attraction advertising, and economy must always be considered from that point of view. Mere announcements are not advertising; they do not actively sell; they are more or less labels. Any advertising must do all it can first to attract attention, then to stimulate desire. A couple of physically monotonous lines, naming a picture or two and several players, undistinguished in arrangement from any previous display, can do neither as well as front attraction advertising demands.

Basic Needs of the Display

There can't be much to read—even were there sufficient space, the copy must attract and get its message across fast. It is precisely because of this that the monotonous announcement, crowded into a narrow space, is relatively wasteful. To attract the eye and be read quickly, the physical arrangement of the copy should be varied, with (as they say in advertising circles) "plenty of white space."

Thus merely to get consistently seen and fully read, current attraction copy needs room. But there is the further consideration of selling force. An extraordinarily popular book or star may provide a title or name with all the punch necessary (anything added to "Gone With the Wind" on the marquee would be anti-climactic). But such pictures and players are few and far between. Most every attraction display is strengthened by a few adjectives or a descriptive phrase. That's ballyhoo. We use such copy in our newspaper ads, don't we?

Printed display advertising, in fact, gives us the cue. Marquee display has its own special conditions to contend with, but the closer it can come to printed display, the more effective it is bound to be.

Clearly, the elongated, narrow horizontal panel emphasizes the limitations of marquee attraction advertising. For sufficient latitude in the selection and arrangement of copy, one needs attraction panels of generous height. Quite often the advertising value of the marquee ends is less than that of the front side, or this relationship may be just the reverse; in such instances, the attraction panels may reasonably vary in height (although both appearance and cost factors are likely to advise uniform panels heights all around). But for prominent display, with essential attractiveness and legibility, and with copy properly apportioned according to the elements of the program and including descriptive matter, four lines are really needed, three lines are absolute minimum, and five lines are definitely to be preferred.

able. Letter size requirements of course vary, but in the majority of situations the size most used for the average piece of copy will be the 10-inch. The 10-inch font should then be augmented by at least two larger sizes—in most instances, 16's and 24's.

Letter size is directly determined by the size of the attraction frame opening, and while the 10-16-24 combination has been found to serve most situations, for a small opening (say, 10x3 feet), an 8-inch letter would be in better proportion than the 10-inch, with the larger sizes reduced accordingly. In this connection it should be pointed out that a 4-inch letter is also available, and with 8-inch letters predominant, and possibly 12-inch letters for initials, this 4-inch size is effective for secondary copy. It is of course a handy size with even larger panels for descriptive copy. Six-inch letters are obtainable, but they are not interchangeable with other sizes. The interchangeable sizes are 4-, 8-, 10-, 12-, 16-, and 24-inch, while 30-inch letters are also available for multiple-line panels.

The number of letters required is also indicated by the size of the frame opening. The method of estimating the quantity employed by one manufacturer is to multiply the lineal footage of the entire panel by 3 for minimum, by 4 for maximum, and by 3½ for "playing safe." For example, if there are three lines all around, and the front panel is 20 feet wide, while the end panels are 12 feet, we would have 20 plus 24 times 3 lines, or 132 total footage, which, multiplied by, say 3, would call for 396 letters, or a 400 font.

Cost Adjustment

This quantity applies, however, only to the predominant, or regular, size used. Far fewer letters of the other sizes would be necessary for effective "typographical" treatment. Indeed, one might find it entirely convenient to get along with fewer letters of the regular size than would be the case if only one size were to be used. One manufacturer makes it a practice of advising the purchase, when three sizes are desired, of only half as many "regulars" as otherwise necessary. Another suggests for the average situation, a full font of the predominant size, and only enough of the larger sizes for occasional words and for initials—for example, about 70 of the 16-inch, and 50 of the 24's, with 500 of the 10-inch letters. The latter plan allows for considerable variation in arrangement, but emphasizes the use of initials rather than complete "typographical" flexibility. Choice, of course, is up to the theatre management.

The more the sizes available to the manager or publicity man making up the attraction copy, the greater the variation he can get into his display from program to program, and the better he can adapt his copy to the specific exploitation needs of each program. It is true that there are a lot of things we would like to have that we can't afford. But one has to be indeed a spendthrift to waste money on selling the show. The only time to think of economy here is when maximum effectiveness has been attained.—George Schutz.

Beauty and Long Life in Shadow Box Construction

IN PUCHASING poster display frames, do we always get a run for our money? Some years ago the theatre could buy all-wood frames, or even kalameined stainless steel, that met the requirement of style, price and, perhaps, quality; however, frames that make a big "splash" for a few months after installation, then deteriorate rapidly, are dear in the long run. With modern manufacturing methods and the great strides taken in the nonferrous metal field, both standard and custom-built display frames can be had of trim, modern lines, possessing unusual beauty, strength and durability.

These frames are aluminum or bronze extruded forms or moulds that have hairline mitred joints eliminating the usual unsightly corners commonly furnished in kalamein and also all-wood frames. The entire frame-work is structurally connected and mechanically locked to form a rigid construction that will endure long, hard service. No screws, rivets or welds are used in these connections. The hollow, seamless, extruded shapes are made by forcing alloy, which has been heated to a suitable plasticity, through a special die. This process may in a way be compared to squeezing a certain toothpaste through the slit in the tube end—it comes out flat. As the alloy comes out from the die, it becomes hard and strong and sets in the pattern given it by the die.

The advantages of metal forms are strength with minimum weight, smooth surfaces and exact lines. Natural aluminum finish stands up under exposure outdoors as well as indoors and has the well groomed appearance not found in frames made of thin materials. It requires no maintenance other than surface cleaning with a dry rag and can be alumilited in natural and bright colors which do not require the protection of a coat of paint.

Structural Considerations

Such frames are adapted to any wall surface, whether existing masonry, structural glass, or Formica, for both exterior and interior use. A recess should be provided before applying finish to wall surface if a recessed flush type frame is desired, with illumination either by lumiline or fluorescent tubes. Where extruded shaped aluminum frames have the advantage over other types are the reinforcings in back of the frame and in each mitre, in both the outside rim and in the door. Any slight settling in the masonry wall will have no effect on the frame or its appearance.

There are, however, several precautions to be taken by either the owner, the architect or the builders. First, he must ascertain the exact size of the display frame from the manufacturer in order to provide the proper recess for the frame. It can be very irritating, costly and embarrassing to find that after the frame has arrived it will not fit the opening; the mason has finished his work and the electrician has pulled his wires, then changes must be made that someone must pay for.

Another thing that is often overlooked is the space for installing the lighting tubes and boxes. This space must be so arranged that the tubes and boxes are entirely hidden from the outside, yet the light sources will properly illuminate the entire display area. The lamps must be arranged to throw light evenly over the display matter. It is best to install the tubes vertically on both sides of, say a 40x60 case (with the 60 inches as the height). If the tubes are installed horizontally—that is, on top and at bottom of the frame only—a dark area will appear at the center of the frame which will reduce considerably the effectiveness of the display.

When the frames are installed on the surface of a finished wall, proper grounds of wood or lead should be provided for fastening them rigidly. In totally enclosed display frames, recessed or surface-mounted, proper ventilating slots should be provided in order to cut to the minimum the fogging effect of the heat from the lamps. Such clouding of the glass of course ruins the displays.

A minor but annoying trouble can be avoided by purchasing a master key to fit all locks on the display frames. If this is not done, you will have a lot of keys to fumble with until the right one is found. These precautions may look negligible, but they are important in day-after-day operation. The front and its displays are the show windows of the theatre. The best use of this space is the best means of increasing and holding patronage.

Not so long ago you could depend on a good show to bring in a good box office. But today people expect good shows wherever they go—so they flock to the theatres where they know they'll be comfortable too.

REAL THEATRE COMFORT in summer calls for clean, fresh air at all times—properly de-humidified, cooled and circulated without annoying drafts. There should be no hot or cold spots in the house. G-E equipment gives just this kind of summer comfort.

WHETHER BIG OR SMALL, your needs can be met by G-E. For General Electric offers a complete line of dependable, efficient equipment for theatre air conditioning. These units are reasonably priced—and operate with typical G-E economy, year after year.

A compact G-E summer air conditioning system will keep your patrons coming back no matter how high the temperature goes. They'll come more often—and bring their friends. In fact, many owners say their G-E equipment pays for itself by the extra business it brings.

YOU'LL WANT TO READ "Air Conditioning for Business." Send the coupon for your free copy. And talk with your local contractor or consulting engineer about a G-E installation.

The Theatre Toilet Room: Its Service and Maintenance

• Concluding a discussion of the care of retiring rooms begun in the April issue

By S. BRAVERMAN

WE BEGAN this discussion of the care of retiring rooms, in the April issue, with consideration of the lounges. We now take up the toilet rooms. From a maintenance point of view, these rooms are the most important of all theatre areas; lack of perfect care here is most quickly evident and most strongly objectionable.

FLOORS

Tile and terrazzo floors are cleaned with a scrubbing brush, using water and soap, sudless cleaner or other detergent. When necessary they should be washed during the day with either a dry or wet mop. Some use muriatic acid for bleaching stained tiles. This is helpful if not done too often; excessive use of the acid tends to make the plaster between tiles brittle. Slightly chlorinated water, or similar compounds, may also be used for bleaching and mopping.

TOILETS

Partitions should be washed frequently. If found scratched or smudged they may need repainting, and rewaxing.

Toilet seats need washing at least once, often several times, a day, with water and antiseptic solution. Seats made of composition material are more costly, but they are extremely durable and they can be sterilized with disinfectants without injury to the finish.

Urinals are perhaps the greatest single headache in toilet room maintenance, with bowls a close second. The most practical attack is by a combination of bowl-cleaning solution and a brush which fits the curves of the surface. It is necessary to swab around the entire urinal or bowl, and particularly behind the lip (the cleaner can use a hand mirror to see behind the lip). Hidden encrustations cause odor!

The top plate of the urinal should be removed, and the space beneath brushed with cleaning solution. "Purisan" is an inexpensive bowl-and-urinal cleaner that is very effective. It is not acidic, does not evaporate, removes encrustations and rust stains, and has a bacteria-killing strength greater than that of carbolic acid.

DEODORANTS

After the cleaning force has achieved perfect cleanliness, the use of deodorants is all right for protection against temporary odors until the next cleaning.

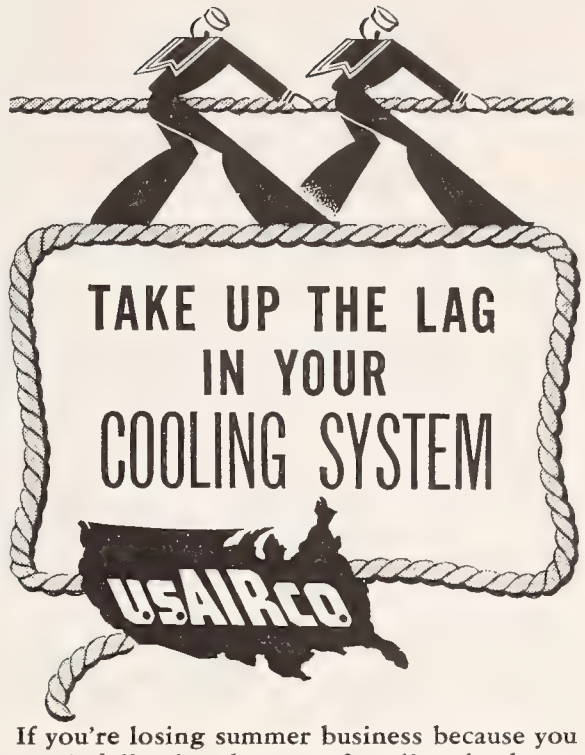
Cone or block deodorants may be placed in the urinals, and a urinal strainer is available accommodating deodorant blocks on its under side—the block remains unseen. Urinal strainers, incidentally, should be porcelain; metal types tend to corrode.

Perfume sprays and disseminators should not be used to hide odors, but to enhance the impression of cleanliness. There are many fragrances, among them pine, which gives a clean, bracing smell suggestive of the woods.

PAPER SUPPLY

Toilet paper holders that restrict drawing more than two sheets at one time are entirely feasible in theatres. Holders for folded sheets are obtainable which match the stalls in color. The paper should be of at least 10-pound stock.

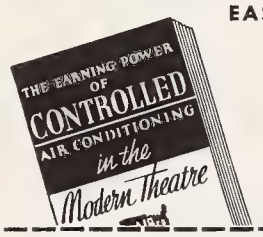
Incidentally, the practice of removing paper during afternoon shows largely patronized by children, is a serious mistake. All patrons are entitled to the convenience, and paper is a cheap "give-away."



Paper towels also should be constantly supplied. The more absorbent they are, the better. They should be of at least 32-pound stock. Automatic towel dispensers are annoying, and cause delay and needless overcrowding between shows. Use the regular kind.

SOAP

Soap is cheap, and the cheapest kind is liquid or lather soap, which may be economically dispensed. Bar soap is messy and may be stolen. The dispensing system mounted in the wall, with only spigot projecting, is neatest; moreover, it cannot be damaged, nor can the dispenser be stolen.



Sources of some small extra revenue in the toilet room worth considering include penny scales, and vending machines for sanitary napkins and handkerchiefs.

Carpeting to Get Rid of that Lobby "No-Man's-Land"

● Noting recent efforts to "bring the interior forward," and how this may be simply achieved by carrying the carpeting up to the entrance doors

WHAT IS a theatre lobby? What function does it perform? Is it a room related to the front or one associated with the interior-proper (foyers, auditorium, etc.)? Or is it functionally a division all by itself, a kind of corridor connecting the entrance to the real interior of the theatre?

A lobby is more or less all of these things, depending upon the floor plan, which in turn is largely influenced by the ground plot.

Commonly, some considerable space is advisable between the front entrance doors and the auditorium, frequently with a second set of doors, so as to shut out both inclement weather and street noises. Such space is probably best identified by the term lobby, to distinguish it conveniently from the area immediately adjoining the sidewalk, which, whether open or not, may be properly called a vestibule. In general, the lobby shape and dimensions are determined by the presence or absence of shops in the building plan, and the distance that the auditorium must be located from the street. One therefore must allow for quite a range of conditions in dealing with its treatment. There is seldom any necessity, however, to treat the lobby as a kind of architectural orphan, recognized offspring neither of front and vestibule, nor of foyer and auditorium.

"Bringing Interior Forward"

How should the lobby be treated? The answer would seem to lie in what we ought to try to achieve in the whole plan of our entrance area. Certainly, we plan the front to attract attention and to sell the show. Then we should create as few barriers as possible between the ticket booth and the interior of the theatre. The patron should have as little physical experience and psychological impression as possible of barriers, of barren hallways, of distance before he can reach the atmosphere and the entertainment that he has paid to enjoy. The real interior of the theatre structure is its foyers, lounges, auditorium. Why not bring this real interior as close to the sidewalk as possible?

That there is today an increasing amount of thought along this line is indicated by recent theatre designs. There have not been enough of them to evidence a definite trend, but the idea, not altogether new, may at last be taking root.

The Effect of Carpeting

A simple means of moving the real interior forward is to carpet the lobby to the entrance doors. Wherever the lobby, because of plot and commercial requirements, cannot be eliminated entirely (one relatively spacious division, treated as a foyer or foyer-lounge, being placed between outer entrance and auditorium), one normally should use the walls for the exploitation of coming attractions. This advertising function, dictated by reasons of space economy, fundamentally influences wall treatment. Display elements, however, can be made decorative as well as interesting. Carpeting introduces the luxury which immediately identifies this area as the theatre interior itself, instead of a passageway which must be plodded through before the theatre-proper is reached.

The lobby of RKO Keith's 81st Street theatre in New York, as recently remodeled. As in the remodeling of several other RKO theatres, the lobby was carpeted (Alexander Smith Caracul is used in the lobby shown above) and Pittsburgh Herculite glass doors were used to effect intimacy and continuity between exterior and interior. Note extension and formation of the rubber mats.

Conditions throughout the theatre (lounges alone being occasionally excepted) generally advise carpeting relatively brilliant in color or bold in pattern. In the auditorium and related area, well defined designs are called for by the dim illumination. Lobby lighting normally should be quite to the contrary, but to disregard here certain local factors that may enter into the choice, lobby carpeting should be on the bright side.

Lobby Should Be Gay

The whole treatment of the lobby should be one of warm welcome. It is part of the move-the-theatre-foward scheme to bring the cheer and glamour of the theatre to the very entrance. This calls for a relatively high light level, and for colorfulness. Lighting of foyer or standee area beyond the lobby can be adequately adjusted to conditioning of the eyes to the auditorium light level. The lobby should be gay. And with walls subdued in treatment so that attraction displays are conspicuous, brilliantly figured carpeting, luxurious underfoot and extending through the full arc of vision, can effectively serve as the chief source of decoration. No decorative element of similar scale runs naturally to the fanciful as does carpeting, and fancifulness is of course the very mood of the theatre.

Inside the entrance of the Academy theatre in suburban Los Angeles, designed by S. Charles Lee. Here one broad, oval room serves as both lobby and foyer, with carpeting to the doors, and all visible from the vestibule. The carpeting here (it is Mohawk Saxony) is figured and of the same pattern used throughout the theatre.

In laying carpeting to the entrance doors, it is advisable to consider the merits of rubber mats just inside the doors. In general, rubber mats in this location reduce carpet wear, since the entering patron turns in passing through a doorway, creating more friction here than elsewhere. Additionally, it is not a bad idea to effect an "overlap" between the vestibule and the lobby, carrying mats of the type and pattern used in the vestibule a short distance into the lobby. A depth of about 3 feet for the matted area is sufficient for protection of the carpeting. The "overlap" just referred to may, however, indicate a somewhat greater depth.

Exterior-Interior Unity

In this carrying over of the mats we have a means of suggesting continuity from exterior to interior, of lessening the sense of an abrupt barrier created by doors. A directional pattern in the mats is of service in this purpose; morever, ending the matted area in a curve or at an angle, rather than in a straight line across the lobby, further aids the idea of exterior-interior unity by making the termination of one division and the beginning of the other less clear-cut and abrupt.

There are various methods of making the appeal of the theatre more obvious and intimate from the outside. Notable in recent remodeling by RKO Theatres is the use of all-glass entrance doors so that the lobby, which is given the atmosphere of a foyer essentially by being carpeted, may be seen from the sidewalk. Even here, however, the basic device for eliminating remoteness of the theatre-proper, is carpeting of the lobby. Carpet, practically alone, can thus change the average lobby space from a necessary evil of plot and plan conditions, from a kind of no-man's-land between the front and the interior, into an integral and more useful part of the entire theatre.

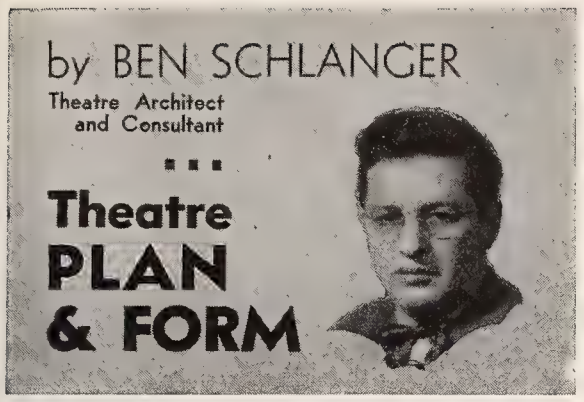
portions of the facade more adaptable to modern theatrical display features. Lighting such as flooding, background light and silhouette lighting, helps considerably in modernizing traditional architecture.

Modern architecture comes under two distinctly separate headings—one, the ornamental modern; the other, the functional modern. The expression "streamlined" has become popular in referring to modern design. Actually, streamlining had its original use in the modern designing of boats, aeroplanes, trains and autos created to cut down air resistance in motion. Such designing led to smooth-flowing lines, and since good modern architectural design results in smooth directional lines, it too is referred to commonly as "streamlined."

Ornamental modern architecture has proved to be more or less faddish, and it is completely understandable why such architecture must depend on ephemeral novelty. It may be described as traditional architecture divested of all of its established forms of ornamentation, maintaining its basic forms, but adding new decorative devices.

There is a method of modernizing a traditional design in a satisfactory manner, and that is to leave the basic traditional form in stark simplicity, depending on the richness of the finish materials for interest and character. This latter approach is more adapted to the monumental structure and is therefore not satisfactory for small motion picture theatres.

Balancing the Forms



The basic difference between the modernized traditional design and the functional architecture, is discernible in the static balance of forms in the former, and the balance of directional lines in the latter.

Static balance is highly desirable in a monumental structure. It calls for absolute symmetry, with every form on one side of a center line repeated on the other side. When static balance is used for the fronts of smaller structures, measuring up to approximately 100 feet, it splits the area in two, thereby weakening the design. Such symmetry in fronts also hampers the free planning of the internal spaces behind the facade.

The functionally designed facade leaves complete freedom and choice in the placing of the various forms and elements without the need of repeating any particular form just for the sake of symmetry. Balance is desirable, but in this instance it is a balance of the horizontal and vertical "lines" in the design. A certain amount of vertical lines are needed to balance the horizontal lines introduced, but the position of these lines is controlled only by the need for placing them where they will be most forceful in appearance, and in most instances the result will not be a symmetrical pattern.

Another distinct identification of true functional architecture is the care taken in the design of the functional elements of the facade, these elements being the doors, windows, displays, signs, lighting, etc., leaving the actual wall surfaces as simple as possible. These elements, when well designed, become the ornamental note of the whole treatment. The opposite is true with the traditional, in a sense, because the walls are ornamental as well as functional elements, and anything added to them results in over-ornamentation.

TWO-AISLE SEATING PLAN

WHEREVER THE shape and size of the plot will permit, it is desirable to use the two-aisle scheme of seating arrangement for capacities of 500 to 900. A great majority of the theatres recently constructed have been planned with this aisle scheme and it is interesting to note why this should prove desirable. The reasons are:

Advantages of Plan

1. With seven seats against each wall, and fourteen seats in the center bank, a maximum number of seats in the width is achieved for the amount of structure devoted to aisles—a saving in structural cubage.

2. The seating width is then approximately 55 feet, which width equals just about three times the width of the average desirable width for the projected picture. This ratio of 3-to-1 is desirable for controlling viewing angles. Any increase in this ratio would create seats in the front half of the house (near the screen) that would be too much to one side of the picture.

3. Desirable ratios of auditorium seating width to seating depth are possible up to capacities of approximately 900. Ratios from 1.6 to 2.3 for the depth, to 1.0 for the width, produce efficient seating plan shapes for the capacities here stated.

When Balcony Is Advised

When the capacity exceeds about 650, it is desirable to break the seating up into an upper and lower level. This split-up is very helpful in breaking the apparent length, and it assures that no one patron will see too many rows ahead of him.

The extra cost for the upper seating level construction is really not an additional cost because the alternate scheme would be to use a three- or four-aisle plan on one level for capacities over 650. The extra aisle space also adds to the cost and causes a seating plan shape with too many seats too far to the side of the picture.

An additional economy is effected in the upper level seating scheme, inasmuch as space under this upper tier becomes available for lounges, toilets, etc. The upper level of seats should not overhang more than a few rows of the seats below, or else occur only behind a point marked by the last row of main level seating.

Carpeting as an "Acoustic Material"

CAN carpet be used over the entire floor area as a substitute for acoustical materials? This question arises from time to time in connection with treatment of "deluxe" houses, where the utmost in luxurious appointments is desired.

The value of carpet for acoustics and noise control in aisles, standee and lounge areas has been discussed previously, and there are very few cases where its use within these areas is not acoustically important. At the same time, there are very few auditoriums, except perhaps some of those which are especially shaped for sound control, where complete carpeting will take the place of acoustical materials. (Actually, conditions have been improved in a number of theatres by removing carpet which was installed under the seats, and by substituting a small amount of acoustical material expertly located on the wall areas.

Carpet Under Seating

When carpet covers the entire floor there is usually an excessive amount of absorption over the seating area. This holds true even though the carpet under the seats is only about 50% efficient when the seats are occupied. If it happens that the walls are not acoustically treated and are of such nature and so arranged that they produce sound reflections readily, the effects of these reflections seem to be accentuated if the floor is fully carpeted.

This may be easily understood from the fact that with an excessive amount of absorption in the vertical plane—that is, ceiling to floor—the reflections traveling between these surfaces are absorbed very quickly, whereas the reflections between the walls travel back and forth many times before they are completely absorbed.

Seat Absorption Enough

Obviously the seats should be asborbent to compensate, at least in part, for the absorption of the audience. Aside from this, it appears that the additional absorption of carpet under the seats is not particularly desirable.

ACOUSTICS AND CUBAGE

MORE EFFICIENT and more economical theatre structures can be built when greater attention is given to cubic foot volume in design. It appears that the relationship of this factor to the acoustics of the motion picture auditorium is somewhat puzzling to many architects and exhibitors. The following example of one method of limiting cubic foot volume may prove helpful to those who do not fully understand this important phase of acoustical design.

Let us consider fundamentally that we want to plan an auditorium of average seating capacity. After determining sightline requirements, seat spacing, aisle widths, distance from the screen to the first row of seats, suitable standee area and other necessary facilities for the auditorium proper, within the limits of a fixed lot line, we arrive at a given set of dimensions for the floor plan. As the next step, a suitable ceiling height must be determined. This must necessarily lie above the upper fringe of the light beam projected to the screen. The question of "how much above the beam" rests with the architect.

More Height, More Material

If, in our example, a ceiling height of 25 feet clears the beam by 2 feet, why should the ceiling be carried to 30 feet, other than perhaps to gratify a preconceived notion that the structure looks more impressive with the extra 5 feet? If the ceiling were properly shaped at 25 feet, it might well give the architectural effect of a 30-foot ceiling. The extra ceiling height is not only costing the exhibitor more money from the standpoint of construction, but in its relationship to acoustics it is also costing him more for corrective material.

With each extra foot of ceiling height, the sound has that much more space through which to travel and be reflected, and will reverberate that much longer. Obviously this means that more acoustical material will be required to control the excess reverberation.

Height Restriction

If ceiling height can be held down to a desirable maximum limit above the light beam (2 feet should be ample in the average case) and the surface can be shaped for both architectural and acoustical effects, it will benefit the acoustical problem.

A. M. Bowles, manager of the Northern California Division of the Fox West Coast Theatres, has been elected a director of the Market Street Association of San Francisco.

Ramon Ruenes, owner and operator of houses in San Benito, Mission and Raymondville, Texas, is dead. Born in Asturias, Spain, 59 years ago, Mr. Ruenes lived in this country for 26 years.

Fox Midwest Theatres, Inc., is taking over the Cozy at Pittsburg, Kan., from Joe Lenski. Mr. Lenski is still operating his Cozy theatre at Girard, Kan., which is managed by his nephew, Walter Pannock.

The State theatre at Eureka, Calif., has been taken over from the Frank R. Sweasey Estate, by the Redwood Theatres.

Harry Hohlin, operator of the Cozy theatre at Bellevue, Ia., has secured from H. J. Hileman a five-year lease on the building.

H. G. Ernst has plans for an addition and alterations to his Grand theatre in Hayward, Wis.

Stanley Taylor has opened the Gloster in Gloster, Miss. The house has a seating capacity of 400.

L. A. Schelling has purchased the Liberty at St. Helena, Calif., from Jack Wilson, and will remodel the house at an estimated cost of $20,000.

B. J. Edwards has taken over the management of the Garza in Post, Tex. Mr. Edwards replaces Glenn Leonard, who has purchased an interest in a number of theatre properties located in Auburn, Nebr.

A. L. Royal of Lumberton, Miss., who operates motion picture theatres at Picayune, Purvis, Hattiesburg and Lumberton, Miss., was scheduled to open the Royal at Gulfport, Miss., in May. The new house accommodates 500.

The National Theatre Syndicate of California will enlarge the Liberty in Marysville, Calif.

James G. Thigpen is the new operator of the Roxy theatre at Lithonia, Ga.

The Lane Theatre Circuit of Carroll, Ia., has leased a building at Ashton, Ia., and has remodeled and equipped it as a theatre.

Lew Bray has succeeded George M. Watson as manager of the Texas Consolidated Theatres in Wichita Falls, Tex. Mr. Watson has been transferred to Harlington, Tex., as district manager for the organization.

Jerome M. Jackson has opened his new Lookout theatre in Cincinnati. Mr. Jackson also operates the Jackson theatre in Cincinnati.

G. R. Moore and James Law have reopened the Suisun theatre at Suisun, Calif., following rebuilding operations. The house was damaged by fire several weeks ago at a loss estimated to be in the vicinity of $8,000.

Ray Brown has redecorated and installed new seats, carpets and drapes in his Harlan theatre at Harlan, Ia.

Nic Johnson has reopened his newly renovated Butterfly theatre in Sheboygan, Wis. The house now carries the new name of State.

William Laurie has taken a lease on the Lake at Lakeport, Calif., from Walter Vernon.

Irving Dollinger has obtained a long term lease on the Liberty in Newark, N. J., from the F & M Amusement Corporation. Mr. Dollinger also operated the Plaza at Linden, N. J. The transaction was handled by David Berk and J. Grumgold, theatre real estate brokers.

John Matis, formerly manager of the Fox Shorewood theatre in Milwaukee, has been named manager of the circuit's Strand in Manitowoc, Wis. Mr. Matis succeeds Ed. Hiester.

Tri-States Theatre Corporation has closed a partnership deal with Lewis L. Lepowitz. The agreement involves the Iowa theatre at East Des Moines, giving the A. H. Blank circuit its ninth house and its first in the East Des Moines district. The newly acquired house will be modernized.

D. B. Levin, president of the People's Theatre Company, San Francisco, has taken charge of the new Grand theatre, which was recently opened in the Mission district of that city. The new house is located within a block of another theatre of the same name, which Mr. Levin operated in the days of silent pictures.

George Storms, operator of a theatre at Lovilla, Ia., has remodeled and modernized his theatre. New seats, sound equipment and projectors have been installed, and the stage rebuilt.

A. C. Berkoholtz plans to expend approximately $20,000 in the remodeling and modernization of his Rivoli at Two Rivers, Wis.

Harold J. Perlman has been named manager of the Granada in Racine, Wis.

Dick Kehrberg and his father, Frank Kehrberg, who operate the Iowa at Sheldon, have added a new marquee and new neon sign to their house. The Iowa is a 700-seat theatre.

Sam and Louis Sosna plan to open a 400-seat theatre at Mexico, Mo. They have leased a building there and are remodeling it. Sam Sosna operates a theatre in Manhattan, Kan., while Louis has a theatre at Moberly, Mo.

Bland Theatres in Chicago, Ill., have sold the Rogers theatre to the Isaac Brotman circuit.

Lester Anderson, manager of the Cozy theatre at Fayette, Ia., for the past year, has closed the house and moved to Rochester, Minn. The house in Fayette is to be closed for a short time only, it is understood.

Ray Goldstein, operator of the Olympia in Chicago, Ill., has acquired the Lake Shore in the same city from Ike Ettelson.

William Lee (Cleve) LaFoy, projectionist at the Rivoli theatre in Greenville, S. C., died recently at a hospital in that city. He was 50 years old. Mr. LaFoy has been connected with the company operating the Rivoli for more than twenty years. He was a charter member of Local 697 of the IA. He is survived by his wife and three daughters.

Bartlett Brothers have erected a new neon sign at their Tyke theatre in Titonka, Iowa.

J. A. Becker, who operates the Associated theatre in Independence, Mo., plans to remodel the Granada theatre there. A new front and extension of the building to permit the addition of 400 seats is expected to cost $50,000.

Bob Malek, owner of the Uptown at Gladbook, Ia., has sold a half interest in the theatre to Ray Rowden, who will take over the management of the house. Mr. Malek will go to Independence, Ia., where he has purchased two theatres from E. W. Hageman. The newly acquired houses in Independence are the Grand, a 600-seater, and the Iowa, seating 360.

G. B. Odlum, who recently took over the management of the City theatre on 14th Street, New York City, is marking the 30th anniversary of the house, which, despite its modern appearance today, goes back to the time when 14th Street was a center of nickelodeons.

Hunt's New Casino theatre at Wildwood, N. J., replacing the house destroyed there by fire last year, has been opened. The new theatre makes the thirteenth house in William C. Hunt's group covering southern New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania. Guy and Bill Hunt will jointly manage the house until the summer season, when a resident manager will be brought in.

The Carroll Virginia Theatre Company has been incorporated at Steubenville, Ohio, with $20,000 capital, by Edward L., William J. and Charles L. Biggio, and T. J. Sheppard. The company will continue operation of the 1,000-seat Grand theatre there.

A. A. Lacy is opening a 200-seat theatre at Carl Junction, Mo., to be called the Carl Junction theatre, and another house with a seating capacity of 200, the Jasper, at Jasper, Mo. Mr. Lacy formerly was engaged in theatre operation at Humansville, Mo.

Seventeen Detroit theatres, including the Madison and Birmingham theatres in Birmingham, Mich., of the United Detroit Theatres Corporation, will continue Altec sound service, under a renewal contract just negotiated by Altec district manager, F. C. Dickely.

RCA has negotiated sound service contracts with two motion picture circuits, according to an announcement made by W. L. Jones, RCA national service manager. William Goldman has taken service for his houses located in eastern Pennsylvania, the arrangement including parts and tube replacement. C. H. Taylor, district service manager for RCA, represented the company in the Goldman deal. The other circuit is the Interboro of New York, operating nine houses. Stanley Kolbert represented the Interboro circuit, and Mr. Jones and Bernard Sholtz, New York service and sales executive, negotiated for RCA.

Norman Samaha has been named manager of the Rex theatre in Hammond, La. The house seats 1,200.

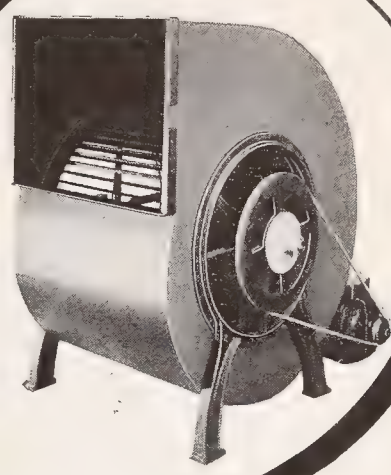
J. S. Garrett has begun the remodeling of a building at West Plains, Mo., into a motion picture theatre. The house will seat 400.

Leo Peterson plans a circuit of from eight to twelve theatres in South Dakota.

The Bijou in New Orleans, La., which is owned by Milton Guidry, was damaged by fire recently with a loss of $10,000. The house was managed by Mrs. F. L. Guidry.

Mac S. Herbert, head of the Brandeis Theatre Corporation, has leased the President theatre in the Bronx, New York City, for fifteen years.

Benjamin Fey's Renton theatre at Renton, Wash., has been leased to New Enterprises, Inc. The new owners will turn the house over to Jensen-Von Herberg circuit for operation, effective June 1. Present plans call for the expenditure of about $20,000 on remodeling, and it is also understood that a new name will be given to the house.



Carl Presley has completed reconstruction of the Madison theatre at Huntsville, Ark., at a cost of $5,000. The theatre was damaged by fire a short time ago.

Waters Theatre Company in Birmingham, Ala., has leased the Fox theatre at Andalusia, Ala., from the Prestwood Estate and will recondition it. James M. Prestwood, trustee for the estate, has announced that negotiations are under way for another site in Andalusia on which the Waters company will build a theatre to cost about $50,000.

Willar H. Johnson of Flint, Mich., has taken over the Family theatre from James M. Minter, circuit operator.

Leionel Delacroix has opened the Osage theatre at Placuemine, La. The house seats 1,000.

Homer Curran, owner and operator of the Curran theatre in San Francisco, has taken a lease on the Alcazar, which has been dark for several months. Mr. Curran will operate both theatres.

YOU'RE PAYING FOR SOMETHING YOU'RE NOT GETTING

. . . when you attempt to show the present dense black and white and colored films in moderate sized theatres with low intensity arc lamps.

Twice as much light, snow white light, is required to secure the desired screen brilliancy, to bring out the real photographic and production values, to reproduce the true colors; accordingly you are paying a premium for these expensively produced pictures without being able to exhibit them satisfactorily.

Moderate sized theatres, using screens up to 18 feet in width, and heretofore denied the vivid brilliancy of high intensity projection by prohibitive operating costs, today are installing the new Strong Utility High Intensity Arc Lamp. This lamp of intermediate capacity exactly fits their needs; doubling the light at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2¢ per hour.

WHO MAKES OUR ART A BUSINESS?

AT a recent gathering of theatre people, a man who holds one of the highest positions in the motion picture equipment field was asked by a member of the small group of people with whom he was chatting, how he had come to enter the theatre machinery business after having been associated with a distinctly different line of work. In the course of his reply he remarked:

"I'm not an engineer. I've never had anything to do with the actual designing of the equipment I am selling. But the hum of a fine piece of machinery has always been sweet to my ears."

Regardless of his earlier interests and non-technical character of his particular responsibilities, this man belongs to the best traditions of the motion picture industry. Ours is the industry it is primarily because of a long line of men for whom machinery has possessed a kind of glamour.

It is difficult for most of us to think of "glamour" in connection with cogs and gears and shafts and oil. Fortunately for all of us, there are some who do.

It has been truthfully said that the progress of the motion picture as an art has always followed the advance of its technology. And when we say "art," we of course mean that which has given the motion picture its wider appeal, its position as the Theatre of today. And that "art" is the merchandise of our business.

The technologist, whether he labors in the research laboratories of some of our big equipment companies, or in a little shop of his own, is one of the makers of that art—one of those who have contributed, and still do vitally contribute, to the support of the motion picture business.

Yet too often we dismiss him as having no intimate connection with our business. He is one of a multitude of workers behind the scenes; in many instances, he and the organization who employ him seem remote to the immediate interests of motion picture merchandising. The showman's attention is preferably on pictures. And true it is that he is selling pictures. But the glamour boys and gals who supply the greater part of what he is selling would be of little moment were it not for the motion picture's gadget fellows and their unglamourous machinery.

Projected light . . . mechanical sound . . . these are the substance of our merchandise. And we could go through the theatre making quite a list of things which do not fit into the movie fan's notions of "glamour," but which are nonetheless vital to the business of the motion picture theatre today.

"The motion picture," Terry Ramsaye has written, "is the newest and the most competent machine tool in the services of expression."

Machine tool it is. The whole art is mechanical. The machinery comes first. It made the art, developed it—and on occasion, when Hollywood seemed to have lost the glamourous touch, has saved it.

The story of the motion picture is substantially the history of its gears and wheels, and of the men who made them go around. Their connection with the affairs of the motion picture industry is indeed an immediate, intimate, integral one. Without them, what?

One here may pertinently note, that no fiddle player has ever achieved the status in musical annals of Stradivarius of Cremona. He made the fiddles.

Projection Room Planning for Extremely Small Theatres

• Theatres of extremely small seating capacity, and particularly those in the smallest towns, are often severely limited in space available for projection facilities. This article discusses their special problem

By JOHN J. SEFING and GEORGE SCHUTZ

IN ADVISING on the planning of the projection room, one familiar with the needs of theatres today, with the regulations of governmental authorities, and with the standards that the motion picture industry properly endeavors to enforce, is wary of suggesting anything short of the ideal. The reason for this attitude is that methods submitted as permissible under extreme conditions may be taken, if not as recommendations, then as a sanction of methods for all conditions.

Nothing of the sort is intended by the specifications submitted in this article. This discussion is concerned wholly with the practical situation confronting a specific group of theatre operators who find themselves interested in properties which can be adapted to modern motion picture exhibition only by an acceptance of minimum facilities. Extremely small theatres in extremely small towns, probably to be established in store buildings—it is the problem of this class of theatre that these suggestions are intended to meet.

All too often, the exigencies of this type of property lead to projection facilities that not only fall short of what is today considered standard, but that are hazardous in one way or another.

Every theatre, whether it has a small or large projection room, should have projection plans approved by its local, city or state authorities before any remodeling or new construction. The following data are intended to help the theatre owner familiarize himself with the absolute minimum requirements of the small theatre projection room, for facilities that could be considered safe and practical.

Room Dimensions

A projection room layout for two projectors can be confined to an area of 10 feet wide by 7 feet deep and 7 feet high. A projector suitable for the small theatre has an overall depth of 60 inches from the finished front wall to the adjusting knobs on the lamphouse, when projecting at an angle of 6°. This leaves a clear working space of 24 inches at the rear of the projector in a 7-foot deep projection room. The height of this projector from the floor to the upper magazine is 6 feet, 1 inch, leaving a clear space of 11 inches in a 7-foot high projection room.

In a 10-foot wide projection room, the two projectors can be installed on 4-foot centers (2 feet on each side of center line of screen and auditorium), the center line of the No. 1 projector 3 feet from the side wall, and the center line of the No. 2 projector also 3 feet from the finished side wall. The width of the projector at the widest point is 18 inches, leaving a clear working space of 27 inches between the side wall and projector and between the two projectors—a clear working space of 30 inches. However, when the No. 2 projector is being trimmed for carbons, the lamphouse door will be swung out momentarily 10 inches, which for a short interval of time will cut down the clear space of 27 inches between the side wall and projector to 17 inches. The two-tungar-bulb rectifiers (40 amperes, 27.5 volts, d.c. to arc lamp) can be installed at the left side wall adjacent to projector No. 1. These rectifiers generate very little heat, need a small amount of ventilation, and have no "open flame" to constitute a fire hazard.

The rewinding of film (if allowed by authorities) can be done on a small bench by a totally-enclosed rewinder, which is reasonably safe when handled with care.

This rewinder can be installed at the right rear corner of the projection room.

Ventilation Provisions

Proper ventilation should be provided in all projection rooms, small or large. Six-inch dia-metal ducts should be installed, with stove dampers, from each projector lamphouse, to run to a main metal duct of 20-inch diameter, which will go through the roof to the outside. These 6-inch diameter ducts from the lamphouse are very important, as they exhaust the hot carbon gas, dust, etc., to the outside (such gas, etc., is a health menace if discharged into the projection room proper).

The 20-inch diameter metal duct serves as an exhaust for the projection room, and in case of fire, draws out the smoke, gas, etc., which otherwise would leak into the auditorium or cause an explosion. To make this exhaust system positive at all times, an 18-inch dia-blade fan, with thrust-bearings and enclosed motor, should be installed inside the duct to ventilate the projection room and also create a draft on the carbon arc exhaust duct system. An 18-inch fan of this type using a short duct system will have a capacity of 2,000 cubic feet per minute, and in a room 10 feet wide by 7 feet deep by 7 feet high, will give a complete change of air every quarter of a minute. However, if this condition is to be realized, a window should be provided in the projection room for fresh air intake.

Amplifier Panel

The sound amplifier should be installed on the front wall of the projection room between the two projection port openings. The sound system in an extremely small theatre of the type here considered, requires little projection room space, and by installing the amplifier on the front wall, it takes minimum space and is more convenient than on the rear wall.

Port Size and Placement

The size of the lookout port openings should be 10 inches wide by 12 inches high, the bottom of the lookout port openings to be in a horizontal line with the top of the projection port openings. This relation should hold true regardless of the projection angle, as it will permit better view of the screen by the projectionist.

The projection port openings should be 10 inches by 10 inches, which will allow for any error in the determining of projection angles, movement of screen from position originally planned, and the average thickness of masonry wall.

The height of the projection port from the projection room floor to the bottom of the port will vary according to the angle of projection. The average height will be 39½ inches at an average angle of projection of 6°, using standard projectors. A workable rule-of-thumb method for determining the angle of projection is as follows: First, the lens pivot line should be laid out by drawing a horizontal line 48 inches off the projection room floor, and a vertical line 18 inches from the finished front wall of the projection room. This 18-inch vertical line holds good to a 12° angle of projection. Beyond a 12° angle, the dimension increases one inch to every degree increase.

Angle of Projection

For instance, on a 13° angle, the 18-inch dimension will increase to 19 inches, and so on. Where these two lines intersect will be the center of the pivot. Then three lines should be drawn from the front of the pivot to the screen in its proper position on the stage, one line going to the top of the screen, another to the center, and the third line to the bottom. The space between the center line going to the screen and the 18-inch horizontal line will indicate the angle of projection.

The top and bottom lines going to the screen will show the light beam area and will help to determine the clearances required at the auditorium ceiling and over the balcony (if there is one), which is very important so as not to have a person crossing the light beam, or to have a low ceiling casting an irritating and objectionable shadow on the screen.

Light Beam Clearance

The minimum clearance height between the lower projected light beam and any point on the balcony floor should be 6 feet, 4 inches. The minimum distance from the top of the projection port to the auditorium ceiling should be 12 inches in order to get the lookout ports at the proper viewing height in the projection room; otherwise the projectionist will have to bend over every time he frames his picture or views the screen. This inconvenience may mean the difference between a good show and Another advantage in having 12 inches of space between the top of the projection port and the auditorium ceiling is that there is less chance of reflection from the projected light beam, especially if the ceiling is painted or finished in a glossy white surface. This additional clearance will also permit the installation of light fixtures, ceiling ventilating outlets, etc.

Room Construction

The construction of the walls, ceiling and floor of the projection room should be, in all cases, absolutely fireproof. The walls can be built of brick tile, transite plaster blocks, metal or all-concrete. The core of masonry should be at least 4 inches thick, with ¾-inch cement plaster; when plaster blocks, metal, concrete or transite is used, steel framework reinforcing should be used. The ceiling can be constructed of 4-inch concrete slabs; precast concrete; 3-inch plaster blocks supported by a steel structure, with ¾-inch cement plaster finish; 2-inch cement plaster with wire-lath and supported by angle irons or wood joints; or ¼-transite board supported by 1¼x-1¼x3/16-inch angle irons spaced at least every 30 inches.

Floor and Doors

The floor of the projection room should be sufficiently strong to carry the load it is to bear with a good factor of safety. A reinforced concrete floor slab can be used, about 4 inches thick, with a troweled cement finish of about 2 inches. A ⅜-inch transite board can be used over a double ⅞-inch rough wood floor, supported by substantial wood joints or iron beams. When a projection room is constructed entirely of transite board (1¼ inches by 1¼ inches by 3/16 inches) the metal angle iron reinforcings should be used throughout and the joints sealed with asbestos cement.

The door of the projection room should be entirely fire-proofed and swing outward from the room. In any case, a fire-proofed stair should be provided for entrance and exit to the projection room. When the space is very limited, a metal step stair (rather than a ladder) should be used, at least the same width as the door. A vertical iron ladder, trap doors and scuttles is a low cost, direct current projection arc of intermediate capacity designed especially for theatres of up to 800 seats and using screens as large as 18 feet in width.

Although the Simplex High projects twice as much light as the low intensity, the over-all operating costs are only slightly higher, because this new arc operates at only 27 volts as compared to 55 volts in the low intensity, and each 14-inch 7-m.m. suprex positive carbon burns for at least two hours.

This Simplex High projects the snow white light characteristic of the high intensity arc which is so necessary to the projection of colored pictures.

should never be installed, as they constitute a menace, especially in the event of fire.

Fire Shutters

The port openings in the projection room must have a fire shutter apparatus that will close manually, or automatically by the melting of fusible links in the trip system. In some states light metal tracks of No. 18 gauge, and ¼-inch transite board shutters are allowed with 1-inch overlap of shutter on all sides of the opening. In other states, heavy metal tracks from No. 10 to No. 12 gauge are required with 3/16-inch to ¼-inch metal shutters, and with 2-inch overlap of shutter on all sides of the port opening.

There are various methods of arranging the shutter trip system. One method is to install a long 1-inch dia-pipe directly over all the port openings. All shutters are suspended by chains having a lead fuse as one of the links, and these chains are slipped over pins in the control pipe. At each end of this control pipe, extension arms are installed, through which the master trip chain passes. In this master trip line, fusible links (which let go at 160° F.) are installed directly over each upper magazine of the projector. This master trip line continues through several pulleys to a hook at the entrance door for manually tripping in case of fire.

Another method is to fasten the master trip line directly to the latch of each upper magazine, also inserting fusible links for automatic tripping in case of fire.

For preventing noise transmission to the auditorium, the lookout ports have ¼-inch plate glass in a separate track, and the projection ports have a ¼-inch thick transite board installed in a separate track, in which a hole is cut to receive 6x6-inch optical glass. Optical glass is used because it cuts down the intensity of the projected light only about 5%, as compared with about 20% for ordinary polished plate glass.

Not What You Can Do Without But What You've Got to Have

& Other Articles . . . by F. H. RICHARDSON

FROM MONTREAL comes a letter from an exhibitor that expresses a condition brought to my attention. For rather obvious reasons the exhibitor requests that his name be withheld. In effect he says:

"I am operating a small theatre. Business is not what it should be and I am compelled to keep expenses shaved to the bone. Under the circumstances new equipment is out of the question, but I would like to improve what I now have, if possible.

"Screen illumination is unsatisfactory. Our light sources are low-intensity, using 25 amperes with 12-mm. positive and 8-mm. negative, cored carbons. Mirrors are 10¼-inch in diameter; projection lenses are 5¾ E.F. Can I improve the screen illumination without installing new equipment?"

Well, this appears to be the old tale of poor business coupled with poor results on the screen. My answer is just this: Poor or even mediocre screen and sound results are an invitation to poor business.

New equipment, says the letter, is out of the question. I doubt that. But let's see if anything can be done to improve results with the old. Assuming the light source to be a horizontal trim lamp, one might install 13-mm. positive and 9-mm. negative, either solid or cored, and raise the amperage to 30; or 14-mm. and 10-mm. trim, both cored, and raise the amperage to 35 (being careful not to exceed the amperage stated in each case).

One might carefully examine the equipment, making very sure the optical system is in exact line, the reflectors in good condition, and the lenses perfectly clean.

The principal possible source of gain, however, is the screen, the size of which is not stated. Provided the projector optical system be changed in accordance with the increased projection focal length, one can increase screen brilliancy very measurably by decreasing the size of the screen image. With a definite amount of light produced at the light source, one is illuminating a definite screen area. What is the condition of the screen surface? Is it suited to the theatre? Is it clean? Get a sheet of cardboard, about 2 feet square; paint it white, suspend it at about the center of the screen and project clean light. Comparison of the cardboard reflection with that of the surrounding screen will indicate whether a new screen, or at any rate surfacing, is necessary.

The projection system is a closely co-ordinated affair; every element more or less affects every other, from current source to screen. In a situation like this one, every part of the system should be carefully and competently checked.

But suppose the image is not brought up to a reasonable standard of effectiveness by anything one may do with the existing equipment. Then, clearly, replacement of the faulty elements of the system is the only course to pursue. There are no buts to this. One must do what one must do, and there usually is a way to do it. There are some things that we can do without, or have only second-rate, if we have to, without closing our theatres — but those things are not to be found in projection and sound reproduction. To have a salable show one simply must spend the money necessary to produce it—or else.

Device to Measure Circuit Load Accurately

JOHN L. MEYERS of St. Louis, writes, "I have been told there is an instrument by means of which the load on any circuit, switch, motor, fuse, etc., may be instantly and accurately measured. I have been unable to ascertain whether or not this is true. If it is, will you be good enough to advise me where it may be procured and what is its price and capacity; also, is it reliable?"

The tool referred to is the "tong test ammeter." It is in rather wide use among companies having a considerable amount of electrical equipment. It is accurate, reliable and safe to operate, and may be used to measure either a.c. or d.c. The weight is 3.75 pounds.

The instrument is held in one hand, and pressure by one finger of that hand upon a small lever causes a split metal circle at the end of the tool to open. The opened circle is placed around one wire of the circuit it is desired to measure, and the finger pressure relaxed, whereupon the circle closes and the load reading of the circuit appears on a conveniently located dial. The circle may be closed around a switch bar, a fuse or anything of which you may wish to measure the amperage load. Readings may be taken through any kind of insulation, even to armored cable.

Balancing Auditorium And Screen Factors

I RECENTLY had occasion to visit Loew's State theatre in Newark, N. J., managed by William S. Phillips. This theatre has a capacity of 2,500, and presumably it gives at least four shows daily. Newark has a population of around half a million, still the sale of 70,000 seats each week presents quite a task. To accomplish this requires good management, good advertising, good shows and good presentation of those shows. And at the State I found a well illuminated, snappy screen image, details of which were clearly visible from several feet back of the back row of seats. The definition (which is rather "sloppy" in far too many theatres) was acceptably sharp.

Watching the screen image, I was unable to observe any disproportion between the large auditorium and the picture size.

I walked down front, finding that from the front half of the auditorium the effect was good. The projection distance is 150 feet, screen image 18 feet, 6 inches wide. The auditorium and screen illumination were in approximately proper balance, which is an extremely important item. Projectionists work in two shifts: the staff is comprised of Harry Openheimer, Vincent Schauler, Albert Schultz and Arthur Whelpley.

Loew's State in Newark supplies ample proof that, provided other things be properly handled, a screen 18½ feet wide is large enough for the ordinary theatre seating layout accommodating 2,500 patrons. Nothing is subtracted from comfortable viewing by those having normal eyesight occupying the rear seats, whereas from the front half of the auditorium viewing conditions are immeasurably improved over those with a larger picture.

This statement is made under the assumption that the power of the light source be not reduced under that used for a somewhat larger picture; nor must the level of auditorium illumination be raised. Proper balance between screen and auditorium illumination, and absence of interference of auditorium light with screen reflection, are items of importance in any case, and doubly so when the size of the picture is relatively large.

Projection Has Big Day At SMPE Convention

PROJECTION received a full day at the spring meeting in April of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. Only half a day had been set aside for projection matters, but so many projectionists were present and the interest was so keen that those present at the session in the morning resumed after lunch and continued through the entire afternoon, which had been set aside for sightseeing. Even then it was found necessary to omit one paper for lack of time.

"A Personal Safety Factor for Projection Practice" was the title of an interesting paper by T. P. Hover, a projectionist from Lima, Ohio, which set forth many items in projection practice which might well receive atention and improvement to the ultimate added safety and more healthful conditions in projection rooms. In "New Lenses for Motion Picture Projection," W. B. Rayton, head of the research department of Bausch & Lomb, gave a very understandable illustrated explanation of the new coated projection lenses.

"Projection Supervision, Its Problems and Its Importance" dealt with a subject I have endeavored for six years past to get some supervisor of projection to prepare a paper on, without success. Harry Rubin, who is chairman of the Projection Practice Committee, finally undertook the task, and I am very sure all those present received benefit from his excellent treatment of the matter.

Spring Arrives in Land o' Projection

IT HAS BEEN a late spring, but it is no different from the timely ones, apparently, in its effect upon poetic tendencies. And it seems to have drifted in through the projection ports, in a couple of places anyway. One from and by Ralph C. Blades, chief operator of the Star theatre in Sand Springs, Okla., runs to the tragic, but such, alas, is the influence of the Muse in Springtime. Here 'tis:

LIFE OF A PROJECTIONIST

Each day and night up the stairs I go
To my booth to project a show.
The films I unreel, one by one,
Trying to give the customers fun.

The first reel is good, the music is grand;
The audience laughs to beat the band.
But then the second—it's poor indeed;
They yell, "A new operator's what we need!"

Though the story is bad, projection is fine,
But the operator is to blame every time.
If the picture stops, they say it's his fault—
They'd like to see him in a film vault.

The film, of course, he didn't make;
Whatever is given him, he must take,
And though the film itself is to blame,
He catches hell just the same.

Poet Blades had a couple of other stanzas, but these will give you the general idea of what he had stored up in his system through the winter.

In a lighter vein (though I am sure it will be taken quite seriously by my good friend P. A. McGuire of International Projector) is the following stanza noted in the IA District Number One Quarterly Bulletin:

The Dreamer

The projector heads up in my booth
Are very quaint to see;
They clatter, bang; they jump and buck,
And keep me company.
To wipe up all the oil they leak, sure
Keeps a fellow busy.
While to keep the damn things running right
Would make a sane man dizzy.
How shocked I'd be if the boss would say
Like a thunder bolt from the Heavens,
"We'll pension those Jaloppies off, we're Getting new E-Sevens."

Would a Firecracker Break Loudspeaker Cone?

FROM A Southern state comes this: "An argument has arisen in our theatre. We have an RCA Photophone sound system. The question under debate is this: The projectionist says a firecracker exploded in the auditorium could not possibly set up sufficient concussion to break the cone of the loudspeaker. The manager holds differently. Who is right?"

The projectionist!

is a story of supreme American
e and faithfulness to an ideal n ambition. It tells the intense, n battle of one man to achieve thing the world needed despite handicaps of financial straits;

melodramatic struggle of Edison to bring electric light to the world. Dozens had failed before him and failure came time after time to him . . . yet he fought on and on until he succeeded. It is a story rich in romance and its inspiration. Like the most exciting the story ends, more ratory which Edison had at Menlo Park. This footage portrays the details of every spot in the laboratory and the operation of all of Edison's original inventions. Because of this film, studio technicians were able to recreate the laboratory and materials in detail. After building the set itself it was necessary to manufacture more separate articles which ceased using in 1882. M-G-M also collected 11,000 feet of newsreel shots of Thomas Edison from 1925 up to his death in 1931. These were studied for make-up and surveyed by the cast and directors to capture the mannerisms of the man at that age when so many remember him today.

The studio officials of M-G-M were amazed at the amount of real life drama presented as a result of its research into the life of Edison. His

"INSIDE JOB"

THE week-end adventure with dry fly in white mountain water was over. Creel laden success came with the dainty ones, midge and blue dun, at bright mid-day, moth-millers as the half lights of late afternoon crossed the pools. The thin damp chill of spring twilight spread over the valley and the road down into the cross roads hamlet in the dark below, where the lights at Old Jake's tavern glowed with beckoning to the rendezvous, supper, pipe and bowl. It was two hundred miles from Broadway and this typewriter up in a dirt road countryside where the todays are all of a leisurely yesterday in tempo.

Nothing, you might fancy, in this comfortable expansive hour, could have been less on the mind of your correspondent than concerns of cinema. Then in rolled, a-roaring, our friend vociferous Bill-the-Exhibitor. Bill has a middling sized house in the little city around the other side of the mountain. He's had it a long time and modernized it three times, once silent and twice for sound. He has prospered, but not vastly, has contrived to stay considerably independent and escape entanglements. He belongs to his community which considers him quite a fellow. He's a director of the local bank, owns a piece of the lumberyard, a couple of store buildings and a farm. He has a Yankee's capacity for figuring.

It took two flagons of Old Jake's draft ale to lay the dust in Bill's throat and bring him to the repose of a seat at fireside and a mug for mere incidental sipping. He had something on his mind.

Bill had to have a look into the creel. "Pretty fair, pretty fair—that is, for a newspaper slicker from Broadway—seem to have a sample of everything in the river but a sucker—we've got them too."

"And, tell me what's new in the big city."

"WELL I had lunch the other day at the Plaza with a big producer from Hollywood," your editor responded, "and he told me that the American screen had just been saved by a certain very big picture. He says it is reviving, restoring, resuscitating and pulmotoring back to life the public high regard of the screen, etc., etc."

Bill snorted and set down his mug with a slam. "Yeah, and I'll name it for you—'Gone With the Wind'—and I hope to hell it has."

"You don't mean to say it didn't do business for you?"

"I mean to say," rejoined Bill, "that it did business, plenty of business, and how we played it. Say, that one was put on. The job ran me and my whole staff ragged, from ushers to extra operators, advertising, promotion and hoopla in general, Rotary, Lions, church groups, clubwomen, everything but rockets and a legal holiday, and today, just before I was taking off to drive over and gas with you my bookkeeper gave me the final figures. I put them down just to hand you in case you turned up full of art and argument. The whole thing is over now and the returns are in."

Bill drew a slip out of his long wallet, the gold trimmed one the Civic Association gave him on his twentieth anniversary, and laid down a figure. "You see, it's minus $16.82."

"BUT that's just dollars," Bill went on. "I haven't charged in wear and tear on me and the staff, or what we slugged out of the community in cooperative promotions and the spending of goodwill helps that you can only tap now and then. I haven't got a figure in there for what I did to the regular patronage by change in policy for the run, or the loss of the patronage that was drawn off to the big town first run shows. And I can't put in a figure that will cover what I've done to my booking schedule and the pictures that were sold away to make room. I can't set down figures to take care of the fact that advanced admission prices took away from pictures before and after, milked the movie money, and damn well took it out of town. I took in more money and I sent away a lot more money. We broke box office records for all time, stupendous, as they say in the ads, but there's no percentage in breaking records if you lose your pants in the process."

"You know," observed Bill after a lull, watching Jake put a chunk of aromatic apple wood in the fire," that old one about the producer's process of comforting himself with the announcement that even if the picture did lose money he has had 'an artistic success'—well, sir, they're found a way to slip that to the exhibitor now. I know how they feel because I've just put over an 'artistic success' in exhibition. While I'm taking off my hat to super-salesmanship with one hand, I'm clutching my pocketbook with the other."

"Remember," said Bill, with a light of something else in his eye, "that night way back yonder when you and I and Jim Quirk were making a survey of the situation in New York and walked into Tex Guinan's joint, and she yelled 'Hello sucker!' —well, that was me she was talking to, exclusively—I've just decided that."

"When you get back to town," Bill admonished, "you can call another meeting at the Plaza grill and tell our friend from Hollywood not to save the industry again soon. It's just too colossal, we can't use it. It's too good for us. I can handle most things. I can lay low when a Gypsy Smith comes to town, and I don't buck opening days in the baseball park or try to outfigure the circus when it comes along to take all the show money out of town—but this one, it was an inside job."

LAST week your editor was indignant about the statuary in stone and steel around here in Radio City. This week it is trees, sycamore trees.

With a fleet of compressor trucks, pavement breakers, jack hammers and enough men and tools to build a battleship, they are planting a row of saplings in Sixth Avenue, beginning in front of the RCA building. They will be "oriental plane trees" on the invoice, but to you and me they are just sycamores. They are elected because they will stand for New York, including the fumes of ethylated lead gasoline.

A sycamore is all right in its place, which is a swamp, but a thirty-foot sprout in front of an 850-foot office building is about as relevant as a prairie dog hole alongside the Grand Canyon of the Colorado. It represents a futile yearning, not the deep tangled wildwood.

One is not to be impressed until Rockefeller Center is planted with mature redwoods, and at least one of them with an eagle's nest in it.

This Week in the News

Paramount Replies

Paramount Wednesday charged RCA with "an attempt to drag a red herring across the trail of a simple technical discussion" in its accusation that the Paramount-DuMont television company was attempting to sabotage the new industry.

The statement in reply to the RCA charges, which are detailed on page 41, quoted Paul Raibourn, treasurer of the DuMont company and an executive of Paramount Pictures, saying, "In reply to RCA's charge that Paramount has entered the television industry to be a 'Trojan Horse' we need only point to the record. . . . We are eagerly awaiting the granting of . . . licenses so that we can demonstrate once and for all the superiority of flexible television."

The statement said the RCA charges avoided the basic question of "whether or not the consumer is to be served with flexible standards and television sets which will not become obsolete too quickly," and concluded, "We feel certain that the final decisions will be made by the FCC on the basis of technical merit."

Nick Settlement

The affairs of "the Nick union" were finally settled late Wednesday.

Ernest F. Oakley, circuit judge in St. Louis, accepted the following stipulations in the case of Local 143 of the Motion Picture Operators Union:

The union agrees to waive the collection of $48,399 from John P. ("Big") Nick, ousted czar of the union, and Clyde Weston, its former business agent, for which judgment had been entered by Judge Oakley; Nick and Weston will drop their appeal to the state supreme court from the judge's order removing them from control of the union and making its receivership permanent; and Judge Oakley is to regain full authority over the receivers.

Thus ends restoration of autonomy to the "Nick union" in St. Louis.

Television to Politics

SOME 43,000 persons in southern New England, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will be given an opportunity to see as well as hear the proceedings of the summer's first national presidential political convention—the Republicans', which opens in Philadelphia June 24, through television programs to be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company and Philco Radio and Television Corporation.

Plans for television coverage of the convention were made public in Washington Wednesday by John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who said that NBC would have two units and Philco one.

The NBC coverage of the event, according to Alfred H. Morton, vice-president in charge of television, will be the most elaborate ever given to a single event.

Two complete units will be moved from New York to Philadelphia, and a newly developed television camera will be used on the convention hall floor while a second set-up will handle interviews in a studio just off the stage.

The relay from Philadelphia to New York, Mr. Morton said, will be made over a coaxial cable installed by the Bell laboratories and the telephone company.

The NBC and Philco cameras will be set up on special stands extending from the balcony level out over the hall floor some 40 feet from the speakers' stand, giving views of every activity on the stage plus scenes on the floor itself during demonstrations. Both companies plan to devote all the time necessary to convention activity, cancelling such other contemplated programs as have been scheduled.

NBC will have 25 engineers, announcers and program producers on the job, Philco about 15.

First Lady

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT made her film debut last week at the Fox Movietone Studio on West 54th Street. She appeared in the final scene of the first of a series of shorts called "Dave Elman's Hobby Lobby," being produced by Leonard-Greene Productions.

Mrs. Roosevelt was made up with a paint described by the studio as "the same kind Joan Crawford or any other glamour girl might wear." After this, "with the patience and calm of a Hollywood veteran" she went through forty minutes of takes and retakes. Arthur Leonard, the producer and director, said Mrs. Roosevelt's screen performance was "grand" and "her blue eyes photographed very nicely."

During her appearance under the lights the First Lady gave a list of hobbies of her family: the President: "books, prints, letters and above all, his models of ships"; Son James: "historical books of all kinds"; Son Elliott: "his ranch"; Son Franklin, Jr.: "Arguing, He loves it."; Son Johnny, "riding," and Daughter Anna: "Her job with the newspaper."

After her debut as a screen actress Mrs. Roosevelt had to rush to make her regular radio appearance for Sweetheart Soap.

PCCITO Convenes

THE NEWLY FORMED Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners went into their first convention in Los Angeles Wednesday, and declined that day to indicate what the stand of that organization would be with reference to the Neely Bill and other programs of regulative legislation. Meanwhile, out at mid-week came "In-Dex," their magazine organ, previously a four-page leaflet, in this convention issue swelled to ninety-four pages by advertising from the majors, and messages from production and distribution to exhibitors. Convention story on page 13.

Nickel-Movie Stars

THE PHONOVISION of Sam Sax and Frank Orsatti, one of the half-dozen nickel-in-the-slot cafe lounge movie machines that is about to break forth in the new "multi-million-dollar" industry, is going to use the public's "favorite stars of screen, stage and radio."

While most or all of the other nickel-slot movie sponsors have either stated openly, or inferred, that they would not buy Hollywood star talent, in order to salve the troubled feelings of organized exhibitors, in several sectors, charging unfair competition, Phonovision came out Wednesday, in telegrams to the trade press from Iriving Hoffman, its New York press agent, with this:

"Phonovision, intended for installation in cafes, hotel lounges, railroad stations, department stores and wherever men and women congregate, on sea, land and sky, will bring you the favorite stars of screen, stage and radio by the simple expedient of dropping a nickel in a slot. You will be able to see as well as hear your favorite band or orchestra, vaudeville or concert star as selected by you."

All of which was by way of extending invitations to cocktails, Thursday, in Suite 7B of the Hotel Sherry Netherland, New York, where Mr. Sax and Mr. Orsatti had just arrived for demonstration and publicity for Phonovision.

The Songwriters Protective Association resolved, Tuesday in New York, to discipline members who write "obscene, lewd, or lascivious" songs. The action follows the warning of several weeks ago from the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers, that "dirt doesn't pay" and that ASCAP members would be chastised for writing in the lewd idiom. It is directed primarily against the authorship of lewd songs for nickel phonograph machines.

Elektro's Sparko

"A MAN'S best friend is his dog," proclaimed Senator Vest classically many a year ago. Now Elektro, the mechanical man by Westinghouse, famed among New York World's Fair exhibits, has a mechanical, electrically motivated dog, named "Sparko." The electronic pup has a cam to wag his tail, and he can crouch, bark, growl and trot after his tin master. It is the solemn assertion of J. M. Barnet, builder, that "Sparko" is a Scotty. That remains to be proved. If "Sparko" proves to be deceitful, stubborn, given to chewing piano legs and burying objects in flower beds, then he will be indeed a terrier. That reminds one that it is a long time now since any animal has come to fame on the screen. Among the first was "Teddy," the Keystone cat, and considerably more recently assorted dogs, including "Strongheart" and "Rin-tin-tin." The first animal to become classic in film annals was Winsor McKay's dinosaur, "Gerty," just as synthetic as "Sparko," and, in a fashion, ancestor of such as "Mickey Mouse" and "Donald the Duck."

Reject "Wind" Terms

THE GENERAL COUNCIL of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, British theatremen's group, formally agreed Wednesday, in London, to instruct its theatre owning members not to accept MGM's 70 per cent rental terms for "Gone With the Wind," not to increase admission above normal, as demanded by MGM, and not to pay any rentals higher than 50 per cent. Harry P. E. Mears, president of the CEA, cabled Louis B. Mayer, in Culver City, appealing to him to release the film at "normal" rental and admissions. He criticized the amounts of the total high grosses claimed for the film. He pointed out that the British public, fighting for existence and already overtaxed, objects to paying high prices.

French Grosses

FRENCH PICTURES today appear to be the most successful non-English dialogue pictures in this country. The most successful French pictures have been "Mayerling" and "Grand Illusion." The production cost of each was said to be less than $100,000. The American gross on "Grand Illusion," according to Arthur A. Mayer, vice-president and sales-manager of World Pictures, "ran into six figures."

The present leading foreign film, "Harvest," may gross as much as $100,000 in the U. S. market, according to Andre Heymann, head of the French Cinema Center.

Now Australia

WORD is expected in New York any hour telling that Australia has followed the example of Mother England, and imposed a 50 per cent export restriction on film revenues. The story arriving, that an agreement had been concluded, was said to be premature because the MPPDA in New York still was collecting information to support the distributors' claims that at least 75 per cent of Australian income should be allowed to leave the country.

On account of high taxation and a 25 per cent rejection right given to exhibitors in the New South Wales territory, the cost to U. S. distributors of doing business in Australia is said to be much greater than in England. The companies claim that a 75 per cent agreement with Australia, for this reason, would approximate England's 50 per cent proposition.

Foreign film departments in the United States do not know where a "blitzkrieg" of restrictions on money exports will break out next. There are rumblings of money trouble in Canada, certain South American countries, and elsewhere.

NBC's Proposition

USING motion picture "fan" publicity as furnished by the Hays organization in New York, for gratis short wave broadcasts, in six languages, to Latin America and Europe the National Broadcasting Company would now like to have motion picture companies pay for the time. Lunsford P. Yandell, director of international commercial broadcasting for NBC, an assistant treasurer of the parent Radio Corporation of America, and, incidentally, a board member of the new RKO, this week confirmed what had been a Broadway rumor.

The broadcasting company now uses material supplied by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America for six 15-minute programs weekly, in six languages: English, Italian, German, Spanish, French and Portuguese. Mail response has been such, NBC claims, that a sponsor is certain of an audience.

Mr. Yandell said "negotiations" were on with the majors, separately and collectively, and with corporations in other industries.

While the following description of the type program which the NBC hopes to sell to the sponsors would of course be subject to decisions by sponsors and the NBC, Mr. Yandell said it represented a "nearly accurate" picture:

The NBC would offer a half hour program seven times weekly, over a period of a year.

50 "SERIES" FEATURES FOR BOX OFFICES IN '40-'41

Eight Large Studios Producing 18 Different Central Theme Groups, Ranging from "Family" Types to Mysteries

by WALTER SELDEN
in Hollywood

More than 10 per cent of Hollywood's 1940-41 product will consist of "series" pictures, a pre-selling season checkup of the studios reveals. According to plans already announced or now being formulated, the new season will account for at least as many such films, and probably more than have been produced, in the current film year, which, at its conclusion, will have numbered approximately 50 of the "series" type.

Currently, eight of the ten large studios are producing a total of eighteen different "series" themes, ranging from the "family" types of the "Hardy" and "Blondie" order to mystery stories such as the "Saint" and "Charlie Chan" groups. These, of course, are exclusive of the western product featuring one star or group of players, or based on a particularized character like "Hopalong Cassidy."

"Name" Writers Signed

Indicative of the increased importance being accorded series pictures is the recent signing by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer of such "name" writers as Sinclair Lewis to write a "Hardy" picture, and of Lloyd C. Douglas for a "Dr. Kildare" feature.

Only Warner Brothers and United Artists are not represented among the producers of series films, although both have made sequels to pictures accorded favorable audience reaction, as have the other studios.

RKO Radio heads the list numerically with six separate groups of series pictures currently being made or forthcoming from its own production staff or from outside producers releasing through the RKO channel. The "Saint" series, with George Sanders the title character created by Leslie Charteris, has accounted for five films, with another six scheduled for 1940-41.

Just finished is the second of the "Dr. Christian" series, stemming from the radio program, with a third now in production. Starring Jean Hersholt, this group is produced by Stephens-Lang for RKO release.

After six years, a second in the series based on the L. M. Montgomery stories is being made, again with Anne Shirley in the title role. "Anne of Windy Poplars" will be made in this instance as a successor to "Anne of Green Gables," made in 1934.

Recently signed by RKO was a deal whereby Voco Productions would make three pictures a year for three years, starring radio's Lum 'n' Abner. Frank Craven, Bobs Watson and Frances Langford also will appear in the first, "Dreaming Out Loud."

Additionally, a series based on the Clarence Budington Kelland "Scattergood Baines" stories is to be made by Ford and Brandt Productions for RKO, and the company itself is now preparing a second in the "Little Orvie" group, with Johnny Sheffield as the character created by Booth Tarkington.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Hardy," "Dr. Kildare" and "Nick Carter" series will account for some seven to ten of that company's 1940-41 lineup of approximately 50 pictures. In addition, the "Maisie" pictures, of which there already have been three, is set to continue. A screen play for the fourth, which also will star Ann Sothern, is being written by Betty Reinhardt.

Eight of the "Hardy" films have been released since the inception of the group with 1937's "You're Only Young Once," with Sinclair Lewis now writing the latest of these pictures, which casts Mickey Rooney in the title role.

The fifth of the "Dr. Kildare" films is now being written around the three principals portrayed by Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres and Laraine Day, by Lloyd C. Douglas, who wrote "Magnificent Obsession" and "Disputed Passage."

Spacing them some two years apart, MGM also has made sequels to its "Tarzan" and "Thin Man" pictures.

The Warners' Series

Similarly, Warner Brothers has made "Daughters Courageous" and "Four Wives" as sequels to its "Four Daughters," and "Four Mothers" is currently scheduled to be made. All save "Daughters Courageous" have screen plays by Julius and Philip Epstein. Hal Roach, for United Artists release, has made picturizations of three of the Thorne Smith novels, "Topper," "Topper Takes a Trip" and "Turnabout."

Oldest of the series pictures is Twentieth Century-Fox's "Charlie Chan" group developed from the Earl Derr Biggers character, the first of these having been made in 1931. Twenty-two have been produced in all. Two more are scheduled for the present season, although, according to announcement made at the company's Chicago sales convention, only one is set for 1940-41. Also, only one "Jones" family film is to be made for next season. To date, 17 of this series have been released since their inception in 1935.

The "Mr. Moto" series, starring Peter Lorre and based on the character created by J. P. Marquand in The Saturday Evening Post, was abandoned after eight of them had been completed by late 1938. The latest Twentieth-Fox series is the recently revived "Cisco Kid" group. The first of these pictures based on the O. Henry character was "In Old Arizona," made in 1931. The series was started again in 1939, with "The Return of the Cisco Kid," in which Warner Baxter starred, with Cesar Romero as his aid. This year three have been made, starring Romero, and the schedule calls for an additional four in 1940-41.

Paramount, which in the 1938-39 season released "Three Weeks with Pay," "Sweepstakes Millionaires" and "Night Work," all with Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles, now is confining its series activities to the character of "Henry Aldrich," stemming from the Clifford Goldsmith stage play. Jackie Cooper had the principal part in "What a Life," and recently has been signed to a new contract by Paramount to insure the continuance of the series. Currently before the cameras is "The Aldrich Family in Life with Henry."

Paramount Considers Group

Paramount also is reported considering the inception of a series to follow its recent "Seventeen," based on the Booth Tarkington story.

Three separate series are being made at Columbia, and a fourth is planned. Already released have been two in the "Five Little Peppers" series, based on the books by Margaret Sidney Lathrop, and two more are in preparation. The title roles are played by Edith Fellows, Tommy Bond, Bobby Larson, Dorothy Ann Seece and Charles Peck.

The "Lone Wolf" series is taken from the detective stories by Louis Joseph Vance, with Warren William in the lead of the three latest. Five pictures have been released in the "Blondie" series, based on the Chic Young comic strip, and several more are now in preparation. Leading roles are taken by Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and "Daisy." Columbia also has purchased film rights recently to another comic strip, "Tillie the Toiler," by Russ Westover, and plans a series for this group.

Five in the "Higgins Family" series have been released by Republic since the start of the group in the spring of 1939, with a sixth now being prepared. The original stories feature James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Tommy Ryan and Lois Ranson.

Monogram plans to continue its "Renfrew" series, based on the books by Laurie York Erskine, and starring James Newill. The first was released last August, and six have been made to date.

DEMPSEY, KOPLOVITZ RESIGN FROM FCC

William J. Dempsey and William C. Koplovitz, general counsel and assistant general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, have resigned to engage in private law practice.

Mr. Dempsey, when informed of reports that the resignations were due to friction within the Commission concerning the "Pot o' Gold" radio program, said that "the report is absolutley untrue," and added that there were no strained relations within the FCC.

LOCAL EXHIBITOR GROUPS TURNING TO OWN TRADE PRACTICE 'REFORMS'

Independents Operating 1,250 Houses in Six Pacific States Hear Conciliation Plan Explained at Coast Convention

More than 200 exhibitors, representing approximately 1,250 independent theatres in six western states and Alaska, were in Los Angeles Wednesday to attend the first annual convention of the recently organized Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, with trade practice "conciliation" described by Robert H. Poole, general chairman and executive secretary, as the "keynote and backbone of the organization." Sessions were to continue through Friday, May 10th, with a final meeting of trustees Saturday.

Plan in Effect Now

Following an all-day preconvention conference of trustees Tuesday, it was decided to make clarification of the organization's conciliation policy the first order of business Wednesday morning. Presiding in separate chambers, heads of the four member organizations composing the conference, two representing each, were to explain in detail to their memberships the methods and mechanism by which conciliation is to be carried on and individual exhibitors were to be invited to submit specific exhibitor or exhibitor-distributor problems for conciliation forthwith.

Member organizations of the conference are the ITO of Southern California and Arizona, similar groups in Northern California and Nevada, in Washington, Northern Idaho and Alaska and the ITO of Oregon.

The plan is a development and expansion of policy instituted by Mr. Poole as executive secretary of the ITO of Southern California and declared by him to have functioned successfully in effecting settlement of the 114 exhibitor problems in that territory within the past two years. All of these, according to Mr. Poole, were of a sort that might otherwise have been taken to court or the legislature. He said no issue accepted by the organization for conciliation failed of successful outcome.

Explains Plan

As a first step in availing himself of the organization's conciliation machinery, Mr. Poole explained Tuesday, a showman must make a written report of his grievance to the head of his own state unit. This report is examined for accuracy and fairness by a committee composed of the local organization head and two disinterested members of the state board of directors.

In the event that a satisfactory conclusion cannot be worked out, the local conciliation committee submits the case to a general conference committee composed of the executive secretary and two conference trustees who take it to the distributor's district manager concerned.

All convention sessions but one were open to the press and interested outsiders. No resolutions were prepared in advance nor were any to be submitted from the dais at any time, Mr. Poole said. The chairman refused to predict whether or not the Neely Bill would be among the matters brought up or whether a delegate would be sent to the Washington hearings on the bill.

Following Mr. Poole's keynote address on Wednesday afternoon the convention session heard Hugh Bruen of the ITO of Southern California, on "Organization," Joseph Pasternak on "Production" and L. O. Lukan of the ITO of Washington, Northern Idaho and Alaska on "Double Bills."

Thursday's schedule included addresses on "Distribution," by William F. Rodgers, Loew's Inc.; "Legislation," by H. M. Hone, attorney; "Advertising Accessories," by Arthur Aronson; "Government in Our Business," by William G. Ripley of the ITO of Washington, Northern Idaho, Alaska; "Sound Standardization," by John K. Hilliard, Paramount Studio; "Social Security," by Carl Hyde, and "MPTOA's Viewpoint," by Ed Kuykendall.

Welcomed warmly to Hollywood the conference delegates and their wives, totalling some 350, were guests of the Association of Motion Picture Producers at a dinner dance in the Fiesta Room of the Ambassador Hotel, convention headquarters, Wednesday night. Universal studio was luncheon host to the conventioneers for Thursday noon.

Buses were to transport them to the 20th Century-Fox Studio Friday afternoon for a cocktail party at which studio stars would stand in the receiving line. The official banquet of the convention was to be given at the Ambassador on Friday evening and the long arm of organization fellowship was to reach across the continent to punctuate this occasion with formal presentation of a silver trophy to Loretta Young as "Grand Young Lady of the Screen," by Harry Brandt's, ITO of New York.

HITS GOVERNMENT TRADE CONTROL

Opposing Government regulation of the motion picture industry, although adding the thought that no independent exhibitor needs to have it proved to him how much of the Government's brief in its suit in equity is true, Hugh Bruen, trustee of the ITO of Southern California, drew cheers at the Pacific Coast Conference, Wednesday, when he said, "When Government comes into business you soon have socialism in that business and when you have socialism you no longer have a business."

Film Reform Plan Proposed in Canada

A reorganized program covering various problems in the Canadian film business has been submitted to the Film Section of the Toronto Board of Trade for ratification. The plan was submitted by the Clearance Reform Committee, consisting of M. A. Milligan, general manager of Paramount Film Service; Louis Rosenfeld, Canadian general manager of Columbia and N. A. Taylor, vice-president of the Independent Theatres Association.

Details were not announced but it was reported that the proposal includes the establishment of a clearance control board in each of the six film exchange cities in Canada to deal with local condiitons and a national board to draft protective regulations and clearance schedules for urban zones and hear appeals from the local boards.

In Ontario and Nova Scotia conciliation committees are now operating. The Canadian Film Board of Trade has branches in the six key cities for arbitration purposes but the independents have demanded a central body to regulate clearance questions.

St. Johns' Exhibitors Form Local Trade Pact

Not only does an agreement on prices and bill changes prevail among the exhibitors of St. John, N. B., but it extends to the silencing of a cut-rate threat.

When a pact was reached by the St. John exhibitors for a minimum admission of 25 cents a former legitimate theatre, the Opera House, successively re-named the Rialto and Princess, threatened to cut its price from 15 cents to a nickel.

Famous Players, Spencer, St. John Amusement Company, and Franklin & Herschorn joined in the co-operative project to lease the Opera House, and keep it dark. Each participant is assessed a stipulated sum monthly for the rent.

Arkansas Officers Reelected

O. G. Wren was re-elected president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas at its annual convention in Little Rock, last week. Other officers re-elected are K. K. King, Searcy, secretary, and W. E. Malin, Augusta, vice-president.

Three new members were elected to the board of directors. They are H. E. Ruh, Berryville; C. C. Mundo, Little Rock, and W. L. Landers, Batesville. Other board members include L. F. Haven, Forrest City; C. F. Bonner, Pine Bluff; J. F. Norman, Little Rock, and D. E. Fitton, Harrison.

G. Carey, Paris, was chairman of the resolutions committee and also made the principal talk at the afternoon session Monday. Other speakers were Miss Emma Cox of Osceola; W. E. Malin, Augusta and J. F. Norman, Little Rock.

Governor Carl E. Bailey spoke at the banquet Monday night. Eli W. Collins, director of the state Unemployment Compensation Division and a former president of the MPTOA, was toastmaster.

Delegates from six states were present for the meeting.

Carolina Group Sets Date

Theatre Owners of North Carolina and South Carolina will hold their 1940 summer convention at the Ocean Forest Hotel in Myrtle Beach June 9, 10 and 11, it was announced by H. R. Berry, Hartsville, S. C., president of the association.

Mrs. Walter Griffith, Charlotte exhibitor and secretary, announced that a majority of exhibitors in the two states voted for Myrtle Beach.

Mr. Berry appointed a program committee to handle details to be headed by H. H. Everett, Charlotte, chairman, assisted by Roy Smart, Charlotte and Ben Strozier, Rock Hill, S. C.

It was announced that between 300 and 400 exhibitors and their wives have made tentative arrangements to attend the three-day convention. It is planned to have a Hollywood star as guest of honor.

Northwest Allied to Meet

Allied Theatres of the Northwest will hold its annual meeting in Minneapolis immediately following the national Allied convention in Chicago June 19th to 22nd, it has been announced by W. A. Steffes, president. The organization is conducting a drive for new members and has held one regional meeting, at Rochester, Minn., in connection with the campaign. Other meetings are planned.

THOMPSON AGENCY SETS OUT TO OPEN AD FILMS FIELD ON WIDE SCALE

Head of Company's Film Department Says Public Is the Best Censor, Claims 10,000 Theatres Will Accept Films

National advertisers are being asked to turn new attention to screen advertising by the J. Walter Thompson Company, one of the leading advertising agencies in the country. In Fortune magazine, a Thompson advertisement reproduced an exchange of letters between the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and the advertising agency on the subject, but neither would comment additionally on the correspondence except to say that a round table discussion had been suggested by the Thompson agency to determine the attitude of the film industry.

For several years some of the leading advertising agencies have been giving attention to commercial films and have organized special departments to handle this type of work for their advertising clients. The agencies have been experimenting in what the J. Walter Thompson company called "this commercially unexplored medium." Though sponsored films have a long history and some six to eight thousand theatres use "minute movie ads," an intensive drive is being made to extend the medium to longer films in the field of the short subjects.

Calls Experiment Stage Over

The J. Walter Thompson announcement indicates that the company believes the experimental stage is past and it is ready to offer motion picture "circulation" as a regular feature to advertisers. The purpose of the company's work in this field is "to turn movie audiences into net paid circulation . . . to develop new techniques in advertising and public relations for the screen."

The Thompson agency has produced in the last 21 months 22 advertising films, 14 of them animated cartoons in color in the "minute movie" length. A "new theatrical circulation" of 5,000,000, previously unavailable for sponsored pictures, has been opened up, it is claimed.

Fred H. Fidler, head of J. Walter Thompson's film department, explained the company's position and activities in this medium. He said the reason for turning attention to the great motion picture audience is because "We feel that the screen, because of the combination of sight, sound, motion and often color, is one of the most powerful mediums for influencing public opinion."

Calls Public Best Censor

"The public is the best censor of screen entertainment," Mr. Fidler said. The experience of J. Walter Thompson has been, according to Mr. Fidler, that a combination of animated or life entertainment and a product message "in good taste" is accepted by the public and by the exhibitor. He asserted that their surveys had shown a "negligible adverse reaction" to their advertising films and in some cases the films had been applauded. Letters from both affiliated and independent exhibitors state, the agency's film executive continued, that both adults and children like the animated color cartoons produced by the advertising agency. As long as such films are acceptable to their audiences, exhibitors welcome the additional revenue, he said.

Sub-standard advertising or films not in good taste or not well produced, Mr. Fidler said, do not bring the results. He said their pictures were carefully made by "topflight" animators in Hollywood, and remarked, "Our animation excels or equals Hollywood product for workmanship, with the exception of the Disney cartoons."

No "Playlets" Withdrawn

Mr. Fidler reported that there was not a single instance of one of their "playlets" having been withdrawn. The fact that the cartoons are in color, in addition to high standards of production, helps achieve acceptance, according to Mr. Fidler. He explained, "The film market is not yet flooded with color so our films have a 'plus' value to the exhibitor and to the audience."

J. Walter Thompson prepares the script and supervises production. Distribution is handled through one of the companies regularly specializing in advertising pictures, but even here the advertising agency watches operations and selects the theatres.

Says Use Is Spreading

The use of films as an advertising medium is growing, Mr. Fidler said, claiming that 10,000 theatres will accept minute movies. He also said non-theatrical audiences for sponsored films were growing from year to year and that if the motion picture industry could develop acceptable methods for bringing superior sponsored films to audiences through regular theatres the box office competition of non-theatrical audiences would automatically be reduced.

Although J. Walter Thompson's principal motion picture operations are at present in the field of short colored animated cartoons, longer advertising films have been produced principally for non-theatrical distribution. Minute movies with live talent find a ready acceptance if well done, the agency reported.

In stating the case for theatrical distribution of sponsored films Mr. Fidler said, "Hollywood has demonstrated that education and information are compatible with such recent pictures as 'Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet,' 'Grapes of Wrath,' 'Mr. Smith Goes to Washington' and 'Gone With the Wind.'" He also said, "If it were not for the advertising of business and industry, magazines and newspapers could not have been brought to their present state of public service, and business and industry can also help the motion picture industry to widen the application of its medium."

Advertising films are "not a substitute but a complement" to entertainment pictures, according to Mr. Fidler. He claimed that the interests of advertising agencies in sponsored films and the interests of the entertainment motion picture industry could be reconciled.

Cites Trailers as Example

Mr. Fidler compared sponsored pictures with trailers. He pointed out that the patron paid to see a picture and might find himself subjected to from one to four trailers on coming attractions in which he might have no interest whatsoever. Mr. Fidler claimed that just as the public accepted trailers it would accept entertainment minute movies made for reputable companies.

Mr. Fidler also pointed out that television most probably would use motion pictures for a substantial part of its programs and someone would have to make those pictures, which would have to be sponsored films. He claimed that the major companies were missing an opportunity to spread out the overhead and large salaries and good preparatory experience in television by not interesting themselves in advertising pictures now.

Newspapers Had Protested

When it was recalled that newspapers had protested the action of some of the large companies back in 1932 when they produced and distributed advertising films, Mr. Fidler said, "Progressive newspapers will not oppose screen advertising when it is established on a proper basis and would accept it just as soon as they recognized it as an established expression of industry. Many newspapers themselves use screen advertising." It was pointed out that as yet the advertising agencies "had no part" in any question between newspaper publishers and motion picture interests over the use of screen advertising.

Code Seal Required

Over a year ago the MPPDA announced that a code seal had to be obtained from its Advertising Advisory Board and affixed to all sponsored films over 200 feet in length that could be shown in any theatre owned or controlled by members of the Hays organization. The rule also requires that in addition to the seal any sponsored film over 200 feet approved by the Board must carry in its main title the words "This is an advertisement."

Although newspapers and magazines must print the word "advertisement" on any ad that looks like regular textual matter and the Hays office advertising rule serves a similar purpose, it is reported that this requirement is one of the matters the advertising agencies and others interested in sponsored motion pictures wish to discuss with the MPPDA. However, the whole attitude of the organized industry towards sponsored pictures would come up in any discussion by representatives of agencies and the MPPDA.

Meanwhile the Newell-Emmett advertising agencies has not made any distribution arrangements for the "March of Time"-made "Tobaccoland, U.S.A.," which the agency handled for Liggett & Myers (Chesterfield). The "Tobaccoland" film, which was a year in production, has been shown only at its two day premiere (admission free) in Chesterfield's home town, Durham, N. C., before the company's radio broadcasts, and once over television.

ANOTHER NEW YORK NEWSREEL THEATRE

A newsreel theatre, The Airlines, will be included in the new Airline Terminal Building, opposite Grand Central Station, New York, when it is opened about Labor Day. The cornerstone of the building was laid this week. The house will be operated by the present operators of the Grand Central Terminal newsreel theatre.

David Durbin, now managing the Grand Central, will be general manager of both theatres. The new building will contain the ticket and sales offices for American, Transcontinental and Western, United, Eastern and Pan American airlines.

"U. S. FIRING AT FILM INDUSTRY THAT MINDS ITS OWN BUSINESS": GRIFFIS

Motion Picture Never Has Exerted Its Vast Potential Influence on the Government, Says Paramount Executive Chairman

In its present attack on the motion picture industry, the United States Government is pointing its heaviest guns at an industry which consistently has refrained from exerting its own vast potential influence on the Government, Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, told the weekly meeting of the Los Angeles Town Hall, in Los Angeles, Monday.

Addressing a luncheon club composed of leading Los Angeles business men, Mr. Griffis declared that the U. S. attack was made just at the moment when the foreign war situation had made the position of the film industry the most difficult in its history, and he made a plea for the continued independence of "the nation's most widely patronized art."

Charges Harassment

"A great combination of Art and Business (motion pictures) finds itself today beset on every side by attacks of local, state and federal agencies, in the courts and the Legislature," Mr. Griffis said, "harassed by such Congressional bills as the Neely Bill . . . harassed and tormented by suits of the Department of Justice aimed toward forcing the major companies to separate theatre ownership from production; worn down by taxes of every conceivable nature; inhibited and limited by almost a hundred censor boards which have sprung up around the country; all at a time when an unprecedented collapse of foreign income is upon us due to the breakdown of foreign currencies and the War." The industry finds its foreign income has abruptly decreased 25 per cent below a year ago, he said.

Contrasting the attack on the film industry with Hollywood's conspicuous aloofness from partisan politics and propaganda, Mr. Griffis said, "This is an industry, too, that consistently, even if not quietly, sticks to its knitting of furnishing amusement, laughter, entertainment and escape; spends its far-flung energy in making the world a happier place to live in; resolutely endeavors to keep out of the field of politics and propaganda, although I sincerely believe that if the motion picture companies should so desire, and would for the moment stray from this principle, within a very short time could so influence public opinion as to elect a Congress and a President; and probably has more influence on the lives of the younger generation —and this is a broad statement—than most of our schools and colleges put together."

Opposes Government Regulation

Mr. Griffis took sharp issue with those who claim that Government regulation is the way to improve the quality of pictures and asked that the industry be allowed to solve its own problems in the future as it has in the past. The movies, he pointed out, are not only a business but a form of art, and even in a country as totalitarian as Soviet Russia there is a strong movement to free the arts from state interference and domination.

"The industry's willingness and desire to cure its own evils," Mr. Griffis said, "is being continually shown by the revision of its trade agreements and practices and by the ceaseless development of many years of its own censorship of its own productions as affecting public relations, public morals, business relations, types of advertising and its activities in every branch."

To show what the industry has done to improve its product, the Paramount executive stressed the higher cultural level attained by films in the last few seasons.

"It is a remarkable truth," Mr. Griffis said, "that perhaps this development is followed by the fact that as pictures become better they invite more intellectual and intelligent criticism and tend to create, not obscure, the growth of perfectionism."

Most of the film industry's past troubles, Mr. Griffis pointed out, emanated from the failure of the public, Government and sometimes producers themselves to realize that since the days of the "Peep Show" the movies have become "Big Business."

Keep Selling Old Films

"As I said before, these attacks come at a time when, after years of struggling with currency evaporation in many countries, the industry finds itself with its foreign income suddenly decreased somewhere around 25 per cent as against a year ago, though surprisingly of this decrease only a small amount of the falling-off is unity business and the remainder due to the terrific drop in exchange rates in England and the more important European countries. Not many years ago my company took about a million dollars a year out of Spain. And now I might tell you surprisingly enough that while we have not sent a picture into Spain for several years, we have kept our organization intact, paid them out of local profits, and more than doubled our bank balances in pesetas. This has come about by the simple expedient of merely sending around and 'round to the theatres the old pictures which are there and which they are glad to see over and over again. If any of you gentlemen are in the market for a few pesetas or an apartment house in Madrid, we will be glad to accommodate you. We will gladly offer you an additional choice assortment of yen in Japan, marks in Germany and, in fact, substantially all currencies from kopeks to Hungarian leis.

"In England, however, we have had the most astonishing cooperation from the British Government and the Board of Trade by whom we are currently allowed to take out at the official sterling rate approximately half of our sterling intake. This at least until next October, though after that no one can predict."

In the light of the unfavorable conditions which he outlined, Mr. Griffis said, "The trend of picture-making is towards the creation of a certain domestic self containment, that is, the manufacturing of pictures which might make the laborer worthy of his hire even should the entire outside world market collapse. This becomes a challenge to artist, producer, technician, theatre operator and banker alike. It is being brilliantly met."

To the Los Angeles business leaders, Mr. Griffis referred to the movies as the "industry which spends in your little suburb of Hollywood alone some $150,000,000 annually in production; carries an investment of many hundreds of millions of dollars in theatres in every city, village and hamlet in the country; gives active employment to some 300,000 people annually; pays some $125,000,000 in taxes, and entertains and educates in the United States within the walls of its theatres more than 80,000,000 people weekly and approximately 150,000,000 people weekly abroad."

"Factories" for Films

Citing Paramount as an example, Mr. Griffis said that in its essentials a film company is no different from any of the great manufacturing enterprises of the country. "Our factory," he said, "is in Hollywood where we make feature pictures and some shorts. In New York we have another factory for news reels and other shorts. It is highly departmentalized, including distribution, both domestic and foreign, theatre management, and many other departments, legal, insurance, public relations, even banking."

Mr. Griffis compared Paramount to Armour & Co., as a developer of by-products, taking for his example the fact that Paramount's net profit out of the candy business in its theatres is in excess of the interest on its indebtedness.

"During the past four years Paramount has reduced its consolidated debt almost $20,000,000, paid approximately $8,000,000 in dividends and converted about $11,000,000 of its preferred shares into common, all without public financing."

Speaking as a New York financier and business man to his California counterparts, Mr. Griffis defined his own position in the film industry as an organizer of art. He quoted a prominent Paramount theatre partner as saying that "the greatest art in the world is art of the organization of Art" and described his job as just that. Mr. Griffis is partner of Hemphill, Noyes & Company, besides chairman of the Paramount executive committee.

Art and Business

"During the past three or four years Paramount and subsidiaries have done upward of $50,000,000 in financing," Mr. Griffis said, "and though as investment banker I am ashamed to confess it, not a dollar of this has been public financing. And not a dollar has been paid to any broker or middle-man.

"It has been done almost entirely through exchanges offered to its own security holders, through banks and insurance companies, and in the process its average interest rates have been reduced from about five and one-half per cent to about three and one-half per cent, with a saving to the company of about $1,500,000 a year."

Consolidated Earnings

LOEW CENTRE ON FAIR REOPENING

The Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer World's Fair Information Centre, which last year supplied information about New York City and the Fair to more than a million persons, was formally reopened Monday, five days before the Fair starts its second season. The Centre is located at Broadway and Seventh Avenue at 46th Street.

A supplementary service continued from last year will be a visitors' registry and index filing system.

INDUSTRY PACTS CAN'T HALT DUALS: SILVERMAN

Only Federal Control Would Eliminate Double Features, Says President of Essaness

Fifty motion picture theatres in Chicago are showing programs that run almost twice the length of time required to fly there from New York, according to Edwin Silverman, president of the Essaness Theatres Corporation. In New York this week, Mr. Silverman emphasized the consistency of the fight which Essaness had made against double and triple features in a city where Balaban and Katz largely control the theatre situation.

In a period when faulty marketing is causing the industry to decline, said Mr. Silverman, only federal control of program length would eliminate multiple feature shows, because "there will always be 'chiselers' in industry agreements."

Mr. Silverman termed indecisive and unfair a recent experiment in Chicago in which a number of Balaban and Katz houses and some independents, 17 in all, tried single feature shows.

"Things in this business have a way of being exaggerated," he said. "This happened at the time "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was released, and here is the story:

"Someone thought of single featuring the picture, and we were consulted. While we are strongly anti-double feature, we didn't want to go single for only one week. This is a reform you can't make unless you all are in unison, and unless you all try it for a period of time, and begin on a specific date."

Says Trial Was Not Fair

Of the 17 theatres which made the experiment, no more than four, all operated by Balaban and Katz, had "Mr. Smith," and, Mr. Silverman added, "the others had inferior pictures which had been double featured in all the previous runs."

Reports in Chicago newspapers that the experiment had failed came, Mr. Silverman asserted, out of a Hollywood conversation of an executive of Balaban and Katz with a syndicated columnist, with the resultant Chicago headline, "Double Features Are Here to Stay."

Mr. Silverman recalled a bill, placed before the Illinois legislature last year, to limit motion picture shows to two hours and 45 minutes. Governor Horner vetoed it.

Paramount at the time retained as counsel Leo Spitz, former RKO president, Mr. Silverman added.

"We wanted that bill; we still want such a bill," he said. "If it had been sustained, the independent theatre owner would have had the only possible cure for what the majority of them consider is the motion picture industry's most vicious evil."

Cites Falling Attendance

Mr. Silverman said attendance had fallen off the last 10 years for these reasons: poor marketing; control of the industry by affiliated circuit owners; reactionary minds in the industry; the increased leisure time and the many forms of entertainment now available to the public, and the inability of the industry to adapt itself to these changes.

"The problem is not insufficient leisure time or purchasing power," he said. "The average American has almost twice as much spare time, and as much, if not more, money. It is just that he now can do more with the time and money.

He noted that entertainment forms quick to take advantage of this were roller skating, ice skating, softball, bowling and night baseball.

EDWIN SILVERMAN

"Why, since the introduction of night baseball," he continued, "the game has drawn larger crowds than on average Sundays and Saturdays all over the country.

"The motion picture policy, it seems to me, has been not to make it easy for them to see the picture they want, when they want to. We say to the customer, 'If you want to see a motion picture, you can't do anything else the same afternoon or evening.' It takes only three hours and 45 minutes to fly from Chicago to New York, but there are quite a number of theatres in Chicago which have programs lasting six hours. We would cut them out tomorrow if Balaban and Katz would, and we've tried to get them to cut them out."

Urges Survey

Mr. Silverman claimed that, whereas many industries in the country have increased their business by good merchandising, in spite of higher taxes and payrolls—he cited the mail order houses, the auto industry, the Du Pont company—yet the picture industry is doing less business.

"The picture industry, in 1930, had a weekly attendance of 110,000,000, out of a total population of about 122,000,000—or 92 per cent of the total," he asserted. "But last year we had 85,000,000 and this year we have 83,000,000. If the same ratio obtained, as in 1930, we would be having a weekly attendance of 120,000,000 persons. We have lost the remaining millions."

The Chicago circuit president suggested that the industry hire a survey organization such as Dr. George Gallup's.

"The pictures are better now than they ever were; so, if we're losing money and audiences gradually, we ought to know definitely why. In my own opinion, it's all in the marketing."

"A handful of people, literally, control the theatre policies of the industry," he charged, "because one fellow has to do what the fellow ahead of him did, and the hands of the distribution sales managers are tied by the circuit owners."

"Streamlined distribution can overcome many of the causes of all these lawsuits. After all, competition, and the fostering of it, has certainly developed all of our present industries to their present peak."

Pulitzer Award Goes to Steinbeck

John Steinbeck's novel, "The Grapes of Wrath," produced in film by 20th Century-Fox, and William Saroyan's play, "The Time of Your Life," led the list of winners of the 1939 Pulitzer awards in letters and journalism, Columbia University trustees announced Monday. Mr. Saroyan, whose play also was adjudged the best of the season by the New York Drama Critics Circle on Friday, May 3rd, said he did not want the award, though he knew his play to be "a good and perhaps great theatrical work."

The awards amount to $1,000 each, as do the other awards in literature under the terms of the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer. Also announced were the winners in journalism, which amount to $500 each.

Other awards were made to Carl Sandburg, in history, for his four-volume "Abraham Lincoln: The War Years," published by Harcourt, Brace & Co.

Ray Stannard Baker, in biography, for his "Woodrow Wilson, Life and Letters," published by Doubleday, Doran & Co.

Mark Van Doren, in poetry, for his "Collected Poems," published by Henry Holt & Company.

Journalism awards were: Waterbury (Conn.) Republican and American, for the most disinterested and meritorious public service of an American newspaper, for its campaign exposing municipal graft and corruption.

Otto D. Tolischus, of the New York Times, for the most distinguished service as a Washington or foreign correspondent in 1939. His winning dispatches were filed from Berlin.

Bart Howard, of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for distinguished editorial writing.

S. Burton Heath, of the New York World-Telegram, for a distinguished example of a reporter's work, based on his articles exposing misdeeds leading to the conviction of Martin T. Manton, former senior judge of the United States circuit court of appeals.

Edmund Duffy, of the Baltimore Sun, for a distingnished example of a cartoonist's work.

Photographer's Elect

Joseph Heppner, of Metropolitan Photos, and James Sileo, of Cosmo-Sileo, photographers to the motion picture industry in New York, were elected first vice-president and chairman of the board of directors, respectively, of the Press Photographers Association, at the organization's meeting Tuesday evening at the Hotel Lexington, New York. Mr. Heppner was presented with a traveling bag by the association for his recent work as co-chairman of the dance committee.

Garrison District Manager

Joseph Garrison, former branch manager in St. Louis for Universal, has been appointed district manager for the company's Omaha, Kansas City, Des Moines, and St. Louis territories. Pete Dana, whom he replaces, has been transferred to the home office in New York, for special assignments. Mr. Garrison's St. Louis post is being filled by Harry Hines, a former salesman there.

GOLDWYN URGES PRICE SCALES TUNED TO BOX OFFICE VALUES

Says Hollywood Can Not Make More Than Two Hundred a Year and Deliver Quality; Proclaims Industry at Crisis

Samuel Goldwyn has come to New York and established his aerie in the Waldorf-Astoria Tower, to stay a spell and deal with three situations.

First, Mr. Goldwyn finds himself at the cross-roads in his controversy with United Artists, and with negotiations elsewhere for releasing arrangements.

Second, he will direct some attention to UA's 1940 sales convention, which opens Monday at the Waldorf-Astoria. See page 39.

Third, he sees and proclaims the motion picture industry at a crisis—40 per cent of the world market lost in wars, a waning attendance at American theatres, off perhaps 25 millions a week in a decade—and rising costs in Hollywood production.

Says Block Booking Must Go

What's to be done?

The answer would be, if Mr. Goldwyn could order events, in classification of pictures sharply on the basis of entertainment value, with admission prices to match.

"If the exhibitor is to have a sliding scale of admission prices keyed to quality, then do you agree that he must also buy on a scale adjusted to quality?" he was asked.

"Yes, emphatically so," he responded quickly—all Goldwyn responses are quick—"and all Hollywood knows, too, even if it does not admit it, that block booking is out—must go."

Brains for 200 Good Films

Important in Mr. Goldwyn's prescription of program is his insistence on reduction of output in Hollywood to the point where quality considerations can prevail.

"Hollywood has been turning out about 600 pictures a year and experience proves that only about 200 of them have the merit and value to win public support, to be, in other words, really worth making.

"Hollywood does not have the brains and talent to turn out more than 200 good ones a year. But it goes on making a flood of pictures, at the rate in some studios of 50 a year, one a week, because the schedule calls for it. That means that they are making pictures with their eye on, not the important public with the buying power to support the industry, but that served by the little theatre in the sticks or the backstreets where they want to run seven changes a week."

Daring and Payrolls

"It would appear that that would be up to Hollywood's decision," Mr. Goldwyn's one-man audience responded. "But do you think that a production community that has 'only enough brains and talent to make 200 pictures a year,' while it makes three times that, has meanwhile enough decision, brains and daring to restrict itself to what it can do well?"

"There are a lot of smart people in Hollywood," Mr. Goldwyn asserted.

"Enough?"

"One of them told me the other day," said Mr. Goldwyn, trying to look irrelevant, "after I had made a talk about the situation, that they would not pay any attention to what I had had to say until the day when they missed their first payroll."

Mr. Goldwyn views as devastatingly destructive double and triple bills, giveaways and lottery schemes. He considers that the weak product is dragging down the standing of the motion picture as a whole, that picture merchandising is too generally dominated by a box office policy which sells the good, bad and indifferent all at the same price.

Aggressive Mr. Goldwyn sees no other tenable course for the picture makers. "You can be sure," he said, "that production costs, where quality is maintained, will not go down. The competition for talent and the labor conditions make that certain. You can be sure that labor is not going to take less."

"What about executives?"

"There are not enough executives to matter," he replied. "Also in the main where

For a long time Alexander Korda, left, and Samuel Goldwyn, right, have not been positively chummy. Incidentally Mr. Korda and his assorted operations here and abroad, in relation to United Artists Corporation, constituted a major element of Mr. Goldwyn's contention in a lawsuit that his contract with the corporation had been breached.

Here they are, New York bound from Hollywood, in the intimacy of a chartered plane, and, if the camera is to be believed, smiling.

Broadway speculated that the mood denoted a bearing on negotiations being had this week in New York for an end of the Goldwyn-UA controversy, with some manner of cash settlement pertaining to stock interests and a probable freeing of Mr. Goldwyn for the distribution of his product elsewhere.

The grapevine telegraph was laden with renewed conjectures about the possibility that Goldwyn product might ultimately be found in Warners', or maybe Paramount's, release schedules. From Hollywood came report on the fact that of late Y. Frank Freeman had been out to Mr. Goldwyn's house, also that there were indications of renewed conversations between Mr. Goldwyn and Harry Warner.

Mr. Goldwyn's first week in New York, starting an indefinite sojourn, was filled with conferences and a vigorous attention to press expression. It was to be deemed probable he would be in New York until a final adjustment had been reached.

Goldwyn for Ban On Block Sales But Not for Neely Bill

those factors are out of line they tend in time to fall of their own weight."

Mr. Goldwyn, with his experience as long as the feature era of the screen, is entirely aware that his projected general policy would leave unserved the lesser theatres. He views that as unavoidable and a consequence of what he thinks must be the development of the business in pursuit of its survival. He has the opinion that those lesser theatres can find and buy product attuned to their policies and the buying power of their audiences.

While affirming his opinion that block booking must go as a trade practice, Mr. Goldwyn in one of his several press audiences insisted that he continued opposed to the Neely bill, because of such onerous provisions as those embodied in the synopsis clause.

The contemporary Goldwyn production, "The Westerner," is to have its premiere at Fort Worth, Texas, June 25th, at the Hollywood and Worth theatres, along with a three-day celebration with civic and state participations in the hoopla manner, parades, and a charity ball.

"'The Westerner,'" says Mr. Goldwyn, "is to be given trade shows before selling."

Court Upholds Mohawk Grand National Offer

Federal Judge Vincent Leibell, in New York on Tuesday, affirmed the sale of Grand National Pictures' film rights to Mohawk Pictures Corporation, after competitive bidding. The acceptance of the Mohawk bid of $17,500 and 30 per cent of the first $100,000 grossed, and 50 per cent of all sums over that amount, was upheld by the court.

Gustave A. De Lemas has applied to the judge for an order setting aside the sale and compelling the GN trustee to accept his own bid of a flat $37,500.

Judge Leibell's decision rejected this application.

Columbia Wins Point

Columbia Pictures management, defendant in a suit by five stockholders, in New York Supreme Court, won a point on Tuesday when N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Phillip J. McCook dismissed two causes of action in the suit, ruling that attempts to recover alleged excess salary and bonuses were barred by time limitations. However, the judge denied Columbia's application to dismiss the other causes of action.

Boston Projectionists Celebrate

The 30th anniversary celebration of the Boston Motion Picture Projectionists, Local 182, was held in the grand ball room of the Copley-Plaza hotel there late last week. Boston theatres closed from a half to three-quarters of an hour earlier to enable the Local members to attend. The banquet was $5 a plate and 800 tickets were sold.

Appoints Kansas Censor; New "Strange Cargo" Ban

Mrs. Mary Numbers, wife of a dentist at Paola, Kan., has been named, by Governor Payne Ratner, chairman of the Kansas State Board of Review. Mrs. Numbers succeeds Mae Claussen of Emporia, whose three year term expired April 1st. Other members of the board are Mrs. J. M. Meek, Democrat, and Mrs. J. R. Stowers, Republican.

Following the lead of political censorship in Providence, Harry F. Curvin, director of public safety, has banned "Strange Cargo" in Pawtucket, R. I.

Eureka Productions, New York, on Monday filed a proceeding in the New York Supreme court for a mandamus to compel the New York State censor to examine the film, "Ecstasy," for the issuance of a license.

Oklahoma University Plans Short Projection Course

The University of Oklahoma College of Engineering is considering a "short course" on factors in exhibition and projection, for May 20th and 21st. Unions and exhibitors in the territory around Norman, Okla., in which the college is situated, are to cooperate. Authorities on projection, sound and electrical engineering, from companies and from other colleges, have been invited.

Dean Carson, of the university, will deliver the welcoming address.

The College of Engineering instructor in electrical engineering, Ansel P. Challenner, hopes to have representatives of the International Projector Corporation, Bell and Howell, Altec, National Carbon Company, Motiograph, Strong Electric Company, RCA Manufacturing Company, and Bausch and Lomb.

16mm Rights Purchased For Goetz-Small Films

Non-Theatrical Pictures Corporation has acquired for unrestricted release outside of theatres 16 mm rights to the eight Harry Goetz-Edward Small productions released through United Artists, according to an announcement of Herbert Edwards, president of the company.

The pictures acquired included "Count of Monte Cristo," Robert Donat and Elissa Landi; "Last of the Mohicans," "Let 'Em Have It," Virginia Bruce and Richard Arlen; "The Melody Lingers On," "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," Jack Benny, Gene Raymond and Nancy Carroll; "Joe Palooka," Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez and Stuart Erwin; "I Cover the Waterfront," Claudette Colbert and Ben Lyon, and "Red Salute."

Barney Pitkin Honored At New Haven Dinner

More than 100 film and other friends from the Connecticut territory, Boston and New York attended the testimonial dinner at the Racebrook Country Club, New Haven, given in honor of Barney Pitkin, RKO manager in New Haven, for his 20th anniversary in the industry, on Tuesday. Morris Joseph, "dean" of the exchanges, presented Mr. Pitkin with a gift on behalf of those assembled, and Harry F. Shaw, Loew's-Poli division manager, was toastmaster. Thomas Donaldson, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager, was chairman of the event. Hugh Maguire, RKO manager, was treasurer.

Gold and Schlaifer Retain Posts; New Greenthal Duties

United Artists personnel adjustments this week included disclosure Tuesday by Maurice Silverstone, company chief, that Harry Gold and L. J. Schlaifer will continue in their posts of vice-president and eastern sales manager and vice-president and western sales manager, respectively. Mr. Silverstone also announced that Monroe Greenthal, in addition to his duties as exploitation manager at the home office, will become advertising and exploitation manager of a new "pre-selling" bureau.

Kelly Stays for Convention

The first of the two United Artists regional conventions opens Monday in New York. Story on page 39.

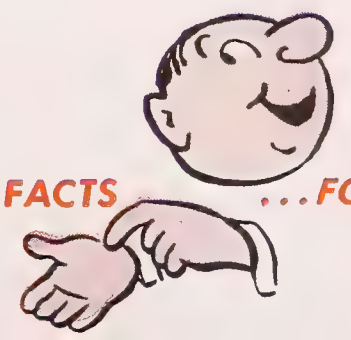
Arthur Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, has postponed departure for Europe for another week or 10 days in order to attend the New York sales meeting.

Mr. Silverstone said at a special press conference at his home in New York, where he is confined by illness, that both Mr. Gold and Mr. Schlaifer are giving the maximum satisfaction to the company and to all its owners and producers. Broadway had heard in recent weeks that Mr. Gold was to be appointed general sales manager.

The new "pre-selling" bureau, to be headed by Mr. Greenthal, has been organized to increase domestic revenues. Mr. Silverstone said that the company's study of outstanding exploitation on recent pictures of outstanding quality convinced it that box-office values of worthwhile productions could be augmented by millions of dollars through successful pre-selling campaigns.

Mr. Greenthal will spend time in Hollywood conferring with producers and also will supervise activities of the new staff in the field. The new selling system includes an exploitation and advertising program centered in a large part on trade publications. Mr. Greenthal will begin individual picture campaigns from the time of the purchase of the story and continued through the release of the production.

Starts Operations in June



The individual campaigns will be handled by 15 field men in key cities working under Mr. Greenthal. The men will be appointed in the near future and the bureau is expected to begin operations about June 1st. The new bureau will work in cooperation with the home office advertising and publicity department, headed by Lynn Farnol.

The plan for the new "pre-selling" bureau was approved at the meeting of the United Artists board of directors held in New York about two weeks ago. At that time David O. Selznick contributed many suggestions for the work of the bureau, based on the methods used by his company before and during the production of "Gone With the Wind."

Patrons Absorb Tax

The Shea Theatre Corporation's Bexley and State in Dover, Ohio, and the Union, at New Philadelphia, Ohio, has passed along the one cent amusement tax to patrons. The tax had previously been included in the regular admissions of 25, 30 and 35 cents. A circuit announcement said that for years the circuit has absorbed the tax, paying three per cent of receipts, but that with the rising cost of product an adjustment was necessary.

LOEW NET JUMPS TO $6,789,828 IN FIRST SIX MONTHS OF WORLD WAR II

Amortization Costs Reallocated on Basis of 30% Foreign Instead of 35%; RKO Would Buy Meehan Stock

Despite all the pessimistic predictions of immediate financial repercussions of World War II upon the ledgers of American motion picture companies, from experts and estimators, the net profits of Loew's, Inc., one of the biggest among the big, jumped $420,981, to $6,789,828, in the six months ending March 14th, the first full six months report to be made by any of the large picture companies since the war started. Not that the war, with all its marketing, shipping and monetary restrictions hasn't been felt in certain motion picture quarters, nor that it won't be felt in the future in others, as all are agreed.

Loew's on Tuesday in New York reported that the company's earnings, before depreciation, taxes and reserves, including its share of profits of affiliated companies, after deduction of preferred dividends of subsidiaries, amounted to $11,101,356 for the 28 weeks ended March 14th, as compared with $10,516,538 for the same period ended in 1939.

Amortizations Revised

Due mainly to war conditions abroad, said the management, Loew's has revised its table of amortization of film costs, applicable to all pictures released subsequent to Aug. 31, 1939, by reallocating such costs in the proportion of 70 per cent to domestic and 30 per cent to foreign, instead of the previous respective allocations of 65 per cent and 35 per cent.

In addition, the company has accelerated the amortization rates on such pictures. As a result of such revision and reallocation approximately $865,000 more has been charged off to amortization expense in the 28 weeks ended March 14, 1940 than would have been deducted had the company's amortization procedure not been revised.

The company's share of net profits for the 28 weeks ended March 14, 1940, after depreciation and taxes and reserves for contingencies, was $6,789,828, as against $6,368,847 for the like period of 1939. Such net earnings were equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $3.79 per share on the common stock outstanding in the hands of the public on March 14, 1940, as against $3.68 per share on the average number of common shares outstanding for the comparable 28 weeks in 1939.

Comparative Earnings Statement of Loew's, Inc., For 28 Weeks Period

Following is the comparative earnings statement of Loew's, Inc., including subsidiaries, for the 28 weeks ended March 14, 1940, subject to year-end audit:

	28 Weeks Ended Mar. 14, 1940	28 Weeks Ended Mar. 16, 1939
Company's Share Operating Profit After Subsidiaries' Preferred Dividends	$11,101,356	$10,516,538
Depreciation and Taxes	3,411,528	3,247,691
	$ 7,689,828	$ 7,268,847
Reserve for Contingencies	900,000	900,000
Company's Share Net Profit	$ 6,789,828	$ 6,368,847
Per Share—Preferred Stock	$49.66	$46.58
Per Share—Average Common Stock	$ 3.79	$ 3.68

RKO Seeks Finances To Buy Meehan Stock

RKO is understood to be seeking a loan in order to buy out the M. J. Meehan interest in Keith-Albee-Orpheum. Of the $6,500,000 KOA preferred issue, Mr. Meehan's holdings are valued at about $3,500,000 and RKO's at $2,500,000. RKO has consulted with the Equitable Life Assurance Society regarding the necessary loan of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

Mr. Meehan's price is reported to be $110 a share for the approximately 31,000 shares which he holds. This is equivalent to the call price of the stock but does not include past due dividends amounting to about $21 per share.

Little progress on the financing negotiations has been made, however, and RKO is still studying several plans of internal financing for the stock purchase, which would eliminate the necessity of making a large outside loan.

Negotiations Continue

It was emphasized, however, that this does not mean that the negotiations have been or will be dropped, even for the time being. The objective of consolidating KAO with RKO by means of the purchase of Mr. Meehan's holdings is as desirable now as ever, it was said. The current negotiations were initiated by Atlas Corp. about three years ago. At no time since their inception were the negotiations abandoned and later revived. The general purpose of effecting a consolidation of KAO with RKO has been and remains a continuing one.

The proceedings in conclusion of the RKO reorganization eclipsed the KAO negotiations for a time, but at the first opportunity thereafter they were resumed with the only difference being that the reorganized RKO company became a principal to the negotiations in the place of Atlas Corp.

Consolidation of KAO would make available to RKO about $3,500,000 in cash held by the theatre company and its subsidiaries, exclusive of the earnings of those companies, which have averaged approximately $1,000,000 annually in recent years.

Federal Judge William Bondy has postponed the hearings on applications for final allowances in the RKO reorganization proceedings from May 14th until May 28th at the request of the trustee, the Irving Trust Company. The petition stated that the trustee had retained a new attorney and needed time for additional preparation.

RCA Quarter Net Profit—$2,312,893

At the annual stockholders' meeting David Sarnoff, president, announced the quarter earnings of the Radio Corporation of America which controls RCA Victor, RCA Photophone, NBC and has a substantial interest in RKO.

Net profit for the quarter amounted to $2,312,893, compared to $1,448,110 in the first quarter of last year—an increase of $864,783 or 60%. These earnings cover the preferred dividend requirements, and leave 10.8c for each share of the outstanding Common stock. This compares with 4.6c earned for the Common stock in the first quarter of last year.

The gross volume of the business for the first quarter of this year amounted to $28,310,407 compared to $25,004,989 in the same quarter of last year—an increase of 13%.

Mr. Sarnoff said, "The annual report of the corporation for the year ended Dec. 31, 1939, sent to all stockholders, showed that all operations of the company were on a profitable basis. Compared to the previous year, there was an increase in gross income of 10 per cent, an increase in net profit of 9 per cent, and an increase in employment of 15 per cent."

The consolidated statement of income for RCA and subsidiary companies for the quarter ending March 31, 1940 was as follows:

Gross Income:
From Operations	$28,167,786.79	$24,870,975.80
Other Income, including Interest and Dividends from Investments	142,620.31	134,012.72
Total Gross Income from all Sources	$28,310,407.10	$25,004,988.52
Less: Cost of Goods Sold, General Operating, Development, Selling and Administrative Expenses	$24,506,122.01	$22,178,675.96
Net Income for the Quarter (before Interest, Depreciation, Amortization of Patents and Federal Income Taxes)	$ 3,804,285.09	$ 2,826,312.56
Deduct:
Interest	$ 24,503.97	$ 36,602.21
Depreciation	791,087.68	891,400.31
Amortization of Patents	150,000.00	150,000.00
Provision for Federal Income Taxes	525,800.00	300,200.00
Total Deductions	$ 1,491,391.65	$ 1,378,202.52
Net Profit for the quarter	$ 2,312,893.44	$ 1,448,110.04
Preferred Dividends	804,926.68	805,309.43
Balance for Common Stock	$ 1,507,966.76	$ 642,800.61
Earnings per share on Common (13,881,016 Shares)	.108	.046

A quarterly dividend on the corporation's $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock and on the "B" preferred stock were declared for the period from April 1st to June 30th and will be paid July 1st to stockholders of record of June 7th.

the agreement between the RCA and the Internal Revenue Bureau which put the 1929 income tax deficiency at $18,310.81 instead of the $886,729 originally demanded. The corporation claimed that the Bureau had failed to allow for obsolescence and unsalable items.

Universal Officers Increase Holdings in the Company

Heavy additions to their holdings of Universal Corporation securities in March were reported for three officers of the company this week in the semi-monthly summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The SEC disclosed the acquisition of 9,500 common voting trust certificates by Nathan J. Blumberg, New York, giving him a total of 13,500; 500 by Peyton Gibson, New York, bringing his total to 1300 direct and 26,500 through Standard Capital Company, and 3,500 by Charles D. Prutzman, New York, giving him a total of 4,400, together with 3,000 voting trust certificate warrants received from the corporation without charge.

Additions of Universal holdings by Blumberg, Prutzman and Gibson derive from the acquisition during March of 70,400 shares from R. H. Cochrane, former Universal president, by a syndicate of eight Universal officials.

Other transactions reported included the acquisition by Loew's, Inc., of 25 shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock, giving it a total of 100,339 shares; acquisition of 300 shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock by Charles C. Moskowitz, New York, director, making his interest 900 shares; and acquisition of 11 shares of Pathe Film common by Robert M. McKinney, Jersey City, N. J., director, representing his entire interest.

Selznick Company Owns 16% of Technicolor

Selznick-International has exercised a final option on 35,000 shares of Technicolor, Inc. stock which brings the company's holdings up to 16 per cent and completes the option rights made available to certain producer customers some time ago.

Pathe Film Corp. Net Is $29,632

Pathe Film Corporation has reported a net profit of $29,632 for the quarter ending March 31st. The profit before provision for federal income taxes was $30,492.89. The dividend received from the DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation of which Pathe owns 35 per cent of the common stock was $35,000 for the quarter. Pathe expenses were $4,507.11. The DuPont profit was $452,939 against $395,751 for the same period in 1939.

$105,135 Profit Reported By American Seating Co.

A net profit for the quarter ending March 31st of $105,135 has been reported by the American Seating Company. This is equal to 47 cents per share on 221,062 shares of common stock. In the same quarter last year the company had a net loss of $33,688.

Roxy Theatre, Inc., Preferred Dividend

The board of directors of Roxy Theatre, Inc., at its meeting Friday, May 3rd, declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents per share on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation, payable June 1, 1940, to stockholders of record at the close of business on May 18, 1940.

ONE PROMOTION EACH YEAR IS THE AVERAGE

The appointment of Charles Kurtzman, manager of Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh, circuit district manager in Boston, recalls that in the last 10 years an average of one theatre or film man in Pittsburgh has been promoted every year.

The list includes Louis K. Sidney, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer; Reeves Espy, vice-president of Goldwyn Productions; M. J. Cullen, Loew's midwest district manager; Charles Raymond, Loew's district manager; John Maloney, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district manager; Bert Stearn, United Artists district manager; Harry Goldstein, Paramount district manager; Ben Kalmenson and Roy Haines, Warner Brothers division managers, and Joseph Skirball, who left an exchange post to become Frank Lloyd's business manager and who now is in exhibition with his brother, William.

20th-Fox Wins Copyright Action

A copyright decision of great importance was won by Twentieth Century-Fox, April 29th, when Justice Jennings Bailey in federal court in Washington directed Clement Bouve, register of copyright, to accept application for collected installments of "In Old Chicago." The decision, requiring the Copyright Office to extend protection to serialized versions of film scenarios prepared for newspaper publication, represents potential savings of large sums to motion picture companies.

The suit was filed in 1938 after the Register had refused registration of the story in book form from serial installments in newspapers. The case was heard three weeks ago with the Department of Justice representing the Register and Fulton Brylawski representing the Twentieth Century-Fox company.

Mr. Brylawski said the decision was important in that it was the first time a mandamus had ever been sought against the Register of Copyrights, who had refused the copyright on the grounds that he had discretion to do so. Mr. Brylawski argued that the Register had no discretion in the matter, being bound by law to issue registration to all applicants and leaving it to the courts to decide conflicts between authors and so on.

Edwin P. Kilroe, Twentieth Century-Fox, authority on copyright, took the view that the Register of Copyrights is in reality a glorified file clerk and has no judicial powers under Section 10 of the Copyright Act. Judge Bailey upheld this contention.

Theatres Decide Not to Exploit Fair This Year

The New York World's Fair, opening its second year on Saturday, is expected to offer greater competition to theatres in the metropolitan area than was the case last year due to an increase in popular amusements, lower prices and giveaways at the Fair.

Broadway theatres which purchased the Fair's banners last year for display on marquees and in lobbies have decided not to exploit the Fair this year. Special stage shows on the Fair theme, which were presented by the Radio City Music Hall and the Roxy last year will not be repeated. Exhibitors are also considering the elimination of newsreel scenes on Fair subjects.

Many Sponsored Films

Sponsored motion pictures, 16 and 35 mm, black-white and color, on myriad subjects, will be featured again, of the various exhibits at the New York World's Fair, the second year of which begins on Saturday.

Most of the films will be screened free in special projection rooms seating 100 to 150.

The longest of the free films will be "Land of Liberty," a two-hour sound film adapted from 125 different features and shorts, by the motion picture industry, as a contribution to the Fair. It will be shown in a 350-seat room in the Federal Building.

In the same place, the Federal Works Agency is to screen three federal productions, "The Plow That Broke the Plains," "The River" and "The Fight for Life." Another documentary film, "The City," will be exhibited at the Science and Education building.

In the French, British, Czechoslovakian and Finnish exhibits there will be films depicting items in the current war. Three-dimensional polaroid films will be screened at the Chrysler Motors Building; and, in the amusement section, the concession, "Gay New Orleans," will feature showings of old films, every night.

Forty-two exhibitors will present films regularly.

Shore-to-Ship Telecast

A part of the opening day ceremonies will be telecast to the United States liner President Roosevelt from 3:30 to 5 p.m., soon after the ship leaves for Bermuda from its New York dock. The National Broadcasting Company and the Radio Corporation of America will transmit the program which will be the first shore-to-ship telecast ever attempted.

The rule that only Fair exhibitors could broadcast commerical programs from the Fair grounds has been abolished and special facilities, including an outdoor bandstand and an indoor auditorium, will be made available to any radio sponsor who wishes to broadcast.

Stupendous and Colossal Describe Irene Dunne Visit

Huge Crowds Storm Rialto

(Pictures on Picture Page.)
By MARION PORTER.

Now we know why stupendous and colossal are Hollywood's favorite words.

They are necessary to describe such showings as the world premiere of "My Favorite Wife" at the Rialto Theater Thursday night with Irene Dunne, Louisville-born star of the RKO-Radio picture, appearing in person.

Boyd Martin's review of the film is on page 6, section 2.

Stupendous, colossal and terrifying were the crowds that surged in front of the theater in hopes of a glimpse of the famous actress. Thousands were unable to get seats inside.

Group Arrives By Plane.

Miss Dunne, together with Randolph Scott, also in the production, the director, and other movie moguls arrived by plane earlier in the day at Bowman Field.

The big events of the Kentucky visit for Miss Dunne are her appearance at the Stephen Collins Foster stamp issue celebration at Bardstown at 10:30 a.m. Friday and the Kentucky Derby Saturday, when she will sing "My Old Kentucky Home."

Upon the advice of other members of her party who told her it would be "dangerous" to enter The Rialto through the crowded front entrance, Miss Dunne reluctantly consented to abandon the traditional premiere "entrance" with lights and a word of greeting for the populace, and agreed to slip in the rear door.

Star Wears Light Blue.

Dressed in a light blue long-sleeved dinner dress and matching turban and wearing a shoulder bouquet of orchids, Miss Dunne, seated backstage with Mr. Scott, smiled at the dialogue of their picture which came from the sound box behind the screen.

Meanwhile photographers scurried about taking pictures of the stars and the director, Leo McCarey; Boyd Martin, The Courier-Journal dramatic critic, who was master of ceremonies, membled over his lines of introductions for [illegible] visitors; the crew of WAVE, D. Scholtz and Mrs. Scholtz were introduced all around and the stage hands patiently assembled a drawing room set while walking around numerous ladies in evening dress, furs and flowers and gentlemen in dinner coats.

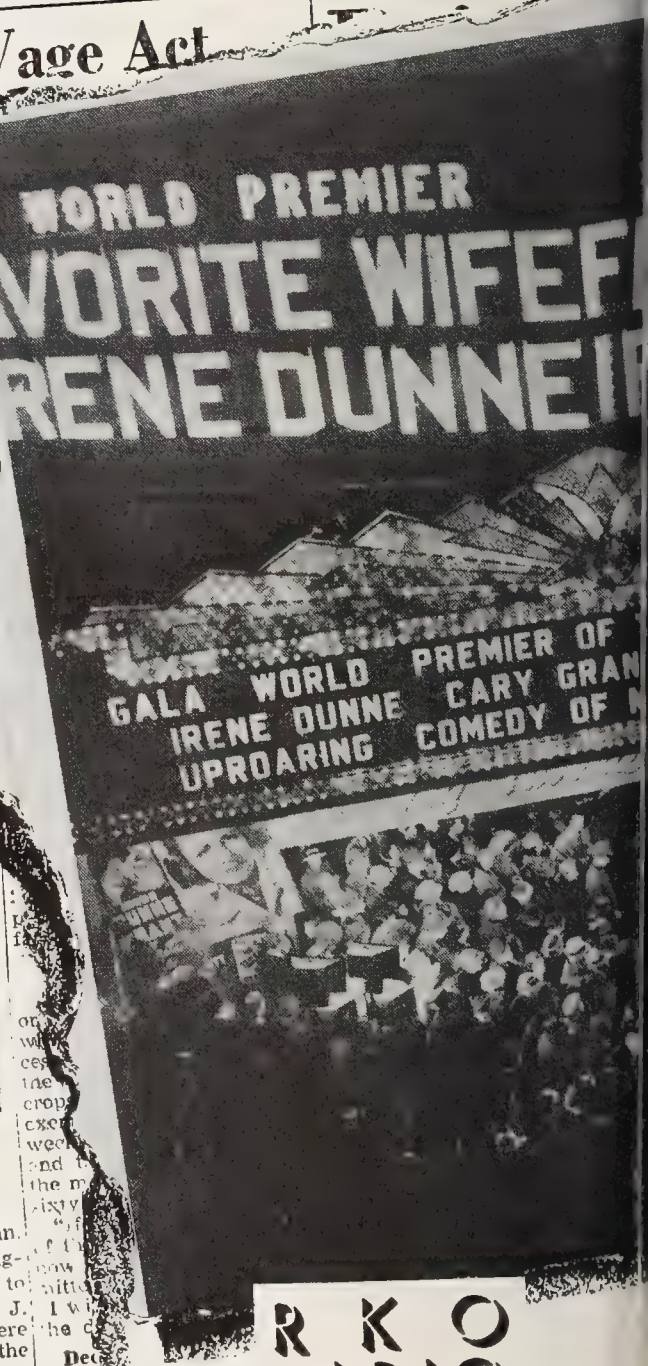
When Miss Dunne was presented to the audience the applause was deafening and elicited pleased head-noddings among the backstage contingent. She spoke briefly in her pleasant voice and consented to sing a song—"Wishing Will Make It So."

Ticket "Scalper" Nabbed.

Mr. Martin was introduced by Burt Blackwell of WAVE. The dramatic critic presented in succession Bella and Sam Spewack, authors of the production; Walter Connolly, who played in a stock company here and who recently appeared in "The Great Victor Herbert;" Mr. McCarey, David Butler, director of "Kentucky;" Mrs. Connolly, Mr. Scott, the Mayor and Miss Dunne. Mr. Mar[illegible] thanked the Fourth Avenue Pictures and Johnson Musselman, manager of The Rialto, for bringing Miss Dunne and her party to Louisville. Mr. Martin, Fred J. Dolle and Dennis H. Long were hosts at a dinner party for the star preceding the premiere.

Evidence that Irene Dunne's Louisville homecoming reached the ultimate in public success was offered by the Police Department Friday night when they charged a Detroit youth, here for the Derby, with scalping tickets in connection with the premiere of Miss Dunne's picture.

The youth is Fred Karam, 20, who was charged also with disorderly conduct and vagrancy. He said he purchased eight tickets for the premiere at 45 cents each, but admitted he had to sell them, good only for standing room, at that price. He had sold six when arrested.



A real, true tear that was not a movie product came to the eye of Irene when she heard and saw the extent of the ovation that

RKO, MGM, FOX OPEN FILMS WITH PARADES

Irene Dunne Shares Interest with Derby; "Edison" in Four Theatres, "Lillian Russell" at Three

World premieres of the large companies' new pictures this week brought forth a new crop of local celebrations, parades and arc light openings.

RKO's "My Favorite Wife" started last Thursday, May 2nd, at the Rialto theatre, Louisville, in conjunction with the blare leading up to the running of the Derby last Saturday

MGM's "Edison, the Man," opens next Thursday in four of the five towns in the New Jersey "Oranges," climaxing a three-day celebration.

Twentieth Century-Fox is to have a double premiere of "Lillian Russell," at Pittsburgh, Pa., and Clinton, Ia., next Wednesday and Thursday.

by E. H. MORRIS
in Louisville, Ky.

Competing with the Kentucky Derby, the Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels, the Stephen Collins Foster celebration at Bardstown, Ky., and many other Hollywood celebrities in Louisville for the annual sports classic, Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott, Walter Connolly and others took some of the spotlight at the Rialto theatre Thursday, May 2nd, at the world premiere of Miss Dunne's newest picture, "My Favorite Wife."

Miss Dunne and her party, which included her husband, Dr. Francis Griffin; Sam and Bella Spewack, screen writers; Leo McCarey, producer, and Garson Kanin, director; Mrs. Walter Connolly; Gene Fowler, scenarist; Hal Roach, David Butler, Miss Margaret Ettinger and Perry Lieber, RKO publicity chief, arrived at noon at Bowman Field airport.

Gov. Keen Johnson, Mrs. Sam Connors, Democratic National Committeewoman from Kentucky; Sam H. McMeekin, director of safety; a delegation of fifty Louisville club women, the entire student body of Loretto Academy, of which Miss Dunne is a graduate; six bands and a police escort greeted the party.

Next day Miss Dunne joined other Hollywood luminaries and Postmaster James J. Farley at "My Old Kentucky Home" in Bardstown, where a one-cent postage stamp honoring Stephen Collins Foster was issued at special ceremonies.

At the invitation of Governor Johnson, Miss Dunne sang "My Old Kentucky Home," and "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair," and other Foster melodies during a coast-to-coast broadcast of the celebration over a nationwide Mutual network.

Returning to Louisville, Miss Dunne Friday night was guest at the annual banquet of the Honorable Order of Kentucky Colonels, held at The Kentucky Hotel. Among those who attended were these members of the Governor's Staff: Bing Crosby, the Postmaster General, William A. Quigley, Joseph Schenck, Howard Chandler Christy, Bryan Field and George E. Allen; from the General Staff of 1940: Jack S. Connolly, J. J. Pelley, C. C. Pettijohn, Sidney R. Baer and Jack Alicoate, all ranking as Generals; and Don Ameche, Clark Gable, Clem McCarthy, George L. Schein, Harry Switow, Credo Fitch Harris, Bill Corum, Bernard Dickmann, Samuel Fuson, Dick Andrade, Charles F. Gannon, Joseph Hartfield and Howard Hawks, all ranking as Colonels.

GOLDWYN DATES "WESTERNER"

Samuel Goldwyn's new "The Westerner" will have its world premiere at Fort Worth, Texas, on June 25th, simultaneously at the Hollywood and Worth theatres. There will be a three-day celebration sponsored by local authorities. Principal features will be a charity ball to be held June 24th and community parades. Visitors to Fort Worth from Hollywood will include Samuel Goldwyn and the cast of "The Westerner," headed by Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan and Doris Davenport. Following the Fort Worth premiere, "The Westerner" will open in theatres throughout Texas on June 26th.

"Edison, the Man" in Four Theatres May 16th

MGM's "Edison, the Man," starring Spencer Tracy, will be shown for the first time, and for one night only, at 9 P.M., next Thursday, at the Hollywood theatre, East Orange; the Palace, in Orange; the Windsor, in West Orange; and the Cameo, South Orange; all theatres in New Jersey.

The openings will be preceded by an Edison "Pageant of Progress" in these four towns and Maplewood, nearby, from May 14th to 16th, next Tuesday to Thursday.

Next Wednesday, in the evening, an "Edison Premiere Ball" will be held at the Orange Armory, the proceeds going to local charities. Local dignitaries, friends of the late Mr. Edison, and motion picture stars are expected.

The following afternoon there will be an "Edison Pageant of Progress" through the streets of the four Oranges.

Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey on Friday, May 3rd, proclaimed May 16th "Edison Day."

Twin Premieres for "Lillian Russell"

In the recreated atmosphere of the nineties Twentieth Century-Fox will open Darryl Zanuck's musical production of "Lillian Russell," next Wesdnesday, at dual world premieres in Pittsburgh, and Clinton, Iowa, and at a press preview in Hollywood.

Critics from 40 key cities will be guests at the three showings. The celebration in Pittsburgh will be a two-day affair and in Clinton it will last three days. Mayor Scully of Pittsburgh will welcome Alice Faye and Edward Arnold, stars of the picture, and Governor Wilson of Iowa and Mayor Pape of Clinton will head the reception committee for Don Ameche, Binnie Barnes, Cesar Romero, Mary Healy and the newspapermen who will attend the middle western showing.

Eastman Opens New York Exhibit

The Eastman collection of historic photographic apparatus and mementos, called one of the most comprehensive ever assembled, was opened to the New York public on Tuesday morning, at the New York Museum of Science and Industry, the RCA Building, Rockefeller Center, after a preview on Monday evening, to an invited audience of approximately 300 persons, among them the city's most noted photographers.

In the collection are apparatus belonging to the private Cromer collection, of Paris, acquired by Eastman about a year ago, and containing devices used and pictures made by Daguerre, Niepce, Fox-Talbot, and other "fathers of photography"; and the Eastman company's own collection, comprising apparatus of the past 60 years, used by photographers such as Brady, Cameron, Eastman, Edison, and others.

The preview on Monday evening was opened in the museum's auditorium by Robert Shaw, director of the museum; Dr. Frank Jewett, its president; and Dr. Walter Clark, assistant to Kenneth Mees, director of Kodak Research Laboratories.

History of Art Given

Dr. Shaw introduced Dr. Jewett. The latter, noting that the museum had attempted to make a feature of temporary exhibits, expressed pleasure at the cooperation of Eastman, and for its present exhibition. He then introduced Dr. Clark.

The Eastman executive illustrating his talk with colored slides, traced photography's development from the experiments of Daguerre, Fox-Talbot, Niepce and others, to the modern camera.

Photography, he noted, "got off to a false start," in actuality, with Daguerre. Photography of the present, he indicated may be said to have begun with Fox-Talbot and his prints on paper; and with the development of flexible, transparent roll-film, by George Eastman.

Edison Film Included

Noting that the collection displayed a copy of the first successful film, made by Thomas Alva Edison for his Kinetoscope, Mr. Clark pointed out that the motion picture industry would not have been possible without the Eastman development.

Dr. Clark credited the late Mr. Eastman with the invention of the roll film holder, for waxed paper film, in 1883-84; the strip film, on a paper base, in 1885; the first Kodak, with strip film sufficient for 100 pictures, in 1888; and the first flexible transparent roll film, in 1889.

Though displaying historic devices, pictures, and personal mementos, mostly, the exhibition also includes modern large and miniature cameras of Eastman and other companies; in some show cases, these are placed with the older models for comparison.

There is also a section on color photography.

In the motion picture section are copies of Edison's first film; and Lumiere's camera.

Among the curios are "detective cameras," these being miniature "candid" cameras, some in necktie stickpins, others in briefcases; some in opera glasses, others in watchcases.

FIVE DISTRIBUTORS HOLDING 1940 PRODUCT CONVENTIONS THIS WEEK

Universal Stands On Flexible Program and Budget; Hal Roach Sets $6,000,000 for Six Films; New Korda Co.

Pre-seasonal sales conventions are going full blast, five of them running this week: Universal in Atlantic City, United Artists in New York, one Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer regional in San Francisco and another in Chicago, and Monogram's second regional in San Francisco.

Warner Brothers on Tuesday announced two regional conventions: June 10-12, in Pittsburgh, June 17-19, in Chicago.

Columbia Pictures is the latest of the 10 companies to be heard from, the company still being undecided as to date and place, or whether to hold regionals or a national.

Twentieth Century-Fox met April 12-14 in Chicago. Republic will hold regionals in June, probably in New York, Chicago and Denver or San Francisco. RKO meets May 27-31 in New York, and Paramount May 24-26, in Los Angeles.

New season product highlights of the week included Universal's pre-convention announcement of "absolute flexibility" in the quantity and budgeting of product; the formation of a new Alexander Korda company for United Artists production; the budgeting of $6,000,000 by UA producer Hal Roach for six pictures, and the formation of an RKO producing unit by William B. Hawks, to star Ronald Colman in 10 United Producers Corporation features over three years.

Universal Convention Opens Saturday

"Flexibility" will again be the keynote of Universal's message to its salesmen and to exhibitor customers when the annual three-day convention opens in Atlantic City Saturday, according to William A. Scully, general sales manager. "Every opportunity that Universal will get to deliver more features than it will announce at the convention Saturday will be taken," he said.

Mr. Scully also said in a pre-convention statement that no set budget was planned. He added: "While Universal joins with the other companies in the belief that exhibitors must help in the fight to retain and improve the level of production values which must now look almost exclusively to the domestic field for profitable distribution, the company nevertheless holds to the conviction that such cooperation on the part of exhibitors should not be forced upon the basis of production costs alone. The resulting product must be box-office."

More than 125 home office executives and salesmen from the eastern territory will attend. In addition to President N. J. Blumberg, Cliff Work, head of the studio, will participate in the sessions.

Although a separate convention will be held for his exchanges a week later in Chicago, W. J. Heineman, western sales manager, also will attend. In turn, F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales head, will take in the Chicago meeting. Mr. Scully will preside at both regionals.

The complete list of those who will attend in addition at Atlantic City, includes the following: From the home office: Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs; Leo Abrams, short subjects sales manager; Morris Alin, O. Binder, J. Jordan, John E. Joseph, Charles Kirby, Hank Linet, C. Margon, James Miller, F. T. Murray, Louis Pollock, Adolph Schimel, Andy Sharick and Herman Stern.

District managers attending will be Harry Graham, A. J. Herman and Dave Miller.

Exchange managers, salesmen and bookers to attend are as follows:

From Albany: Manager Jerrie Spandau and I. Shiffman and C. Weill.
Atlanta: Manager John Ezell and L. Brauer, E. Cox, R. Gann, C. Jordan and T. Miller, Jr.
Boston: Manager W. P. Kelly and J. Callahan, F. P. Dervin, H. J. Martin, J. H. Murphy, W. Murphy, E. Warren and J. R. Wilson.
Buffalo: Manager J. J. Scully and W. F. Bork, J. Fater, C. Heerdt and L. J. Leiser.
Charlotte: Manager Paul Baron and J. W. Bishop, R. Good, J. W. Greenleaf and R. Masterman.
Cincinnati: Manager Peter Rosian and G. B. Gomersall, Nate Le Vene, Jr., J. Marks, F. Schreiber and H. W. Young.
Cleveland: Manager J. R. Kauffman and J. Frew, J. Krenitz, G. Rosenbaum and A. W. Young.
Dallas: Manager E. S. Olsmith and E. Green, J. M. Lutzer, L. D. Lutzer, C. M. Miller, J. E. Mitchell and W. Pittinger.
Memphis: Manager J. A. Prichard and L. H. Andrews, B. Jordan, H. Mansfield.
New Haven: Manager M. Joseph and J. Pavone.
New Orleans: Manager W. M. Richardson and N. Lamantia, C. McMillan and E. O'Neill.
New York: Manager D. A. Levy and W. Benson, M. Cohen, H. Furst, N. Goldberg, J. Liggett, B. Price, L. Simon and P. Winnick.
Oklahoma City: Manager James Hobbs and M. Holstein, H. H. Martin and White Cliff, Jr.
Philadelphia: Manager G. F. Schwartz and W. J. Doyle, Jack Engel, F. Fortunate, M. Kopplemen, J. Leon and S. Perlsweig.
Pittsburgh: Manager J. Lapidus and D. Barnholtz, S. Feld, F. Guehl, L. Hess and W. Satori.
Washington: Manager B. Kreisler and O. Blumenthail, W. E. Davis, B. Frank, S. Tabor and L. J. Young.
Canada: Clair Hague, Paul Nathanson and M. Perry.
Also Joe Engle, special representative.

Immediately following the main meeting, there will be a series of district and branch meetings.

Universal will make a feature based on "The Leather Pushers," its former short subject series. Andy Devine and Richard Arlen will be featured and Larry Rhine and Ben Chapman will write the story. The company also plans a remake of "Love Insurance," as a musical with a score by Jerome Kerns and lyrics by Dorothy Fields. Allan Jones will head the cast.

JAPAN'S GOVERNMENT INDORSES U. S. FILM

An American motion picture has been given an indorsement by the Japanese Government Board of Education. The film is Warner Brothers' "The Adventures of Robin Hood" and the indorsement in part follows:

"Although this ["Robin Hood"] is a so-called amusement picture, the superb directing and excellent color technique give this picutre an artistic dignity and successfully captures an atmosphere of a fairy tale which is so difficult to achieve and which has never been secured in Japanese pictures.

"Therefore, realizing that this picture will exert a tremendous influence on our Japanese motion picture industry, we recommend this picture for general patronage."

UA Eastern Meeting Monday in New York

The eastern sales meeting of United Artists opens Monday and will run through Wednesday at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York City. Representatives from 20 cities in the eastern part of the United States and Canada will attend the session. Harry Gold will preside.

U.A. pre-convention business this week included some personnel adjustments and some observations by a U.A.-partner on the state of the motion picture business—both matters being reported on page 17.

On next Friday the western session opens at the Congress Hotel in Chicago, running through Monday. L. J. Schlaifer will preside.

Among the United Artists executives who will attend are: Murray Silverstone, chief of world-wide operations; Mr. Schlaifer; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president in charge of corporate affairs; Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution; Paul N. Lazarus, contract manager; Charles Stern, eastern district manager; Bert M. Stearn, middle-western district manager; David Prince, southern district manager; Haskell M. Masters, Canadian district manager, and Moe Streimer.

Also Lynn Farnol, Monroe W. Greenthal, Albert Margolies, Sam Cohen, Arthur Silverstone, H. J. Muller, Charles M. Steele, N. A. Thompson, Walter Gould, T. P. Mulrooney, Len Daly, Phil Dow, Seymour Poe, S. W. McGrath, Jack Wrege, George Roth, Abe Dickstein, Robert Hilton, Earl J. Denison, Robert Goldfarb and R. G. Sidley.

Among the producers' representatives who will be present at the convention are: James A. Mulvey, vice-president and eastern representative for Samuel Goldwyn; Emanuel Silverstone, Alexander Korda representative; Lowell V. Calvert, eastern representative for David O. Selznick; Harry Kosiner, eastern representative for Walter Wanger; J. J. Milstein, eastern representative for Edward Small; Thomas Walker, vice-president and eastern representative for Hal Roach.

United Artists men in the field who will attend the New York convention are as follows (the first name with each city is that of the branch manager):

Boston: John Dervin, George Hager, Joseph Cronan, Herb Schaefer and Nate Ross.
Buffalo: Syd Lehman, Mat Sullivan and Joe Kaliski.
Charlotte: Jay Schrader, R. M. Boovy and H. D. Hearn.
Cincinnati: H. Dudelson, J. Hendel, I. Sochin and J. Finberg.
Cleveland: Mat Goodman, Lou Geiger, Nat Levine and Dick Miller.
Dallas: Hugh Owen, T. L. Barber, B. C. Gibson, A. J. DelCambre and T. E. Laird.
Indianapolis: Dick Frank, E. V. Donnelly, M. M. Krueger and E. R. Golden.
New Haven: Lou C. Wechsler and Lew Ginsburg.
New Orleans: C. E. Peppiatt, E. P. Murphy and Milton Dureau.
New York: Clarence Eiseman, Nat Beier, Dave Burkan, Sam Rifkin, Sam Stern, Lawrence Brown, Harold Sugarman, Arthur Weinberger, Ed Mullen, Herb Richek, Ben Levine and Tony Agoglia.
Philadelphia: Harry Bodkin, Morton Magill, Saul Krugman and Horace Wright.
Pittsburgh: Abe Weiner, Harry Rees, William Scott and James Nash.
Washington: Fred Rohrs, Mark Silver, Fred Sandy and Dick Harrity.
Toronto: Sam Glazer, Dave Axler and Pete Myers.
Calgary: A. Feinstein.
Montreal: A. J. Jeffery.
St. John: Charles Chaplin.
Vancouver: Sam Negler.
Winnipeg: Dave Griesdorf and Victor Rackow.

WARNERS' TWO REGIONALS IN JUNE

Roosevelt, Hal Roach and Sol Lesser also are expected to attend the New York convention.

Alexander Korda, already a United Artists producer, has formed a new company, to be known as Alexander Korda Films. The company plans two high-budgeted films to be made in Hollywood this year. Mr. Korda will also make two films at the studio in Denham, England.

The Korda Films organization includes Zoltan Korda, director; Emanuel Silverstone, business representative; Morris Helprin, assistant in production; Basil Bleck, legal counsel; Jack Okey, production manager, and William Hornbeck, film editor.

Offices will be at the United Artists studio and the first operation will be to complete "The Thief of Bagdad," a color film which was begun in England.

The Hal Roach budget for the new season will be $6,000,000 for six pictures to be released through United Artists. The Bankers Trust Company of New York and the Security First National Bank of Los Angeles are underwriting a large share of the budget.

Hugh Huber, vice-president in charge of production, said that $500,000 of the budget would be used for advertising. Of this sum $400,000 will be used for "exhibitor-cooperative campaigns" in newspapers.

The first of the new productions will be "Road Show," from the novel by Eric Hatch. Others are "Broadway Limited," starring Victor McLaglen and Victor Mature; "Niagara Falls"; "Topper Returns"; "The Unholy Horde," starring Lon Chaney, Jr. Richard Wallace directing from the screen play by Grover Jones; and "Fiesta," a Wallace-Jones production.

Mr. Roach is in New York and plans to be East about a week. He attended the preview of "Turnabout," his latest production, in New Rochelle on Tuesday night.

Warners Sets Two Regionals, in June

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager, has announced that two regional meetings will be held, one in Pittsburgh from June 10th to 12th at the William Penn Hotel, and the other in Chicago from June 17th to 19th at the Blackstone.

The Pittsburgh meeting will be attended by district, branch and zone managers from the Eastern and Canadian territories, while the Chicago conclave will be for the West and South.

Plans for a convention in Washington have been abandoned, it was announced, for reasons of practicality and economy.

Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian sales manager, will be in charge of the regional meeting at Pittsburgh. Ben Kalmenson, western and southern sales manager, will preside at Chicago. Mr. Sears and other top executives of Warners and its affiliated companies will address both meetings.

MGM Holds First and Second Regionals

On Monday and Tuesday at the St. Francis hotel in San Francisco, the first of MGM's regional sales meetings was held. Official announcement to the trade of the company's 1940-41 lineup was not made in San Francisco.

Executives attending included William F. Rodgers, general sales manager; Edward M. Saunders, western sales manager; Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity; Edwin Aaron, assistant to Mr. Rodgers, and Joel Bezahler.

The sales staffs of five MGM western exchanges, headed by George A. Hickey of Los Angeles, attended the San Francisco sessions. Others present and their cities were:

Los Angeles: Clayton T. Lynch, manager; William A. Calihan, salesman; Sam S. Davis, salesman; Reuben L. Harris, salesman.

Portland: Louis Amacher, manager; Joseph T. Warren, salesman.

Salt Lake City: Samuel Gardner, manager; Clarence W. Boulet, salesman; Carl E. Lind, salesman; David T. McElhinney, salesman.

San Francisco: Langdon C. Wingham, manager; Leland S. Hulling, salesman; Edward C. Mix, salesman; Sidney Schuster, salesman; N. Edward Beck, exploitation man.

Seattle: Maurice D. Saffle, manager; Mac Rubenfeld, salesman; B. Wallace Rucker, salesman.

Other conferences were scheduled for May 13th-14th, at the Drake hotel, Chicago; May 17th-18th, Astor hotel, New York City, and May 20th-21st, Hotel Shoreham, Washington, D. C.

E. J. Mannix and Irving Asher, studio executives, are to leave for England on the Clipper as soon as accommodations are available. The trip is being made to consider expansion of production activity abroad.

RKO Officials West to Prepare for Convention

George J. Schaefer, president; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, and S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity for RKO Radio, are in Hollywood conferring with Joe Nolan, in charge of the studio, and Harry Edington, executive producer, and other executives on the production schedule for 1940-41. Details of the program will be presented at the annual convention, May 27th to 30th in New York.

A. A. Schubart, chairman of the convention committee on travel, said that about 250 were expected at the meeting. The reception committee includes Bob Wolff, Frank Drumm, Phil Hodes, Jack Ellis, Lou Kutinsky, Harry Zeitels, Ed Carroll and John Dacey.

Jack Votion and Sam Coslow of Voco Productions have signed Lum and Abner, radio team, for three films a year for the next three years, after viewing rushes of "Dreaming Out Loud." RKO will release the pictures.

William Sistrom is going back to England within a month to produce RKO quota pictures, despite the war conditions. In January he made a survey in London. He said there were plenty of studio facilities available. Decision on the number of pictures which RKO will make in England, their casts and directors will be made by Mr. Schaefer in Hollywood this week.

Ronald Colman has been signed to star in five of the first 10 pictures to be made by United Producers Corporation, headed by William B. Hawks, and to be released by RKO. Mr. Hawks, a former agent, is a brother of Howard Hawks. It is reported that Ronald Colman has concluded a profit-sharing arrangement. The 10 pictures are to be made over a three-year period. Mr. Colman is now working at RKO in "Lucky Partners," co-starring with Ginger Rogers.

RKO signed Leon Errol to a contract calling for his appearance in six features and six two-reel comedies.

In the next to the last week of the 15-week Ned Depinet Drive the Buffalo exchange, Charles Boasberg, is first. A. N. Schmitz's Milwaukee staff has pulled into the second position and New Haven, Barney Pitkin, manager, is in third place.

The eastern division still is leading the western division, and the northeastern district, headed by Herb MacIntyre, captain of the drive, is leading the districts.

HOLLYWOOD BECKONS SENATE PAGE BOYS

Columbia, having decided to make a picture about Senate page boys, has arranged for all 21 of the Senate pages to go to Hollywood to take parts in the film, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington this week. The boys will leave Washington four or five days after the present session of Congress adjourns, go in special railroad cars to California, return to Washington after two or three weeks in the film capital.

Monogram Holds Second Regional on Coast

Monogram held a western regional meeting Saturday and Sunday, May 4th and 5th, at the Empire hotel in San Francisco. The first meeting was in Dallas on April 21st-22nd when the new season's schedule of 50 pictures, 26 features and 24 westerns was announced.

The San Francisco meeting was attended by W. Ray Johnston, president; Scott R. Dunlap, production head; Edward Golden, sales manager; Howard Stubbins, president of Monogram Pictures of California; Marty Soloman, Los Angeles exchange manager; M. J. McCarthy, Dud Forrey, Al Goldstein, William Duggan, Al Harris, Walter Wessing, Mel Hulling, Gorden Allen and Clint Metchen.

In the fourth standing of teams in Monogram's "Spirit of Independence" Drive, the American league leads the National by a margin of 2.21 per cent, according to Mr. Golden. The American league is led by the Tigers, and lists Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Los Angeles. First place in the National league is held by the Seals. The cities are Salt Lake City, Indianapolis, Omaha and Kansas City.

Producers Releasing Corp. Plans Thirty-eight

The Producers Releasing Corporation, headed by Harry Rathner, announced that the production schedule of Sigmund Neufeld Productions, whose films he releases, had been increased from 15 to 36 films for next season. Eighteen of the productions will be westerns, six starring Tim McCoy and six Bob Steele, and the other westerns featuring an as yet unannounced radio-singer. The first picture on the new schedule is "I Take This Oath," the second "Frontier Crusader."

Officers of the organization, in addition to Mr. Rathner, are Harry Asher, Boston, first vice-president; George Gill, Washington, second vice-president; Louis Rutstein, Los Angeles, third vice-president, and Bert Kulick, New York, secretary treasurer.

Atlas Executive Salaries Reported

In 1939, a salary of $200,662 was paid by Atlas to Floyd B. Odlum, president and diector of the corporation, which owns a large block of stock in the new RKO, the Atlas Corporation's annual report to the Securities Exchange Commission revealed, on Wednesday, in New York.

The report also stated that L. Boyd Hatch, executive vice-president and director of the Atlas Corporation, received a salary of $56,231 in the same period.

RCA SHOWS WIDE-SCREEN TELEVISION FOR THEATRES TO ITS STOCKHOLDERS

American Long Distance Telecast Record Is Set When New York Program Is Received in Chicago

Large screen television (4½ by 6 feet), designed especially for use in theatres and developed by the Radio Corporation of America, was given its first official showing at the annual stockholders' meeting on Tuesday in NBC telecast studio, 3-A, Rockefeller Center, New York. The only other group demonstration known was the private showing at Camden, N. J., for the members of the Federal Communications Commission which was reported in the February 10th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

The state of RCA financially, was also made known Tuesday. See page 31.

Long Distance Record Set

The American long distance television record was set last week when a program originating in New York City was received in Chicago. Television usually is limited to about 90 miles from the Empire State sending station. Long-distance reception is a phenomenon not completely understood and occurs only at rare intervals.

Last June the British Baird large screen television system was demonstrated, using a 9 x 12 foot screen. The apparatus was said to be capable of projecting a picture 15 x 20 feet. The Baird system was to be adapted to American standards but so far no showings have been given since the summer. At that time the reaction of theatre interests was not enthusiastic. Another British television company, Scophony, had "large screen" television equipment in use in England before the war. Other American companies are reported to be working on television projection devices so that the new medium can be brought to theatre audiences. However, RCA is the first company to announce an American "large screen" television projection equipment.

Called Intermediate Stage

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, in presenting the large screen television to the stockholders said the present equipment was the intermediate stage between the home receiver and a theatre projector giving a picture 9 x 12 feet. Mr. Sarnoff said the larger machine is being refined in the laboratory and will be ready for public demonstration within the next three months.

The equipment used Tuesday was described as a laboratory model and the company has no immediate plans for marketing the device. It was reported that from 12 to 18 months would be necessary for its commercial development.

On Ordinary Beaded Screen

The images were projected on an ordinary beaded motion picture screen. RCA believes that even though the present device was built as an intermediate step in the development of units for the projection of much larger pictures that the 4½ x 6 images have "interesting possibilities for use in clubs, schools, and other similar places where the viewing group numbers from 100 to 150 persons."

A varied program including news telecasts by Lowell Thomas, musical numbers and the second installment of the first television "serial."

The apparatus consists of three parts. One contains the newly developed kinescope projection tube and the optical system. Another contains the high voltage power supply, and the third houses the electrical circuits, amplifiers and controls. All three are assembled on a single mobile platform. The overall dimensions are: length, 6 feet; width, 2 feet, and height, 5½ feet.

The new system is based on projection optics of extremely wide aperture, a kinescope capable of high voltage operation, and apparatus suited to these conditions. Most essential elements are the new kinescope projection tube and the optical system. These provide more light and utilize it more effectively than ever before, RCA claims.

56,000 Volts Used

The new kinescope uses 56,000 volts as compared with the 6,000 or 7,000 volts used by the kinescope in the ordinary home-type television receiver. The actual size of the image on the face of the kinescope projection tube is 2.4 by 3.2 inches. The television signals are brought to the kinescope by either an antenna system, which takes them off the air, or by a direct wire line from the source of the program. In the public demonstration, the signals were taken off the air as broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company's transmitter, W2XBS, atop the Empire State Building.

The optical system of the unit has an effective numerical aperture of F:0.7, or more than four times the speed of the best available projection

RCA'S "LARGE SCREEN" TELEVISION SHOW

The Radio Corporation of America picked a favorable time and a well-disposed audience for its first public demonstration of its 4½ by 6 feet television. The stockholders had just been told that all the company's operations were showing a profit. And they knew that successful television developments would help the company, so the "large screen" television show was viewed as a sample of efforts toward future profits.

However the television demonstration seemed remarkably fine even for those who came to see it and not to attend a stockholders' meeting. The size and brightness of the images were satisfactory from an entertainment standpoint for an audience up to about 200 persons. The program used for the demonstration was of sufficient quality to indicate possibilities of television entertainment.

No attempt was made to show long shots. The light had a slight tinge and the projection was not as steady as it is in 35mm. motion picture projection.

The illusion of reality in "large screen" television appears to be even greater than in the case of motion pictures.—MQ, Jr.

Motion Picture Industry Accused by RCA of Trying to Hamstring Television by Delaying Commercial Operation

The motion picture industry, fearful of competition, is attempting to hamstring television by raising issues designed to delay commercial operation, it was charged, in effect, last week by Radio Corporation of America.

This action was the second attack by RCA against motion picture interests in general and Paramount-DuMont in particular. The first was during the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearing on the Lundeen resolution asking for an investigation of the Federal Communications Commission's television actions. At that time RCA asserted that Paramount controlled DuMont.

Stanton Griffis in Hollwood Tuesday declined to comment on the attacks.

Brief Submitted to FCC

Radio Corporation's charges were made in a brief submitted to the FCC just prior to the expiration of the time for filing briefs on the television hearings of a month ago on the question whether limited commercial operation, scheduled to begin September 1st, should be postponed.

The brief was one of three filed with the commission, the others having been submitted by the Farnsworth Radio and Television Corporation and Radio Pictures, Inc.

All three companies agreed that public participation was essential to the development of television; that the promotional activities of RCA, which led the commission to reopen the issue, had not handicapped progress; and that television technique had reached the point where satisfactory program service could be afforded.

Blast at DuMont

RCA's blast at the film industry was directed at the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, which had urged that "flexible" standards be provided so that any receiving set could be used on the transmissions of any television station.

The recent interest of the motion picture companies in television, the RCA brief asserted, "is primarily for the purpose of 'protecting' their larger interest in the movie and theatre industry and not to develop the new art of television."

"Therefore," it was declared, "they desire the adoption of systems and methods that would make television inferior . . . to motion pictures.

Cites Paramount Interest

"The interest in television on the part of DuMont Laboratories must be to serve those who furnish the working capital—Paramount Pictures, Inc. Regardless of any interest which Allen B. DuMont has personally, as a radio engineer, in the development of television, it is impossible to ignore the interest of Paramount Pictures, Inc., in the DuMont Laboratories. . . . The interest in DuMont Laboratories held by Paramount's bankers cannot be ignored in considering the actual control exercised by Paramount."

The brief denied that RCA ever has advocated the "freezing" of standards and charged that DuMont, in advocating "flexibility," really talks about 15 frames and 625 lines which, it was charged, would in itself freeze development at a low level and within narrow limits.

"There will never be a time—as long as there are research engineers working on television—when television, or any other radio service, will not be threatened with changes because of new laboratory developments," the commission was told.

SET STANDARDS, FARNSWORTH URGES

Promotional activities, rather than being harmful, benefit both the public and the industry, RCA contended, declaring that "if the industry is ever to be established, a start must be made some time, by somebody—with some kind of transmission characteristics.

"Television service has been developed to a point where public participation is essential," the company held.

"All that is needed for television to go forward as a public service is for the commission to permit transmission of television programs without restriction as to commercialization."

RCA also warned if it was compelled to move from television channel No. 1 to Channel No. 2 to make way for frequency modulation broadcasters which have asked for that space, it would be off the air for four months and if compelled to make any other change it would be off for 18 months.

Farnsworth Stand Similar

The Farnsworth brief joined RCA in opposing the assignment of Channel No. 1 to frequency-modulation operation, holding that such a shift would disrupt television progress.

Farnsworth urged the commission to establish standards "to foster and encourage increased research and development," preferably the RMA standards, and asked that unrestricted commercialization also be permitted.

"It is unanimously agreed that the public itself, the television audience, must play an important part in the development of television programs and program technique," it was pointed out. "Programs of the standard which American audiences demand can be obtained only with the assistance which commercialization can provide in the carrying of the great financial burden that is entailed."

Denying that promotion has retarded development, Radio Pictures contended that public participation will tend to "accelerate growth into an important and satisfactory" service.

The FCC, it was reported, does not believe the motion picture controversy seriously enters the television situation because RCA has an interest in films through its stock in RKO.

DuMont Officers Reelected

Allen B. DuMont was reelected president of the television laboraotries which bear his name at the board of directors meeting which followed the annuol stockholders' meeting, it was announced in New York, Tuesday. Mortimer W. Loewi was reelected vice-president; Paul Raibourn, treasurer; and Bernard Goodwin, secretary.

Class "A" directors elected were DuMont, Loewi, Henry Crowley and Philip Siff. Class B directors, representing the Paramount interest, were Mr. Raibourn, Mr. Goodwin, Arthur Israel, Jr., and A. J. Richard.

What Twentieth Century-Fox Paid

Twentieth Century-Fox in 1939 paid Sonja Henie $249,166; John Ford, director, $235,000, and Darryl F. Zanuck $255,000, according to the company's statement filed with the New York Stock Exchange Wednesday.

103 Die in Colombia Fire

One hundred and three persons were burned and trampled to death, and 200 injured in a motion picture theatre fire Tuesday night, in Sandona, Colombia.

FCC TELEVISION REPORT IS EXPECTED SOON

The Federal Communications Commission is expected to give its decision on commercialization of television by May 15th at the latest. The Commission had designated Sept. 1, 1940, for the beginning of limited commercial operations. That order was suspended and the next report will confirm that date or assign another or give reasons for an indefinite postponement.

Controversy between Senator Lundeen and the FCC over the handling of television continued this week with the Senator charging that the Commission has "delayed" settlement of the issue.

Senator Charles W. Tobey of New Hampshire this week charged that the FCC repeatedly had delayed submission of its report on radio monopoly to the House Appropriations Committee.

The U. S. supreme court agreed Monday to review decisions of the District of Columbia court of appeals which held that the FCC had erred in refusing to approve the assignment of Station KSFO, San Francisco, from the Associated Broadcasters to the Columbia Broadcasting System of California.

Telford Taylor, former special assistant to the attorney general, has been appointed general counsel of the Commission. He succeeds William J. Dempsey, who is resigning.

Goodman in New Post

Adolph Goodman has been appointed assistant manager of the RCA National Service Division. He will have charge of all Photophone service activities. Carl Johnson, Kansas City district service manager, has been shifted to the home office on equipment sales promotion and is succeeded in Kansas City by William Hardman. Also transferred to the home office were N. A. Willis, field engineer in Baltimore, and Adolf Lof of the New York staff. F. M. Armstrong now has that Baltimore post, and A. P. Wark has succeeded Mr. Lof.

AMPA Hears Commentators

The luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., at Jack Dempsey's restaurant in New York on Thursday was devoted to the National Radio Film Commentators Circle. David Lowe, president of the Film Commentators, which comprises 122 members in 34 states, presided.

Employees' Frolic Held

The first annual frolic of the National Screen Service's newly organized Employes' Club was held at the Congress hotel, in Chicago on Friday, May 3.

lenses. This means an increase in screen brightness of more than four times, RCA said.

The brightly illuminated image on the surface of the kinescope, which faces in the opposite direction to that of the finally projected picture, is thrown upon a concave mirror surface measuring 16 inches in diameter. The mirror collects the light and magnifies the image 22½ times. The image is then projected back through a glass lens surrounding the neck of the kinescope, and thence twenty feet through space to a screen mounted on a wall. The system uses television transmission standards as formulated by the Radio Manufacturers Association: 441-line definition and 30 frames per second.

The system was developed in RCA's laboratories at Harrison and Camden, N. J.

Tentative Theatre Agreement

In the brief filed by the Don Lee Broadcasting System with the FCC it was stated that a tentative agreement has been made by the company with West Coast exhibitors for television in theatres. The company statement asserted that such an agreement with theatres would permit a program expenditure of $18,000 to $20,000 a week. No indication was made concerning the type of equipment planned. The programs would also be made available to those with home receiving sets which are said to number some 400 sets in the Los Angeles area at the present time. The Don Lee company predicted that 10,000 receivers could be sold in a reasonable length of time.

New York - Chicago Telecast

O. B. Hanson, NBC vice-president and chief engineer, reported that the New York-Chicago television reception set an all-American record. When England was transmitting television RCA engineers occasionally picked up the signals on Long Island but they were never distinguishable.

Howard C. Luttgens, NBC's central division engineer, received the program in Chicago. At first the New York program was unrecognizable; then it became clear. Mr. Luttgens said that the sound portion of the program was good at all times but the images faded out. After 16 minutes the sound and images disappeared completely, even though the program was on the air in New York for another 11 minutes.

NBC engineers in New York explained the phenomenon of reception of over the thousand-mile distance as being due to a "sporadic layer" in the upper atmosphere which, in effect, acted as a mirror for the ultra short radio television waves.

Benny Feted

Paramount Pictures and other executives feted Jack Benny, radio and screen comedian, at any informal cocktail party in the Bacardi Room of the Empire State Building, in New York on May 2. Among those present were: Barney Balaban, Austin Keough, Neil Agnew, Charles Reagan, J. J. Unger, Oscar Morgan, Leon Netter, Sam Dembow, Bob Weitman, Adolph Zukor, John Hicks, George Weltner, Leonard Goldenson, George and Spyros Skouras, Harry Katz, Ned Depinet, Gradwell Sears, Clayton Bond, Charlie Moskowitz, John O'Connor, Joe Vogel and Harry Brandt.

The picture the world is waiting for because in her first screen role since she was the beautiful Scarlett O'Hara, Vivien Leigh again thrills in a film of emotional fire and Robert Taylor gives his most powerfully romantic performance.

The Mortal Storm

(MGM)

Nazi Impact

Adapted from the novel by Phyllis Bottome, "The Mortal Storm" tells a story of Germany in 1933, the year when Hitler came to power. Although never seen on the screen, it is Hitler who dominates the film, which depicts the interior of a German concentration camp and the famous "burning of the books" as sidelights of the period.

The story is that of a Jewish professor and his family, and the impact of Nazism upon them. The professor is portrayed by Frank Morgan, while love interest is provided by Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart. The cast also includes Robert Young, Judith Anderson, Bonita Granville and Maria Ouspenskaya.

Sidney Franklin produced, as he did "On Borrowed Time," and Frank Borzage directed, his last picture having been "Strange Cargo."

Release date: To be determined.

WEEK'S TRUST SCORE: FOUR TO ONE; ONE WITHDRAWN, FOUR OTHERS FILED

Oklahoma City Federal Court Calls Hearing May 16th on U. S. Request to Remove Action Against Griffith et al

In a move surprising and unexplained, the Department of Justice, on Friday, May 3rd, asked the federal court at Oklahoma City for permission to withdraw its anti-trust action in Oklahoma against the Griffith Amusement Company and the large distributors, thereby discontinuing the first of the field trust actions aimed at monopolies of unaffiliated large circuits. The field suits supplement the "key" case against the majors and their circuits in New York. These suits were filed to create a new "place in the sun" for the independent exhibitor, Thurman Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney general often having proclaimed this the basic reason for the prosecutions.

On the Government's petition for permission to withdraw, Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught, Monday, ordered all parties to appear in his Oklahoma City Court on May 16th.

On Monday the Government filed a response to an order issued by Judge Vaught April 5th granting the defendant circuit and distributors the right to a bill of particulars. The Government responded with the argument that it could not comply because "the information requested is in possession of the defendants."

Ten Suits Promised

The Government, last year, promised that it would file about ten such "field suits" against unaffiliated circuits. It actually filed three, against the Griffiths for their operations in Oklahoma and Texas; the Schines, in New York; and the Crescent Amusement Circuit, in Tennessee.

And while the majors got some relief from the Oklahoma dismissal last Friday, being defendants in all the suits, their burdens became heavier in other quarters, with the filing of more and more actions against them by independents. The following complainants were added to the two score suits already involving the "Big Eight": Mr. and Mrs. Cassil, of St. Louis, who filed action against the Dubinsky Brothers and the majors; The Battin Amusement Company, suing the majors, in Elizabeth, N. J.; and two plaintiffs against Interstate Circuit and majors, in Texas—F. Z Glass and Sam Kersheimer.

See Significance in U. S. Court Decision

While Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, moved his staff from Washington to New York, on Monday, in preparation for the Government's "key" film case, starting June 3rd, many in legal circles in New York, and political quarters in Washington, saw significance in the United States supreme court's decision, of Monday, in the Madison oil case. The Court upheld the Department of Justice, giving it what many believed to be its most important anti-trust victory in recent years.

The high court's 67-page decision, delivered by Justice William O. Douglas, upheld the Government on every point in one-two-three order. And so broad was the court's language that some in the Capital believe it virtually assures at least some successes in the Justice Department's anti-trust drive, along several fronts.

From this opinion and the other recent anti-trust decision, supreme court approval of the following Justice Department anti-trust doctrines are set down in the Capital:

1. Mere existence of power to restrain trade, acquired through combination for that purpose, makes the holder of that power a violator of the trust laws.
2. "Reasonableness" of the restraint constitutes no defense.
3. In open market price-fixing cases, it is not necessary to prove that the alleged violators controlled a "substantial" part of the market, nor that the combination by itself, and apart from other factors, controlled the prices.
4. In patent cases, the holder of the legal patent monopoly cannot use the patent to achieve controls over secondary distribution markets which, if achieved by other means, would be in violation of the anti-trust laws.
5. In price-fixing cases, it is not necessary to show that the combination sought "uniform and inflexible" prices. The prices are "fixed" in the legal sense simply because they are agreed upon, even if they fluctuate.

LABOR ASSAILS THURMAN ARNOLD

Thurman Wesley Arnold, former college professor, writer of books on economics, and chief anti-trust prosecutor for the Department of Justice, continues in the headlines of business and labor.

Spokesmen of the American Federation of Labor, at the convention of the Pennsylvania federation, in Pittsburgh, called Mr. Arnold's invocation of the anti-trust laws against the building trades unions the beginning of a course "hell-bent for the destruction of organized labor", and the convention denounced Mr. Arnold's activities.

Mr. Arnold also was the subject of unflattering comment on placards in the May Day parade last week in New York by left-wing labor organizations. Meanwhile, on Monday, Mr. Arnold, in Chicago conferring with aides, dropped a hint that he soon will begin "another major anti-monopoly investigation". Sources in that city said it would be in the food industry, from processor and packer to wholesaler and chain store.

Government Ends Trust Case Against Griffiths

The United States Department of Justice, Friday, May 3rd, submitted an order in the federal district court in Oklahoma City, asking permission to withdraw its anti-trust suit against the Griffith Amusement Company and the majors.

Government attorneys refused to comment. Defense attorneys professed amazement, and were reported considering an attempt to obtain a hearing on the unusual procedure, which, they feared, might be a maneuver calculated to obtain an appeal from an order directing the Government to file a bill of particulars, or might be a prelude to the filing of a new complaint against the same defendants in another Western jurisdiction.

The preliminaries to the move were a motion last month, by the Government, to reduce the time by one month which had been allotted to it, for furnishing the defendants with a bill of particulars. The time was therefore set back from June 1st to May 1st. The date came, and the Government failed to file. On last Friday the Government then presented the request for withdrawal, on the grounds that it had defaulted, in not serving its bill.

May Force Public Hearing

Because the procedure requires no public hearing, and the court may grant the dismissal without any public explanation, the defense was considering forcing such a hearing.

The Government suit was filed April 28th, 1939. It had proceeded slowly. There had been so little preparation that estimates were made, recently, that another year would be required to bring the case to trial.

When filing the suit, a Government statement called it an "essential complement" to its New York anti-trust suit.

Officials in Washington this week revealed that the move was a counter-attack against the alleged efforts of the companies to force the Government to disclose its entire suit in advance of trial.

If the Government's motion is granted, it probably will take an appeal to the U. S. supreme court to detremine whether the demand for a bill of particulars was too broad and arbitrary.

Officials of the department emphasized that the action was by no means an indication that the proceedings were to be abandoned and explained that there was no other course by which they could secure a ruling limiting the scope of bills of particulars.

The Oklahoma suit sought dissolution of the defendants' circuits and a rearrangement of their properties under several separate and independent corporations in such a manner as to create competitive condiitons and prevent further violations of the Sherman Act. It also sought to restrain the exhibitor defendants from jointly and collectively negotiating contracts with the producers on a local, competitive basis.

Schine Case Delayed For Three Months

Starting moves which will delay the beginning of the Department of Justice trust suit against the Schine circuit and the majors, in the Buffalo area, at least three months, John Knight, federal judge, on Wednesday, ordered the Department to file bills of particulars on the defendants within 60 days, and allowed the latter 40 more days after receiving the bills, to file answers.

Four More Trust Suits By the Independents

At St. Joseph, Mo., Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Cassil, who own and operate the Rialto theatre, have filed suit in Federal District Court for damages of $452,775, against the Dubinsky Brothers circuit, Charles G. Geiger, and the Dubinsky Brothers circuit, and the majors.

The Cassils charge the distributors and the Dubinskys with violating the anti-trust laws by unlawfully combining and conspiring to put the Rialto out of business.

Pointing out that they opened the Rialto in

1930, and thereafter, until 1932, bought and played pictures second run, while the Dubinskys did not take over the Electric, Missouri, Orpheum, and Crystal until the fall of 1932, the Cassils assert that after 1932 the Rialto was forced by the distributors and the Dubinskys to play third, and subsequent run, and to wait 132 to 148, instead of 60 days, after first run. They also charge that the Dubinskys bought all major product for first and second run, though this greatly exceeded the pictures that the Dubinskys could possibly use; and that this enabled the Dubinskys to control and direct availability of pictures to the Rialto. The latter getting 20 cents, was forced to lower its admission when the Crystal, second run house of the Dubinskys, charged 15 cents, they allege. The same "discriminatory" procedure was followed when the Crystal closed, the Cassils state, and add that the Electric, formerly a 25 cent first run, took over exhibition of second run pictures at 15 cents.

Distributors, "among other things," allowed the Dubinskys substantial rejection privileges and special options on time of exhibition, while denying or substantially withholding such privileges and rights from the Cassils, they charge. Although the protection period against the Rialto increased from 60 to 132 days, distributors asked the same or greater prices for pictures, the Cassils said.

The Dubinskys, with Charles Geiger, opened the Valley theatre, in the Rialto's neighborhood, and because they operated houses in Kansas and Missouri, they induced the distributors to discriminate in their favor: they threatened to get for the Valley (and distributors threatened to give the Valley) price advantages and protection and priority over the Rialto, the Cassils stated and said they were forced to buy the Valley's fixtures and equipment and take over the unexpired lease (July 1, 1937, to March 31, 1939) and to operate at a loss. This cost the Cassils $4,925.

The Rialto's business and the Cassils' investment in it, some $59,500, have been pretty well destroyed, the suit charges. The forced reduction of admission price cost the Cassils $60,000 in operating receipts. The Cassils assert that, in all, they have been damaged to the extent of $150,925.

Battin Amusement Files $550,000 Suit

The Battin Amusement Company, owner of the State theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., filed suit for $550,000 treble damages, against the majors, last week, charging violation of the Clayton anti-trust law.

F. Z. Glass, former owner of three Dallas theatres, filed an anti-trust suit against the Interstate circuit and Karl Holblitzelle, in Dallas, asking $68,000 and attorneys' fees of $7,500.

Sam Kershheimer, operator of the North Side theatre, Houston, filed a similar action, asking $30,000 damages and attorneys' fees of $3,500.

Two weeks ago, also, H. N. Jorgensen, of the East Grand Theatre, Dallas, filed suit against the Interstate circuit, for $77,000 damages; and Louis Richker, of the Gayety Fort Worth, filed suit against the same circuit, for $27,000.

U. S. and Majors Prepare for Trial

To assist Paul Williams, special assistant United States attorney general, trial lawyer, in the Government's "key" anti-trust case in New York, which begins June 3rd, eight assistants from Washington transferred their headquarters to New York on Monday.

These aides are United States attorneys Robert L. Wright, who has conducted some of the pre-trial examinations; William P. Farnsworth, who has also figured in pre-trial maneuvering; James Malloy, John Clagett, J. Stephen Doyle, James Hayes, Seymour Krieger, and J. Frank Cunningham.

Mr. Farnsworth has been acting head of the New York office, and Mr. Krieger has been a special field investigator.

Government Procedure Indicated

Present Government plans call for the presentation of evidence treating, first, with the exhibition and distribution situation centering about Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago, in that order, at the outset of the anti-trust suit trial, it was learned Tuesday.

At the same time it was strongly predicted that Robert Jackson, U. S. attorney general, and Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, would both join in opening arguments made to trial Judge Henry W. Goddard. Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general and trial lawyer, is also expected to present part of the opening of trial, it was said.

Distribution in Philadelphia and part of New Jersey which will be handled by Seymour Krieger, special assistant attorney general, will be presented first because the Government charges only one company, Warners, with monopoly there, it was stated. Additionally, the Government expects considerable support in that territory from Allied States Association.

William R. Farnsworth, U. S. attorney, will follow Mr. Krieger with evidence on New York and part of New Jersey and Connecticut, it was reported. The Government then plans to have Mr. Krieger develop the New England situation with Robert L. Wright, special assistant attorney general, then taking the lead on the middle west territory with particular emphasis upon Chicago.

Meanwhile, as Government forces arrived in strength in New York, the majors' attorneys, warned recently by John G. Knox, senior federal judge, that there would be no more postponements beyond June 3rd of the beginning of the trial, bent their shoulder to preparation.

Abandonment of hopes of a consent decree, which followed Mr. Arnold's blasts against industry practices to a Senate subcommittee several weeks ago, need not be final, legal observers said this week, noting that the consent decree might be entertained after trial begins.

The Government last week, submitted a list of proposed stipulations, some of which, defense attorneys charged, amount to forcing the majors to admit they are guilty before trial.

The defense forces had not attempted, at mid-week, to propose a list of counter-stipulations.

Developments of a Week

Developments this week, in the case, included a compromise on Wednesday between opposing attorneys, on the availability, for inspection by the Government, of licensing agreements in the Philadelphia area, the Government to start inspection next Monday; hearing by Judge Goddard this week on the application of 20th Century-Fox for dismissal of the complaint against 19 company officials, pre-trial examination of Nate Blumberg, Universal president, on Thursday, May 9th, and of C. C. Moskowitz, head of Loew's New York theatres, on Friday, May 10th.

Another Exhibitor Testifies

Last Wednesday, Howard Lesser, last of four prospective Government witnesses, to be subjected to pre-trial examination by defense attorneys, detailed the grounds for complaint against major distributors' sales policies. He owns the Rivoli theatre, Paterson, N. J.

He claimed that the clearance of the Regent, two miles from his theatre, a clearance of seven days, was "not fair"; and he asserted that Warner Brothers had tried to force him to buy 1939-40 product as a condition of obtaining the last half of the 1938-39 product.

On this latter item, he said he had complained, by letter, to the Justice Department.

Under cross questioning, Mr. Lesser admitted that, on a second occasion, he had been offered Warner Brothers' 1939-40 product, with no conditions; and he admitted, too, that when he purchased the Rivoli two years ago, he knew the Regent had protection over it.

Landis vs. Warner Case on Friday

The Mori-Landis Theatre anti-trust action against Warner theatres in Philadelphia and the major distributors, after a series of postponements and a long period of pre-trial litigation, is set to come up for final hearing on Friday, May 10th, before Judge William H. Kirkpatrick in United States District Court in Philadelphia. The hearing, originally scheduled for Tuesday, was postponed for the later day in the week when State Senator Harry Shapiro, attorney for the Vineland, N. J., theatre, was called to the State capital for a special session of legislature called Monday evening. Senator Shapiro is the Democratic floor leader. Former Attorney-General William A. Schnader will represent the distributors in the court action and Morris Wolf is counsel for the Warner theatres.

CALL BUSINESS GOOD IN LATIN-AMERICA, ORIENT

E. S. Gregg, general foreign manager of Electrical Research Products, Inc., returned to New York last week following a three month tour of branches in Central and South America. He said that in most countries of Latin America business seems to be staging a mild boom. "New theatres as large as 3,000 seats in capacity are springing up in almost every area," he said.

D. D. Wight, who returned recently from four years of managerial duty with the Western Electric Company of Asia in the Shanghai and Manila offices of the ERPI subsidiary, reports that theatre equipment sales in the Orient continue steadily despite war and the unsettled status of the Philippines.

Despite the severe handicap placed on importation by the fall of the Chinese dollar, Mr. Wight said, the Chinese continue active in promoting theatre development in the interior which will make theatre entertainment available "to hundreds of thousands driven inland by the Japanese." Mr. Wight also reported considerable building in the Philippines in the past year.

Flight Angels

(Warners)

Comedy Drama

"Flight Angels" is a story of the inner workings of a commercial airline, with emphasis on the lives of the stewardesses, showing them on and off duty. The picture opens with the birth of a baby aboard an airplane, the first time on the screen, to emphasize the varied duties of a plane hostess. The father, mother and child disappear into the interior of an ambulance at the landing field and do not appear further in the story. The stewardess is congratulated for being both doctor and midwife, and then begins the story of her fight to win and hold a pilot "grounded" because of eye trouble.

Virginia Bruce, who recently transferred her affiliation from MGM to Warners; Dennis Morgan, whose latest picture was "Three Cheers for the Irish"; Wayne Morris, Ralph Bellamy, Jane Wyman, John Litel, Dorothea Kent and others are in the cast. The preview audience indicated it liked very much the work of Miss Wyman as comedienne.

This is the first production at Warners for Edmund Grainger. Lewis Seiler directed from a screen play by Maurice Leo, who adapted the original story of Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay.

Previewed at the Warners Hollywood theatre to a favorable reception.—V. K.

Song of the Road

(Select Attractions)

Musical Comedy

Harry Lauder returns to the United States for his nineteenth tour, but this time in his first talking picture, "Song of the Road."

It has been several years since the Scotch comedian last was on this side of the Atlantic to entertain the American public, but many remember the songs he wrote and made famous while appearing on the American stage, among them, "Boss o' The Hoose," "M'Allister," "I Had to Get Wed in the Summertime," "We A' Go Home the Same Way," "January," and "The End of the Road." All these are in the English-made picture.

The plot is simple and secondary to the entertainment offered by the be-kilted and beknighted Sir Harry. It deals with a worthless son-in-law who blackmails old "John MacGregor" (Lauder) because the traveling entertainer insists upon keeping his small grandson.

Reviewed at the Little Carnegie theatre in New York, where the audience expressed its enjoyment.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Torrid Zone

(Warner-First National)

Comedy Melodrama

The scene of this Mark Hellinger production is an unnamed banana republic. The original screen play by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald casts Pat O'Brien as employer and James Cagney as employee in a relationship akin to that which linked Walter Burns and Hildy Johnson in "The Front Page," with an overlay of Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirt.

O'Brien and Cagney are given dialogue comparable in pungency and point to that supplied the aforenamed characters, and Ann Sheridan is steadily on hand supplying what is called in the closing speech "Fourteen Karat Oomph."

There are, however, no newspapering and no warring, although plenty of shooting, in the picture.

Directed for speed and punch by William Keighley, the film has "Case" utilizing one expedient after another to keep "Nick" in the banana company's service although "Nick" is all for returning to the States and a store job. "Lee Donley" is a redhead ordered out of the country by "Case," originally because he regards her as a threat to the emotional calm of the natives and later because she is too capable with cards and shows signs of being in love with "Nick." Similar ambitions regarding "Nick" are displayed by the wife of another overseer, and the girls are outspoken about and to each other.

A native revolutionist given to frequent capture and escape from the constabulary precipitates a final shooting affray in which plot complications are dissolved without the loss of life and "Nick" decides to stay on the job and keep "Lee" with him.

Previewed at Warners Hollywood Theatre to a general audience which laughed heartily at most of the comedy lines, spottily at some others, giving in whole the impression of substantial satisfaction.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

COAST LABOR REFUSES TO RETURN 10% RAISE, MAKES NEW DEMANDS

Program Calls for Recognition of Small Crafts Locals, New Working Conditions and Spread of Wage Increase

Determined not to relinquish the general 10 per cent wage increase they wrung from the producers last fall, the heads of the studio unions comprising the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions met on Thursday, May 2nd, in the offices of the Los Angeles Central Trades and Labor Council, and authorized their vice-chairman, J. W. Buzzell, to arrange new meetings on the producers' demand for relinquishment, and on a three-point program for additional wage and hour adjustments.

It was the first meeting, on such a subject, of these union representatives, since the chairman of the Conference, Willie Bioff, West Coast representative of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, entered a Chicago jail several weeks ago, to finish a 1922 sentence. Mr. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Council and vice-chairman of the Conference, presided. Mr. Bioff, during his Chicago tribulations, had been in touch with the Conference by telephone, and is now in contact by mail, having promised, before entering jail and after receiving the Conference's vote of confidence, that he would continue contact with the Hollywood labor situation.

The Three-Point Program

The three-point program, which the labor heads will present to the producers, consists, roughly, of the following: recognition, by the producers, of the locals which comprise small crafts such as metal working and culinary labor; adjustment of working conditions for all crafts; and payment of the 10 per cent increase to the workers who were refused the increase by the studios because they were receiving more than a minimum wage.

The labor leaders declared at the session that the producers thus far had not proved their assertions of last fall, that they could not bear wage increases because of the decline of revenue resulting from the war.

At the time of the granting of the wage increases, both sides agreed to a resumption of conferences on February 15th. That meeting was held, resumed on the 16th, and adjourned. Each side, at the time, declared the others' statistics were incomplete.

Early Session Asked

At last Thursday's meeting, Mr. Buzzell was authorized to write to Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Associated Motion Picture Producers, and chairman of their labor negotiations committee, asking for an "early session."

Because adjustments in working conditions for crafts, if accomplished at a producer-union conference, would cost the studios more than the 10 per cent wage increase, in the opinion of Hollywood observers, that point in the three point program of the Conference will be the most important in the sessions to be held.

On the Conference negotiating committee, it was decided, will be Mr. Buzzell; Hal Mohr, president of the Photographers Local 659, of the IATSE; A. H. Peterson, AFL organizer; and Walter Redmond, international representative of the Studio Plasterers Union.

Meanwhile, negotiations between the producers and the Screen Writers Guild were scheduled for Friday, May 10, on a collective bargaining agreement. On Monday, the Guild's board of directors appointed representatives to the conferences with the producers. There was to be a membership meeting on Wednesday, to discuss proposals with which the Guild will confront producers.

It was called likely that the conditions to be considered by the Wednesday night general membership meeting would include the following: a minimum wage of $150 weekly; a ban on turning out scripts for a flat fee; insistence on the right of writers to create their own material while on "layoffs"; contract tenure not to exceed three years; a minimum wage of $150 weekly for junior, as well as experienced, writers.

Testing Extras

The Screen Actors Guild last week started testing its class B (extra) members. The tests are expected to result in reclassification of about 7,000 of these. Howard R. Philbrick, recently appointed general manager of the Central Casting Corporation, has endorsed the testing.

In New York, the Manhattan stagehands' union, the Theatrical Protective Union, Local 1, will hold its annual election on Sunday, May 12. Announcement by Vincent Jacobi, present business agent, and running on Sunday for re-election, that he will run for the presidency of the union's parent, the IATSE, against the rule of the present incumbent, George E. Browne, at the international's convention in June in Louisville, has stirred interest in the local's election, inasmuch as it has been divided on support of Mr. Browne's rule in the international.

Also in New York the motion picture division of the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers Union lost its appeal against Helgus, Inc. (Brandt circuit), for a collective bargaining election, at the Liberty theatre. The appeal was made to the New York State Labor Relations Board, which, in deciding against the union, ruled that all managers and assistants employed by a circuit must be included in a bargaining unit.

In Philadelphia, the strike of the musicians' local against the Warner theatre circuit continued, as Thomas J. Williams, federal labor conciliator, met with representatives of both sides, in New York and Philadelphia. He conferred last week with Frank Phelps, Warner Theatres' industrial relations director, in New York. The musicians, originally wanting orchestras at the Fox, Earle, and six neighborhood theatres, are reported to be agreeing to drop the request for a band at the Fox. The circuit, however, holds it needs orchestras at only two neighborhood houses.

In the same city, the American Guild of Variety Artists chapter has ordered its members to walk out of a cast, if a non-union performer is in the show. The order applies, mainly, to night clubs; and the AGVA hopes to start closed shop agreements with them, before the Republican convention starts in June.

In Newport, R. I., E. M. Loew's Paramount theatre has reached an agreement with Musicians' Local 529.

EVEN SONG "PLUGGERS" HAVE UNION NOW

Claiming 430 members and closed shop agreements with most of New York's leading music publishers, "song pluggers" (persons who persuade orchestra leaders to play certain songs) have formed the Music Publishers Contact Employees, Local 22,102, New York, of the American Federation of Labor.

Because wages are good in their field, and working hours necessarily irregular, the union's chief concern, its officers said, will be to eliminate objectionable trade practices, naming as one of them the "bribery" of orchestra leaders.

The president of the union is George Marlo, manager of the Crawford Music Corporation, who this week became professional manager of Broadcast Music, Inc.

National Decency Legion Classifies 13 Pictures

Of 13 pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, six were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were found objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "An Angel from Texas," "If I Had My Way," "Pals of the Silver Sage," "Saps at Sea," "Suicide Legion." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Doctor Takes a Wife," "In Old Missouri," "I Was an Adventuress," "Mayor's Dilemma" (French), "Saturday's Children," "20 Mule Team." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Man with Nine Lives," "My Favorite Wife."

Patent on Notch Letter Held Valid

Decision of the U. S. District court in Chicago that the notched-flange type of silhouette attraction board letter manufactured by the Adler Sign Letter Company, infringed the patent of Wagner Sign Service, Inc., on letters employing this type of mounting, was upheld last week by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Besides the letter, certain features of frame construction were in contest, and regarding these the higher court reversed the district court. The district court had held that Wagner and Adler infringed patents of the other covering details of the removable type frame used with silhouette letters. The higher court declared the patents of each invalid.

The Wagner patent on notched-flange letters for mounting on cross-bars (an essential feature with present design of interchangeable-line panels) was declared valid and infringed by the Adler letter designed for similar mounting. At the same time the court specified that the Adler lug type letter, for channel mounting, did not constitute infringement.

Columbia Signs Stevens

George Stevens, who produced and directed "Gunga Din," "Vigil in the Night," and others, has been signed to an exclusive contract by Columbia. Mr. Stevens' first Columbia production probably will be the picturization of Louis Bromfield's novel, "New Orleans," with Jean Arthur starred.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS OF NEW FILMS

I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby

(Universal)

Comedy Plus Songs

Hollywood correspondents, who gathered at the Universal studio to inspect this third in the company's sequence of films titled in memory of old song hits currently in revival, laughed heartily throughout its unreeling and pronounced it, unanimously, the best of the three. "Oh Johnny, How You Can Love" and "Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me" having been in circulation some while now, and the box office value of song-titles having had therefore a measure of testing, the foregoing report would seem to provide showmen with a somewhat definite basis for calculations.

Particularly emphasized in this tale of gunmen and song writers is a burly and executively effective but slightly dim-witted gangster rated Public Enemy No. 3 and envious of Numbers 1 and 2. He is also a sentimental person desirous of locating a childhood sweetheart, and stumbles upon the idea of publishing a song by way of acquainting her with his whereabouts and state of longing. To do this he needs the services of a song-writer, whom he gently abducts and zealously protects, after which he forces his song into Hit Parade eminence by instructing his mobsters to see to it that band leaders, radio stations, recording companies, and whatnot, issue and play no other numbers until this has been accomplished. Much kidding of the gangster theme takes place during a series of episodes run off swiftly and exclusively for comedy purposes.

Covered Wagon Days

Western

The silver problem between the United States and Mexico is raised again in this production. However, it is not the question of price pegging, now coming into debate again, but the old one of the smuggling of silver across the border in the covered wagon days. Of course it is a sketchy treatment of that issue.

The "Mesquiteers," always espousing the cause of the underdogs, here champion "Rico's" own family. "Rico" is one of the "Mesquiteers," played by Duncan Renaldo, along with "Stony Brooke" (Robert Livingston) and "Rusty Joslin" (Raymond Hatton).

Smugglers have built a tunnel linking two silver mines, one on each side of the border. The mine on the U. S. side is owned by "Rico's" uncle but has been closed for years. The head smuggler attempts to buy the mine, and when that fails, has the uncle slain and accuses "Rico's" brother "Carlos."

"Carlos" is sentenced to be shot. The "Mesquiteers" meanwhile discover a clue in the old mine, and win a free-for-all after a charge of dynamite is set off. "Carlos" is freed.

For Freedom

(Gainsborough - General Film)

Naval Warfare Documentary

As with many films from wartime Britain, this raises the problem of entertainment and propaganda. British audiences need no propaganda on the power and courage of their Navy. Abroad its red, white and blue flavor may perplex the showman. However, though much of its footage is devoted to a discussion of Britain's case against Hitler, there is topical entertainment for audiences on both sides of the neutral frontiers in the re-creation of two episodes in the Navy's war, the Battle of the River Platte, and the "Altmark" incident. It is an odd compilation of newsreel and enacted drama, of political commentary and spectacular action.

The film uses the story of a newsreel editor and his plan to make a peace film but this plot is soon discarded, and the latter part of the film—much the better as entertainment—is devoted to telling the story of the River Platte and of the "Altmark."

Though Will Fyffe as the newsreel editor, and E. V. H. Emmett, G. B. News commentator, have plenty to do, it is the naval ratings and the imprisoned men of the "Altmark" who walk off with the honors.

Technically the picture is mixed. A unusual concoction, it has some excellent camerawork but the editing is disjointed and there are glaring continuity gaps.

Shown to a trade audience at the Cambridge, London, the screening had the atmosphere of a religious rite with cheers for the men and even more for Churchill, who is seen and heard in the film.—Aubrey Flanagan

West of Carson City

(Universal)

Western

A knock-'em-down, shoot-'em-up western of the old school, "West of Carson City" has action a-plenty. The setting is a gold mining town with lawlessness and gambling in full sway. Comes "Jim Bannister," played by Johnny Mack Brown, with ready fists and a quick trigger to empty the town of the crooks, almost single handed.

In support are Bob Baker, who sings "Let's Go" and "On the Trail of Tomorrow," besides joining in the general fireworks; Fuzzy Knight, the comedian of the series; Peggy Moran, the girl, and Harry Woods, the chief "villain" element. Ray Taylor directed.

"Jim Bannister," a rancher, out stalking cattle thieves, is unaware that gold has been found in the valley. He returns to find the ghost city a milling prospectors' town under the domination of "Mack Gorman," a crook, who constantly threatens "Judge Harkins."

When "Jim" tells "Gorman" to get out, "Gorman" kidnaps the judge and his daughter "Millie" and tries to lead "Jim" into a trap. "Jim" rescues the judge and his daughter, and with his cowhands leads a raid on "Gorman's" saloon and drives the owner and his hirelings out of town.

Cowboy from Sundown

(Monogram

Western

Rolland Lynch, who wrote the original story and collaborated with Robert Emmett on the screen play for this latest of the Tex Ritter series, has put the singing cowboy star on the spot, at first. Not only is he the traditional enemy of the "heavy" but he draws down the wrath of those who should be his friends, for Tex plays "Sheriff Lockett" of Sundown.

At lulls in the story and action Tex sings, the songs being "I've Done the Best I Could," which he wrote with Frank Harford; "Craw-Dad Song" and "Symphony of the Prairie." The girl of the story is played by Pauline Haddon. Tex's constant companion is Roscoe Ates, the comedian. Other players include Carleton Young, George Pembroke, Dave O'Brien and Patsy Moran.

"Tex Rockett" quarantines all ranches in Sundown valley because of the hoof and mouth disease. The ranchers, victims of a drought and mortgages held by "Cutler," the local banker, are all for shipping their cattle in order to meet the payments despite the quarrantine. "Tex" arrests "Steve" and impounds the cattle. The ranchers storm the jail but are diverted by "Bee." "Tex" and "Stockton," find that "Nick," son of the banker, and his men have been treating the cattle with acid to simulate the effect of the hoof and mouth disease. "Steve" escapes. "Tex" withdraws his charges against "Steve" and lays them against "Cuttler" and his cronies. The ranchers win the ensuing gun battle.

The Crooked Road

(Republic)

Murder Melodrama

The signpost directions on this murder melodrama point out to both actors and audience the moral directions that the straight and narrow way is the best line to follow. The principal travelers in the narrative jaunt are Edmund Lowe, Irene Hervey and Henry Wilcoxon, while Paul Fix, Arthur Loft and Claire Carleton, a newcomer surprisingly resembling Alice Faye, join the excursion. Robert North was associate producer and Phil Rosen the director, from the fictional roadmaps of Garnett Weston, Joseph Krumgold, E. E. Paramore, Jr., and Richard Blake.

The ingenuity with which the cinematic baedeker is mapped out more than compensates for some sequences impeding the action.

"Vincent" is engaged to marry "Louise" but his past comes jumping up to haunt him. "Gobel," a partner in "Vincent's" past, is threatening exposure of the gentleman as a convict escaped from the English Sing Sing, Dartmoor. In an interview with the culprit, "Vincent" shoots him but, as is shown later, "Gobel" was already dead from poison tablets administered by his wife's inamorata, "Romero." The poisoner is given a reprieve. Through complicated circumstantial evidence, the finger of suspicion finally points to "Vincent," who changes places with "Romero" in the death house. Vindication work is commenced by "Trent" and "Louise" and a tardy exhumation helps solve the crime.

Ski Patrol

(Universal)

War Drama

This first Hollywood film about the Russo-Finnish war tells of a portion of the struggle of Finland against the enemy, giving in detail the holding of a fort by a little group of Finns against superior forces.

Opening with shots of the winter sports competition of the 1936 Olympic Games, to establish the characters, the film shifts to the invasion of Finland. The Russian winner of the ski marathon, who won through the aid of his Finnish rival's sacrifice of first place to save him from death, is an officer of troops trying to blow up the garrison of the Finns, led by the Finnish skier. Their friendship leads directly to the failure of the Russian plan to take the outpost.

In the cast are Philip Dorn, Dutch actor making his American debut; Luli Deste, Stanley Fields, Samuel S. Hinds, Edward Norris, John Qualen, Hardie Albright, John Arledge, Abner Biberman and others. Paul Huston wrote the original screen play for "Ski Patrol," and Lew Landers directed. It is a Ben Pivar production.

Charlie Chan's Murder Cruise

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

The starting point of this Charlie Chan adventure is Honolulu, whence the story moves aboard ship and progresses to San Francisco, where solution of the mystery and capture of the criminal is achieved. The picture assays a considerably higher percentage of murder than most, in the Chan series, run up a par score in the humor department and, according to audience reaction noted, generates more melodramatic tension than most.

The murdering, by strangulation, has been going on for some while before the picture opens, the news being brought to "Chan" by a Scotland Yard operative just arrived incognito as member of a world cruise party which has been losing numerical strength and emotional composure as the result of an unknown criminal's operations. The Scotland Yard operative is murdered immediately after giving "Chan" the few facts in the case which he knows, and "Chan" goes on from there alone save for such inexpert aid as his ambitious No. 2 son provides.

The Flying Squad

(Associated British)

Crook Melodrama

There is more than a touch of the Edgar Wallace die-stamp about this, made from one of his stories, for much of the dramatic material and many of the situations have been cut from a familiar pattern. Unfortunately there is no particular redeeming feature to justify the lack of invention. The film seems to be a pre-war effort, and there is neither blackout nor balloon barrage in it.

Smuggling is the crime this time, smuggling of dope dolled up as face powder, and landed by plane with commendable piloting skill on a lonely meadow at midnight. There is a Mayfair mind behind all this, and an American girl who joins the gang because she believes the police killed her brother, and a fiddler who has more virtue than virtuosity. Naturally the detective is the better looking brand of public schoolboy and in the end gets his man—and his woman.

Herbert Brenon directed, but it is what is known locally as a "straightforward" picture without any directorial tricks, economical both in expenditure and thrill. Standing out from the cast is Basil Radford who is called upon to play the part of a bibulous ex-actor with a shabby eloquence. His portrayal is the best thing in the film, with a deliciously oily magistrate from P. Kynaston Reeves.

Screened to an afternoon audience at the Cambridge in London, the film did not seem to stir as much excitement as the war bulletins from Norway.—Aubrey Flanagan

Captain Moonlight

(Atlas)

Romantic Melodrama

Originally entitled "D'Ye Ken John Peel," the picture was produced in England some years ago, and reflects the fact that it is somewhat dated. In the United States it is being distributed under the title "Captain Moonlight" by the Atlas Film Exchange.

Based on the screenplay by H. Fowler Mear from a story by Charles Cullum, the picture is a romantic melodrama of the nineteenth century produced in a light operatic vein. John Garrick, popular singing star of the British stage, portrays the leading role of "Major John Peel" and has a few songs, supported by the Orpheum Singers.

The story deals with the endeavors of "Major John Peel" (John Garrick) to win back the affections of his one-time sweetheart, "Lucy Merrall" (Winifred Shotter.) They meet finally as she is being married to "Craven" (Leslie Perrins), a gambler and bigamist who is forcing "Lucy" to marry him to save her father's home and name. "Major Peel" exposes "Craven."

The title has little to do with the development

Covered Wagon Trails

(Monogram)

Western Melodrama

Based on a story by Tom Gibson, Monogram's latest western melodrama stars Jack Randell, with Sally Cairns the feminine interest. Produced by Harry Webb and directed by Raymond Johnson, the picture, like most westerns, is swiftly paced.

The story deals with a wagon train bound for Oregon and a battle with fur traders who don't want civilization to come to the west. "Jack" and "Manny," trying to deliver a herd of horses to the wagon train, run afoul of the criminal element. "Jack's" brother is killed by the fur traders. After a series of adventures "Jack" and his friends round up the gang and open the trails.

In supporting roles are David Sharpe, Lake McFee and Glenn Strange.

March of Time, No. 10

(RKO Radio)

The Philippines: 1898–1946

The political and economic situation of the Philippines is the subject of study in the latest release from the March of Time, with pictorial attention to Japan's spreading imperialism and the Philippines' independence from the United States due by the year 1946. Noted are the natural wealth and industrial resources of the islands, the threat in numbers of Japanese imigration and drastic reduction decreed. The picture also shows the efforts being made to build up national defenses and army personnel. The formulators of the March of Time have dressed up their latest number in a brisk presentation.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Serial

For those theatres whose clientele calls for a weekly diet of western screen fare, the distributors of this serial play will be able to supply a miniature dish of cowboys and Indians for the thirteen weeks of the picture's run. Timed during the building of the railroads westward and located in picturesque territory thick with murderous redskins, the complications for the "Iron Horse" builders come from the opposition offered the project by the aborigines led by a white overlord. With such an arrangement of forces there arise frequent skirmishes, both with fist and firearm, fast riding, train raids and wrecks. Dick Foran, who knows his way either on or off a horse, and Anne Nagel head the cast, and James Craig and Tom Fadden play the faithful cronies of Foran. Harry Woods is the pale face menace. Release date, July 2, 1940.—Running time, 13 episodes, two reels each.

IN NEWSREELS

The first newsreel films of the war in Norway arrived on the American Clipper, Thursday, May 2nd. They were shipped separately to accounts by the five newsreel companies. The films, although covering but a small phase of the invasion of the Scandinavian country, show the thoroughness of the German war machine and the unpreparedness of the Norwegians. Most of the footage is devoted to the havoc wrought by German bombers on defenseless villages.

Miniature Concert

Under the stately direction of Frederick Feher, the National Philharmonic Symphony offers some of the musical gems from Verdi's opera, "Aida." This first of the "Symphonic Featurettes" is a melodious miniature for music lovers in general. The camera is manipulated skillfully to concentrate on the various sections of musicians and gives the recital movement it would not otherwise have had. In addition, there is a mixed chorus of 100 voices. Forthcoming numbers in the series will include excerpts from "Lohengrin," "Rosamunde," "Tales from Vienna Woods" and Liszt's "Second Rhapsody," all distributed through Guaranteed Pictures.—Running time, nine minutes.

100 Pygmies and Andy Panda

(Universal)

Cartoon Hocus Pocus

Andy Panda in his newest colored cutup becomes mixed with matters magical. Andy finds a magician's wand and demonstrates with startling and amusing effects the wonders of his find upon his papa and his friend, the tortoise. Andy's fame with the stick makes the local witch doctor envious and he tries to capture the wand. Papa destroys the charm instrument and it is supposed that Andy will return to normalcy. A highlight of the magic demonstration by the Walter Lantz animators is the contest of hijinks conducted between Andy and the witch doctor.—Running time, seven minutes.

The Blue Streak

Sportlight Slant

Grantland Rice for this issue of his Sportlight series, lifts his camera eyes to study the winged activity of the blue geese, said to be one of the longest nonstop bird fliers. First spotting the flock in the Hudson's Bay district, the spectator follows by camera and chart the exodus to the Louisiana swamp lands. The ornithological inspection is graced by some splendid photographic work. Gun shot sequences sometimes are substituted for camera shooting. —Running time, 10 minutes.

Me Feelin's Is Hurt

(Paramount)

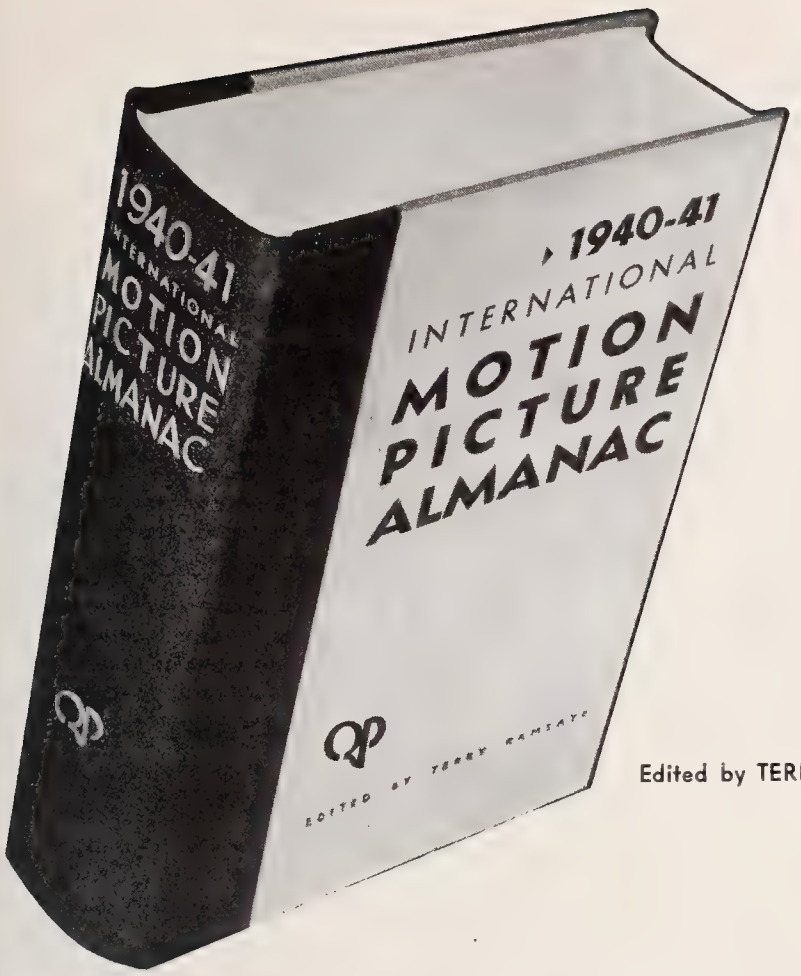
Popeye Goes West

The titular lament pertains to the condition of our nautical friend, Popeye, when he comes to port with anticipations of greeting his girl friend, Olive, only to learn that she has falien for the cowboy charm of Bluto. Throwing for a loss cowhands, steers, horses, and the law of credulity, he is able to convince the fickle female, with the help of spinach. There's a parade of gags and rough house situations. —Running time, seven minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 76

(Universal)

Interesting Oddities



The gallery of believe it or not oddities for this latest release from the Stranger Than Fiction category lists an ancient pottery expert who creates beautiful examples of his art in the homemade mill of his father; a Pennsylvania architects who translates his training with the plan board into carving strange but still lovely decorative figures out of laurel roots, a woman who collects match box covers, and a maker of music boxes. There is a wealth of fresh material.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Going Places, No. 76

(Universal)

Pretzels and Goats

The material for this current Going Places number is apportioned evenly between pretzel making and goat raising. The first section shows the advance in the manufacture of the salty delicacy from the old fashioned hand making to the present twisting by machine. The final portion is devoted to a woman medico who raises goats for their milk supply and uses the beverage for health potions and for the manufacture of face creams and lotions. The sum of the two sections is a diverting picture.—Running time, nine minutes.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Number, Please

Attended by the press, one day this week, was a demonstration at Warner Brothers' Burbank studio of a three way telephonic dialogue, the parties to the conversation being director Anatole Litvak, speaking from the studio; Charles Boyer, in a New York hotel room, and Bette Davis, in a Honolulu phone booth.

Arranged at a cost of $77 for 10 minutes of conversation, the purpose of the hook-up was to re-record dialogue in a scene from "All This and Heaven, Too," the original sound track having been scratched. As the conversation came through an amplifier, it was recorded both on film and an acetate disk, the latter for "protection."

Also attendant at the performance were Nathan Levinson, head of the Warner sound department, and S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity.

Involving as it did both overseas and transcontinental operation, the event spanned time as well as distance, it being 10 A. M. in Honolulu, four P. M. in New York, noon in Burbank.

Shortly after noon, still in Burbank, a repeat performance was being planned for next day. Mr. Boyer, it turned out, had the right number but the wrong script.

Films and War

"With the war cutting down film income, the men and women making pictures will have to learn to make pictures better, and thus more economically.

"One of the main points of concentration will be care in story purchases.

"Readjustment is really healthy, for the return of the foreign market will be an additional margin of profit.

"If we should get involved in a war, public morale will be largely in the hands of the entertainment industry.

"You can't build a wall around the picture business and say it has no effect on or that it's not affected by other business."

Thus, Joseph Mankiewicz, in his office in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's administration building one day last week. With MGM since 1933, Mr. Mankiewicz is currently preparing to produce five pictures: "Philadelphia Story," with Katharine Hepburn; "The Road to Rome," with Myrna Loy and, tentatively, Clark Gable; both of these probably set to start in June; "Beau Brummel," "Incident in Java" and "Cyrano de Bergerac."

Prior to producing, he worked as a writer, winning of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award for the best original of 1934 for collaborating, with Oliver H. P. Garrett, on "Manhattan Melodrama."

Mr. Mankiewicz, who believes that "like most other successful commodities, motion pictures have been over-elaboratized," worked at Paramount as a writer from 1929 to 1933, and before that, after graduation from college, did newspaper work in Berlin for the Chicago Tribune. Produced for MGM have been "Fury," "The Gorgeous Hussy," "Three Comrades" and "A Christmas Carol," among others.

STUDIOS FINISH TEN, START TEN MORE

The production community kept its studios continuingly busy this week, with 10 pictures finished and the same number started, compared to the 9 finished and 12 started last week. Shooting were 48, the same number as the week before, while 29 were being prepared and 60 edited, against the 25 and 61 of last week in the same stage of production.

Columbia completed "West of Abilene"; Monogram, "Wild Horse Range"; Paramount, "I Want a Divorce" and "Three Men from Texas"; RKO Radio, "Anne of Windy Poplars" and "Thousand Dollar Marriage"; Republic, "Wagons Westward" and "Rocky Mountain Rangers"; Twentieth Century-Fox, "Streets of Memories", and Universal, "One of the Boston Bullertons".

Started were "Frontier Crusader", Sig Neufeld; "Black Diamonds", Universal; "The Return of Frank James" and "I Married a Nazi", Twentieth Century-Fox; "Carson City Kid", Republic; "Comin' 'Round the Mountain" and "Mystery Raider", Paramount; "Amateur Detective", Monogram; "One Came Home", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and "Girls of the Road", Columbia.

Three short subjects were completed and one started.

Streamlining

William Meiklejohn, Hollywood agent, has been signed to head the Paramount talent and casting departments. John Zinn, business manager of the departments, and Arthur Jacobson, talent head, will continue in their posts.

Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations, in making the appointment, said: "Studio operations are now in the process of streamlining, a procedure designed to increase production efficiency while every effort is made to save money wherever it can be legitimately saved."

Name News

Frank Capra and Robert Riskin returned to the Warner studio after working on the script of "The Life of John Doe."

Milton Sperling, Twentieth Century-Fox writer now working on the dialogue of "Four Sons" and "The Great Profit," will be promoted to associate producer as soon as these assignments are completed.

Travis Banton's Twentieth Century-Fox contract was extended.

Donald Ogden Stewart was signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to work on the screen play of "The Philadelphia Story."

Leonard Hoffman is working on the screen play of "Second Wind" for Warners.

Eleanor Powell has been signed to a new term Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract.

Mayer Honored

Executive members of the California Department of the American Legion presented to Louis B. Mayer a citation for outstanding Americanism activities in the last year. Mr. Mayer received the citation for "his cooperation through the Motion Picture Producers Association with the Motion Picture Americanism Committee of the American Legion and for his many services in the past in helping and carrying out the ideals of justice, loyalty and good citizenship symbolized by the American Flag."

At the annual meeting of the National Executive Committee of the American Legion, in Indianapolis, a resolution was adopted commending Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the Motion Picture Producers Association, and Joseph M. Schenck for the short subject, "The Flag Speaks," which will be nationally released on Flag Day, June 14th.

"Million" Contest

A 1940 Buick automobile will be the grand prize awarded to the winner of United Artists' exploitation campaign on the picture "One Million B.C.," the new Hal Roach production. The contest is open to theatre men all over the country and the award will be made to the theatre manager whose exploitation campaign reveals the most outstanding seat-selling showmanship on the picture. Prominent motion picture executives and theatre owners will act as judges, including Spyros Skouras, of National Theatres; Joseph R. Vogel, of Loew's, Inc.; Sam Dembow of Paramount; Fred Meyers of RKO Theatres; Hal Roach, producer of the picture and Murray Silverstone of United Artists. The contest closes July 1.

OBITUARIES

J. G. Hawks, 65, Dies on Coast

J. G. Hawks, 65, native of San Francisco and an early Hollywood scenario writer, was buried in Alameda, Cal., this week following his unexpected death a week ago in Hollywood where he had lived for 25 years. His most famous scenario was the "Sea Hawk." He wrote for Samuel Goldwyn and the late Thomas Ince in the early film days. In late years he had been a free lance writer.

File Universal Suit

Earl Lester (Wild Bill) Simon has filed an action for $100,000 damages against Universal, Lucky Teeter and the Studebaker Sales Corporation in Marion County superior court (Indianapolis) charging that Universal pirated motion pictures of stunts that Simon and his assistants made at Studebaker proving grounds near South Bend in 1935 in the film "Danger on Wheels." According to the complaint the scenes were devoted to Teeter, head of a troupe of daredevil drivers, and the Studebaker Corporation benefited because their automobiles were used.

President Sees "Lights Out"

Herbert Kline's documentary film "Lights Out in Europe" was screened at a private showing in the White House, in Washington, D. C., for President Roosevelt on Sunday, May 5th. Later a special screening was held at the National Press Club in Washington concurrent with its opening in that city.

Hoffberg Signs Steel

Hoffberg Productions, Inc., has signed Johannes Steel, radio commentator and author, as script writer and narrator of a series of documentary films dealing with world events, the first of which is to deal with the situation in Norway.

Lischka Resigns Post With Code Authority

Karl Lischka has resigned from the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, effective June 1st. No successor has been appointed. Before joining the Production Code Administration Mr. Lischka was an instructor at Georgetown University.

The members of the Administration now include, in addition to Joseph I. Breen, the administrator: Geoffrey Shurlock, Harry Zehner, Charles Metzger and Arthur Houghton.

Niesse Leaves Olson Circuit

Carl Niesse has resigned the general managership of the Olson circuit, Indianapolis, to give full time to the management of his Vogue theatre, a neighborhood house. Charles M. Olson, president of the circuit, will take over direct supervision of the five remaining houses, the Ritz, Strand, Uptown, St. Clair and Oriental. Mr. Niesse became general manager of the Olson theatres when they were acquired last year from R. R. Bair. He opened the Vogue, a modern de luxe theatre with parking facilities, in June, 1938.

Czech Film Opens

"Zborov," motion picture depicting the fight of the Czech people for their independence in the first World War, had its American premiere at the Homan theatre in Chicago on May 5th, Edgar E. Lloyd announced. The picture was banned and confiscated by the Nazis when they occupied Czechoslovakia.

IN COURTS

Schaefer Questioning Asked in Perfume Case

An application to examine George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, before trial was filed Friday, May 3rd, in New York supreme court by the Carbon Corporation in connection with its injunction suit against RKO. The suit claims the defendant disparaged the plaintiff's perfume product in the film, "Primrose Path." The appellate division of the supreme court recently upheld a denial of a motion for a temporary injunction pending trial in the action.

File "Information" Action

Dan Golenpaul Associates, owners of "Information Please," filed suit in New York supreme court Monday against M. Lowenstein & Sons, Inc., and Aleo Mills, Inc., to restrain use of the name, "Information Please," as the trademark for cotton fabrics. The suit, which also asks an accounting and $20,000 damages, claims the defendants are unfairly taking advantage of the popularity of the radio program.

Republic Sued

Republic Pictures was named defendant Thursday, May 2nd, in a plagiarism suit filed in federal court in New York by Harry Essex and Sid Schwartz, who seek an injunction, accounting and damages. The complaint charges Republic with infringing the plaintiff's play, "Something for Nothing," later changed to "Prize Family," in the film, "Money to Burn."

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

ONE of the first items to come to the attention of Howard R. Philbrick, new general manager of Central Casting Corp., which is the hiring agency for extras in Hollywood, was the "blackmail houses." This is an odd institution, built up by enterprising extra players. Across the street from the rear lot of one of the major studios stands a row of houses, all of which are rented or leased by extra players.

When the studio sends a company or companies to shoot on its own back lot, the extras who live in the houses and who do not happen to be working in films that day, suddenly decide to play musical instruments, hammer nails, saw wood or do other noisy things which the sensitive recording "mikes" nearby pick up.

As a result, a standing order has been issued by the studio to Central Casting that these extras be hired by that particular studio to work on the day that a unit is shooting on its back lot.

One of the extras residing in the "blackmail house row" made approximately $2,900 last year, a near record figure for extra players.

Hollywood-to-New York and New York-to-Hollywood film air travelers, counting among them some of the most active air travelers in this country, came pretty close to getting a flock of new airships, but the war interfered. Lockheeds intended for the Hollywood-New York service have been turned into ocean bombers for the British and now ride daily in the North Sea War Zone to spot German fighting ships. Where once reposed the ships' pantries from which a Zanuck or a Balaban, a Cohn, Blumberg or Kent might have been served soup or Scotch, there are now streamlined guns in a specially installed turret.

Joseph M. Schenck is a dollar-a-year-man. The World's Fair has signed up 75 business leaders to work for a dollar a year to talk optimistically to "100 people a day" for and in behalf of New York's World's Fair. Wait until the California Fair people hear about that.

Walter Hoving, president of the New York department store of Lord and Taylor, is chairman of the dollar-a-year-men committee. He asked his recruits the other day not only to talk optimistically to 100 persons a day, but to promote the Fair spirit by flying Fair flags and displaying Fair posters on their business premises, which calls for Fair flags on Mr. Schenck's Twentieth Century-Fox headquarters in Hell's Kitchen. Also, Mr. Hoving asked the big guns of business to support the Fair's limerick contest on opening day, by referring to it in their advertising.

The German motion picture industry can look any day now to the substitution of other materials for the steel in such equipment as rewind spools, film cabinets and such. The Nazis have now pushed their save-steel campaign to the elimination of steel keys for opening sardine cans, using cardboard containers for motor oil, leaving off steel rings around marmalade jars, etc.

To autograph one copy of "Gone with the Wind," cinema actress Vivien Leigh, who played Scarlett O'Hara, had to sign her name 30 times. Reason: it was printed in Braille for the blind, filled 4,110 pages, in 30 volumes.

IN these days of most discourteous, if not most unfriendly relations between the French and the Germans, the French motion picture trade paper, La Cinematographie Francaise, Paris, makes the following report:

> "In Poland the Germans hung the theatre managers who played the film, 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy'" (Warners).

"The news, no matter how startling it may appear, is true," insisted the publication. "In the part of Poland occupied by the Germans, all the showmen who played, during the war, 'The Confessions of a Nazi Spy' have been hung in their theatres. Some employees of Warner Bros. at Varsovie have received the same thing. A general representative of Warner Bros. in the Polish capital escaped the Germans by a miracle. These deeds are registered, and even published in a book which appeared recently and which has described the German atrocities in Poland.

"The curious point in this painful incident is that the film 'The Confessions of a Nazi Spy' passed in the part of Poland annexed by the Russians, and without difficulty for the theatre managers. . ."

Little did the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel management know what they let themselves in for the other night when they allowed the Motion Picture Pioneers Club to take in three horses to the hotel's Jade Room to race on treadmills for the delight of the film executives at their third dinner. The filmites forgot to pick up the horses the next day, 'til very late afternoon, when the frantic management called Assistant-chief Pioneer Hal Hode pleading for their removal—after which a horde of porters descended on the place with quick-swishing flit guns to clarify the horsey atmosphere, in time for a swanky society wedding scheduled for that evening. There'll be no more Pioneer horses in the Waldorf.

To all those big big movie moguls who belong to the Picture Pioneers Club in New York, Gordon Reid, film booker and general overseer of Si Fabian's Theatre Circuit, offers the suggestion that for their next social, they stage an old-fashioned Hay Ride down Broadway into Times Square, using a real hay-wagon, possibly with oxen, certainly with horses. The Pioneers could then ride into the country, adds Reid, have a country breakfast, play leap-frog, and do some fishing. Returning to town, Reid would have them stage their regular meeting in Times Square, then adjourn. "It would be a great humanization of picture executives before the public," thinks Al.

Shades aplenty of yesteryear will be raised Sunday evening in New York at the 48th Street Music Hall, when a crowd of oldtime stars will serve for a benefit of the American Theatre Wing of the French and British Relief Funds. Set down for attendance are such names as Beverly Bayne, who was so popular in the days when she co-starred with Francis X. Bushman. She'll chairlady the party, assisted by Mary Pickford, Gloria Swanson, Lila Lee, Viola Dana, Estelle Taylor, Nita Naldi, Dorothy Gish and others of other film days.

AMOS 'N' ANDY, blackface comedy team, have renewed their contract to broadcast for Campbell's Canned Soups for three-and-a-half years, beginning January 1st, next, five days a week.

The pair are now in their 13th year of continuous network broadcasting — twice nightly (broadcast and re-broadcast), with but one vacation. Their new contract assures them of running through nearly 17 years of radio performing. They already have broadcast at least 8,000 times, to approximately 50,000,000 listeners a week.

Their lone starring film, "Check and Double Check," in 1930, for RKO, had best be forgotten, by all, including Amos 'n' Andy.

Requests for information assay a high quota of imagination. It reached a new high the other day for Kathleen (Mavourneen) Mungiven, Quigley Publications' receptionist and information dispenser.

A tall, weighty stranger entered the reception room and asked the girl whether it might be possible to get "some motion picture information," specifically inquiring, "Can you tell me how many happily married people there are in Hollywood?"

Isroy Norr, press agent consul for the Will Hays organization, has a publicity business on the side. Always cinematically minded, aided and abetted by the Hays "account," Mr. Norr tries frequently to give the films a boost on the side, as witness the following release from Mr. Norr's publicity business of Ames & Norr, New York:

> "A fitting tribute to the motion picture industry is reflected in the selection by the New York State Restaurant Association, of Miss Marietta Ronchetti, of 1616 Grand Avenue, the Bronx, a Childs Restaurant waitress, as New York Queen of National Restaurant Week.
> "Miss Ronchetti, who will be officially crowned and presented with a scepter at City Hall, Friday, started out as a cashier at Loew's Burnside Theatre."

"Because optimism and dreams are the chief ingredients in the 'formula' of the motion picture industry, persons connected with that industry must necessarily be optimistic," declared Arthur Frudenfeld, RKO division manager in Cincinnati, in addressing the Optimists Club there. He said, "Faith in the future is responsible for the large investments made daily in production." Cracks and comments are limited to four volumes.

Columbia

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Didn't do the business anticipated. No fault of the picture but we had French mission here for a week and they just go to church. We had an artist contest drawing "Dagwood."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FIVE LITTLE PEPPERS AT HOME: Dorothy Ann Seese, Edith Fellows—An answer to a small town exhibitor's prayer. We played it on a week-end and it brought in people who never come on such days. Just a swell show for us. Do not be afraid of it as it is strong enough to stand alone any place. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NORTH OF THE YUKON: Charles Starrett, Linda Winters—Played with "Pirates of the Skies." See report on "Pirates of the Skies."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TWO FISTED RANGERS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—Doubled this with "Five Little Peppers at Home" and it certainly made a swell combination. The best Starrett to date. Just a good western with more action than you can shake a stick at. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Fine production from start to finish and every one having the admission price came to see it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played April 13-14.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—This would have been first class entertainment if the religious propaganda had been more evenly distributed. Timely. Worth extra plugging. Running time, 90 minutes.—J. O. Gutherie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, Ohio. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—This picture drew better than expected. Our patrons usually stay away from a picture of this type. Many of the regular patrons did stay away but their places were taken by those people who seldom attend. Many favorable comments were received. The music will please anyone. Running time, 102 minutes. Played April 20-21.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—No story to start with and the acting seemed very unconvincing, especially the hike through the jungle. Patrons were disappointed. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 16-17.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold—Can't figure out what they're trying to do with Robert Montgomery in this one. Did fair business. Patrons enjoyed the story but heard this remark: "Hope it doesn't spoil Montgomery for me." Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 17-18.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Best Lamarr so far. Tracy at his usual best but not exceeding his other roles as the preview would have you believe. Good comments. B.O. good. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Hedy Lamarr, Spencer Tracy—Good pictures made possible by the fine acting of Tracy and the beauty of Lamarr. A bit foreign to the usual Tracy style but will be liked by most audiences. Especially so when he returns to the part of the city where his work is not corrupted with graft and pretense, where the people really love him for the great good he does for them. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 21-22.—Mrs. W. L. Crist, Ripley Theatre, Ripley, Ohio. Small town patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, William Gargan, Lewis Stone, Walter Brennan—Very "cute" picture but didn't have much draw. Ann Sothern alone is good entertainment. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 10-11.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

NICK CARTER, MASTER DETECTIVE: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson—Held the attention of the audience but if it hadn't been double billed with an Autry picture, there would have been no crowd. Running time, 59 minutes. Played April 9-10.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Big box office and a pleasure to play.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Interesting picture. Enjoyed by those attending but did not draw. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 2-3.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—A weird production but well liked and drew good crowds. Running time, 113 minutes. Played April 6-7.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—Too high brow for our small town minds. It may be an excellent picture but is one our public did not grasp. Business just average, although we gave it our best playing time. Use your own judgment. Running time, 115 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—Good picture; fair business. Crawford is no draw here. Running time, 113 minutes. Played April 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Oewey, Okla. Small town partonage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Virginia Weidler, Fay Bainter, George Bancroft—You have to credit the cast in this one for their support of this amateur Einstein, Marconi rolled into one. His role is slightly incredible. I'll take little Miss Weidler for mine and is she a honey of a little actress, as with the others in support. And you exhibitors that have "Wind" coming, which showed a loss for us, will find that it will plug your business before and after showing, as it is doing for us. Unfortunately it did just half what Metro expected it to do. Just two good days' business spread over four days. That $1.10 is a no good deal for the small towns. There is not that much money in circulation with the average showgoers. Then, our town was milked before we got a chance at the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

Paramount

FARMER'S DAUGHTER: Martha Raye, Charles Ruggles—This pleased all and business was good. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly, Susanna Foster—A pleasing vehicle on which to drape all the lovely Victor Herbert songs. The music alone will insure the success of this picture in a music loving situation. Do not overlook the tremendous ability of 14-year-old Susanna Foster, who plays the part of the daughter of Mary and Allan. When one so young can arrive so well, there is not much use for the rest of us to start. Running time, 91 minutes. Played February 14-15.—Mrs. W. L. Crist, Ripley Theatre, Ripley, Ohio. Small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Feature Color Cartoon—All of the Lilliputians were good. "Gabby" was exceptional. One of the biggest laughs in the picture is "Gabby's" retreat to the Palace upon finding the "Giant on the Beach." The animation of the Hero, Heroine and the Kings were the worst I've ever seen. If Paramount is preening her feathers over this little job, we pray for pity for the balance of the contract. Running time, 76 minutes. Played February 18-19.—Mrs. W. L. Crist, Ripley Theatre, Ripley, Ohio. Small town patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—Paramount first box office hit of the year. A sequel would go in a big way. Played April 16-17.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Not a bad picture but had absolutely no draw. We haven't had a good picture for so long we have forgotten how to report. The good ones are like the prosperity, just around the corner.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Ray Milland—This picture was well liked and did a nice business. Played April 2-3.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

SEVEN EXHIBITORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Five new contributors are represented in the What the Picture Did for Me department this week and two others sent in reports last week for the first time. They are:

S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev.

Mrs. W. L. Crist, Ripley Theatre, Ripley, O.

C. W. Massy, State Theatre, Worthington, Ind.

H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C.

Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich.

J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H.

John W. Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, S. C.

Three exhibitors whose reports have not been received in some time have rejoined the department this week and one other was represented last week. They are:

H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn.

J. O. Guthrie, Karolyn Theatre, New London, O.

Alvan C. Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Ia.

Jno. S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich.

COLORADO SUNSET: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Buster Crabbe—Drew a good attendance and pleased them all. Several remarked it was the best Autry they had ever seen. The words of the songs could be plainly understood which helped a lot in putting over the humor. Running time, 64 minutes. Played April 9-10.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

RANCHO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Good picture; good business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Too bad Gene Autry doesn't make more "song title" features. Played it Saturday-Sunday and had the biggest week-end business for a long time. The entire country went for this one and even a surprising number of the town people. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 13-14.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Good comedy; well liked. Played April 27.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

LOST PATROL (reissue): Victor McLaglen, Boris Karloff, Wallace Ford; STAR OF MIDNIGHT (reissue): Ginger Rogers, William Powell—We did real business with these reissues from RKO. Had tieup with a bakery, giving away free coffee and doughnuts and we really did business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—I enjoy reading this department. However, I seldom send reports on the pictures I show. This picture surely is a rose among the thorns. After a slow winter and spring I finally got a picture with some box office value and I have the so-called "big" companies. I showed this picture April 12-14, breaking my box office records for eleven months and the people were entertained. It will stand alone on your best time.—Alvin C. Myrick, State Theatre, Lake Park, Iowa. General patronage.

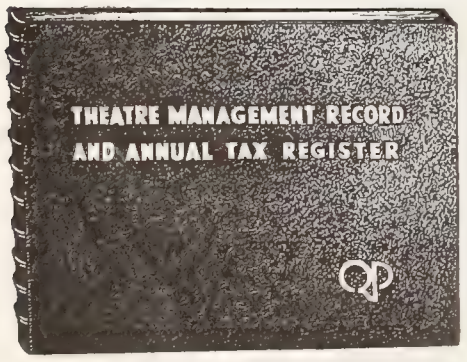
SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt.—Big disappointment. No strength at box office. Played April 14-15.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—This picture was substituted for "Swiss Family Robinson" by the exchange just a few days before showing so we had a good kid turnout but as for the picture I find nothing to recommend it. The story is extremely depressing; the English dialect is terrible and the recording is worse. Next time they substitute, I'll take a western. At least, I'll know what to expect. Running time, 91 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—Lombard never meant much here and this town is strictly a "star" town. No B.O. Played April 23-24.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—A very lavish production in beautiful color but Shirley doesn't pull them in any more. We must not complain though. Just remember what she has done in the past for us. Picture drew fairly well. Everybody satisfied. Play it by all means. Running time, 82 minutes. Played April 25-26.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.



CHARLIE CHAN IN PANAMA: Sidney Toller, Jean Rogers—When Oland passed out, that ended the Chans as far as draw is concerned. They are just so much wasted film now. We find them a dead herring at the box office and I know the same to be the case in our surrounding territory. They are all cut over the same pattern, too much so to stand a series of them and I think that Fox will find that to be so.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Dorris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—The one and only as some may say and must say plenty patrons really enjoyed this masterful production, although expectation not to make one feel thankful for what he has. Of course, the depressing angle will keep them away. Business satisfactory. Running time, 127 minutes. Played April 21-22.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—In this one Jane was billed as the Texas Tornado and she certainly lives up to all of that and some. Very exciting climax and all around best Jane Withers for a long time. Jane is quite a young lady in this one. Box office good. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 27.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Great business. Played September, 1939.—C. W. Massy, State Theatre, Worthington, Ind. Small town patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—A very beautiful, very good picture. Business was good but it would have been better if the trailer had been any good. Just one-half minute of the Hall Johnson Choir singing in the trailer would have made it worth running. Don Ameche deserves credit for this one. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 20-21.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP
ROCKEFELLER CENTER, NEW YORK

United Artists

BLOCKADE: Madeline Carroll, Henry Fonda—Picture very timely and well liked. Business good. Played April 9-10.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—A comedy drama that drew plenty of laughs for those who saw it but the draw was very disappointing. We played it on "Cash Night" with the results noted. Use your own judgment. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—Rather old but still better than most of the new ones. However, if it hadn't been for Cooper, this would not have stood alone. Running time, 96 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

STAGECOACH: John Wayne, Andy Devine, Claire Trevor, Thomas Mitchell—This cannot be compared with such pictures as "Wells Fargo" or "Union Pacific." We picked this up because of the publicity it had received but our customers were not so easily fooled. They just did not show up. Running time, 96 minutes.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

Universal

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—Best Sunday in weeks. Played January 1940.—C. W. Massy, State Theatre, Worthington, Ind. Small town patronage.

GREEN HELL: Joan Bennett, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., John Howard, Alan Hale, George Bancroft, George Sanders, Vincent Price—Picture did a nice business. Has everything, action, romance, storms, native attacks and victory in finding the gold that prompted the trek. Joan Bennett is splendid in anything. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 11-12. —Mrs. W. L. Crist, Ripley Theatre, Ripley, Ohio. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS, THE: Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey—Smash Saturday business.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon—Good box office. Good picture from a distributor which I rate as No. 2 this year.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon—One of the very best pictures that has been or will be shown here this year. Deanna is not beautiful but is very attractive and shows ability far above the average, as to personality, acting and singing and it is reported that she can sign up with Metropolitan Opera the coming season if she wants to but as a good friend would advise her to stay in pictures where she will rank with the leading stars in a profession in which she is well adapted to shine. Her support all good and clever. Kay Francis (an Oklahoma City girl) is far from being washed up and will make good for many years to come. Of course, Walter Pidgeon, as usual, was excellent and the entire cast all good in the various characters they portrayed. The picture will be shown at neighborhood theatres for two or three weeks after leaving the Criterion. Played April 25-May 2.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MY LITTLE CHICKADEE: Mae West, W. C. Fields, Joseph Calleia, Dick Foran—The raucous voiced Fields, aided by the back number, Mae West, adds up to harking back to the kerosene circuit on the legitimate stage and that is too long back for the modern audiences of today. Anyway, it didn't jell here and I put it to the lack of this pair of stars pull. There is not much glamour to Mae West any more. She is just a plump lady with some years gone over her head, as it has to all of us.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Tom Brown, Peggy Moran—Best Thursday in a long time.—H. B. Ram, Patricia Theatre, Aiken, S. C. City and country patronage.

PIRATES OF THE SKIES: Kenty Taylor, Rochelle Hudson—Played with "North of the Yukon." Nice double bill to below average business on account of local missions which were held for a week. They did S.R.O. business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, C. Aubrey Smith, Beaulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler—Audience was surprised with this one. Give it good playing time. Played April 21-22.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan—Our folks didn't care much ofr this. It seemed too long for a picture of this type. It was fortunate that an especially fine two reel short ("Teddy the Rough Rider") was shown with this picture. The patrons thought the short worth the admission price.—Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 23-24.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—A stirring tale of the Old West. Pioneer, good mining, civil war pictures, cowboys of the real far west, bandits, love of a southern girl for a Yankee, all combined makes up one of the very best pictures heretofore seen here. Errol Flynn's support, Scott, Humphrey Bogart and, of course, Miss Hopkins, all seen at their very best and acting of the highest order. Everybody seeing the picture will want to see it again, as it is all human, as the Hardy Family hits, with the tenderness of "Mr. Chips," thrills of "Jesse James" days and the laughs of "Road to Singapore." Running time, 115 minutes.—William Noble. Criterion Theatre. Oklahoma City. Okla. General patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Alan Hale, Humphrey Bogart—Swell business. Played March 24-25.—C. W. Massy, State Theatre, Worthington, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

HITLER, BEAST OF BERLIN: (Producers) Roland Drew, Steffi Duna, Greta Granstedt—This is a very timely picture and very good. Our box office spoke very highly of it. Other exhibitors can cash in on this one if played before too long. Runing time, 85 minutes. Played April 21-23.—W. T. Fay, Illinois Theatre, Metropolis, Ill. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: A very entertaining single reel. Have played several now and people are just starting to chirp somewhat. Lots of laughs. Running time, one reel.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S DOUBLE: Our Gang—Little humor in this subject. Running time, 11 minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

ALL ABOUT HASH: Our Gang—Some improvement over the usual Our Gang but still rather poor entertainment. Running time, eight minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

CRIME DOESN'T PAY SERIES: This is an A-1 series, and very educational. The motion picture industry is doing valuable work in helping to combat crime. Best dramatic short series yet. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

DOMINEERING MALE, THE: Pete Smith Specialties—Just fair. Seems as though that is the only comment that can be made of most of the MGM shorts. Running time, eight minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, Marine, CCC patronage.

HOME MOVIES: Robert Benchley—Just another filler. Running time, eight minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

MIGHTY HUNTERS: Merrie Melodies—Good. Running time, 10 minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

MIRACLE AT LOURDES: MGM Miniatures—Metro hit on something when they began these Miniatures. We learn lots of historical facts that we never would otherwise, and see places that we never expect to visit personally. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

OUR SOUTH: MGM Miniatures—Fairly interesting. Running time, 11 minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

STUFFIE: Pete Smith Specialties—Very good short on dog by name of "Stuffie." Spendid and human. Your heart will go out to the big St. Bernard. Runing time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

STUFFIE: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting. Runing time, nine minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

THAT INFERIOR FEELING: Robert Benchley—Personally we like Benchley and enjoy his reels a lot,

but it seems our patrons just can't see where he's funny. Running time, nine minutes.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT INFERIOR FEELING: Robert Benchley—Terrible. Running time, eight minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.: Pete Smith Specialties—The audience followed this with interest. Running time, eight minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine CCC patronage.

Paramount

MUSIC THROUGH THE YEARS: Headliners—This was a nice musical short reel, showing a fine orchestra and pleased our crowd. Running time, 10 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Our patrons like the Paramount News; in fact, we see little difference in any of the newsreels. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SMALL FRY: Color Classics—A colored cartoon depicting the cong. The fish idea was good. Always enjoy Paramount short subjects.—H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Smal town and rural patronage.

STEALING AIN'T HONEST: Popeye the Sailor—Think these Popeye cartoons are slipping.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SUPER ATHLETES: Grantland Rice Sportlights—This is a sport reel worth mentioning. Usually we just sit and watch but on this one we sat up and took notice. Enjoyed seeing the advances in athletics. —H. Bettendorf, Foley Theatre, Foley, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

INFORMATION PLEASE: Our patrons like this series very much.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 7: Vatican of Pius XII—Through cooperation with local Catholic Church got some extra business on account of this short subject. Quite good and goes into detail. Running time, 19 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 7: Vatican of Pius XII: Good. Running time, 18 minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

NAVAJO LAND: Reelisms—A very fine reel that your patrons will enjoy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RIVETERS, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another dandy Donald Duck cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SEA SCOUT: Walt Disney Cartoons—A very entertaining cartoon with plenty of action for Donald, at least. What he doesn't do to that big fish. Play it. Good. Running time, eight minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER: Terry-Toons—This is a nice colored cartoon. Worth time on any program. Running time, seven minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

LABOR SAVERS: Lew Lehr—Mildly entertaining. Have seen all this stuff before in the Fox News. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KITTENS MITTENS: Lantz Colored Cartunes—A dandy colored cartoon. Universal is on the right track now. Give us more of them.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

A-HAUNTING WE WILL GO: Lantz Colored Cartunes—Not nearly so good as the Baby Panda series. No laughs. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ONE ARMED BANDIT: Lantz Cartunes—Play this. It's very good. Running time, seven minutes.—John S. Erickson, Rex Theatre, Iron Mountain, Kingsford, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Mrs. Arretus F. Burt is chairman of the Federation's Committee on Motion Pictures.

Vitaphone

ALI BABA BOUND: Looney Tunes—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BEAR'S TALE, THE: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good one-reel musical. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DANGEROUS DAN McFOO: Merrie Melodies—Very good, with lots of good laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good orchestra show. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

DAY AT THE ZOO, A: Merrie Melodies—Good. Running time, 8 minutes.—Ray S. Hanson, Fox Theatre, Fertile, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Broadway Brevities—A very poor two-reel musical comedy that only made our customers restless. Running time, 18 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Broadway Brevities—Another good Brevity from this company. Here is a swell musical featuring the double of Mae West, Hugh Herbert, Eddie Cantor and such. Good for the best days of the week. Excellent. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ELMER'S CANDID CAMERA: Merrie Melodies—Have never seen a better cartoon, as to story, music and especially coloring. Pleased old and young alike. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ELMER'S CANDID CAMERA: Merrie Melodies—This is the first poor cartoon from Vitaphone this year. This one not up to standard but we have often wondered how they could run as uniformly good as they do.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FAGIN'S FRESHMEN: Merrie Melodies—Not so hot. Have liked most of the Merrie Melodies but can't say much for this one. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

FRANCES CARROLL AND THE COQUETTES: Melody Masters—Good musical and orchestra reel. Running time, 10 minutes—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MONROE DOCTRINE: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Good two reeler in color but customers seemed bored as they sat through it. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TEDDY THE ROUGH RIDER: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—Fine production and greatly enjoyed by the patrons. Almost everyone in the theatre applauded. See report on "Brother Rat and a Baby." Running time, 19 minutes.—S. E. Bower, Desert Theatre, Hawthorne, Nev. Miner, marine, CCC patronage.

Serial

Universal

GREEN HORNET, THE: Gordon Jones, Anne Nagel—We have played four chapters of this serial and it is a complete failure. We have to play it between the shows in order to give our customers a chance to walk out and not miss part of the show. as quite a few told us they would not sit through the serial.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. General patronage.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Without a Hitch

No hitches have occurred in the third picture on the floor at Denham, the fourth Metro-British production, "Busman's Honeymoon," which, it already is firmly believed, will repeat the world success of Ben Goetz's other three, "A Yank at Oxford," "The Citadel," and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips." Robert Montgomery, under the direction of Englishman Arthur Woods, and with Constance Cummings in the feminine lead, is well underway in his role of Lord Peter Wimsey, the detective aristocrat created by novelist Dorothy Sayers.

Work, indeed, started last summer, when a mobile camera unit went to Devon and there shot thousands of feet of rustic background material, bringing back to the studio bucolic landscapes and settings discovered in Devonshire. One of these, a Tudor farmhouse with box hedges, a profusion of garden flowers, and ancient thatch, has been duplicated at Denham for matching shots in the film. A thatcher—one of the oldest and most exclusive of English country craftsmen—has been engaged, not to put a new thatch on an old farm, but an old thatch on a new one.

Among others in the cast of "Busman's Honeymoon" are Sir Seymour Hicks, in his first butler role, Robert Newton as the crafty gardner handyman, and Leslie Banks in the part of Detective Inspector Kirk.

Of the Tommy

In another stage at Denham the atmosphere is far from Victorian. Here Legeran and Ian Dalrymple, considered one of the most brilliant minds in the industry, are finishing work on "Old Bill and Son," the screen tapestry of the British Tommy past and present. "Old Bill," typified by Morland Graham, is on the screen 90 per cent of the time. Dalrymple, who has earned no unworthy fame as a scenarist—witness "Story in a Teacup," "The Citadel," "Divorce of Lady X," "Pygmalion" and so on—is also responsible with Bruce Bairnsfather, foster father of the original "Old Bill," for the script.

News Briefs

A screen history of The Times, London's senior daily newspaper, has been made by Paul Rotha for Film Centre. The film which, in its way, tells the story of the British newspaper as an institution, is of feature length. It is expected that distribution in both England and the United States will be announced soon.

Shooting has concluded on RKO Radio's latest British production, "Gentlemen of Venture," which has been on the floor at the Rock Studios, Elstree, for some weeks. Paul Stein directed, under the British Eagle Film Production marque, with Wilfred Lawson and Nora Swinburne in the leads.

Distinguished

The cast of "Girl in the News," latest Twentieth Century production to go on the floor at Shepherds Bush, includes many names distinguished on the contemporary London stage.

Among them are Emlyn Williams, noted author-dramatist, Roger Livesey, Basil Radford, Margaretta Scott and Roland Culver.

Carol Reed is directing, with Margaret Lockwood and Barry K. Barnes in the leads.

Another War Film

Another war subject to go on the floor of a British studio is "Convoy," the Ealing Studios' production which Michael Balcon has launched, with Pen Tennyson in directorial charge.

Cast for the role of the young lieutenant aboard a light cruiser is John Clements. His commanding officer is Clive Brook.

Output Assured

Though Robert Kane is expected to announce the production by 20th-Fox of at least one British super, probably with Gracie Fields starring, continuity of output has been assured by the unit. They have announced the impending production of three more single quota films.

"Neutral Port" has a wartime background, and will star Will Fyffe in a characteristic role. Literary credits include the name of J. B. Williams, responsible for similar work on "Owd Bob." Marcel Varnel will direct.

"Inspector Hornleigh Joins Up" again will have Gordon Harker in the title role. The script will be by Sidney Gilliatt.

The third is based upon the story of "La Libre Belgique," the Belgian nationalist paper which was produced and published in the last war. Oscar Millard's book will be the inspiration.

Production in all cases will be at Shepherds Bush.

BOTH SIDES FACE CONGRESS MONDAY IN BLOCK BOOKING BILL BATTLE

California Congressman Calls Neely Measure "Slow Poison"; Defends "Horse Trading" Tactics

The ring is roped off for the opening, on Monday, of the block booking "battle of the century," to continue until refereeing Congressmen pull the gong.

On Monday morning, into the chambers of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives in Washington—and before a full committee, of which Clarence F. Lea is chairman—the Abram Myers-Allied States-Motion Picture Research Council forces will lead proponents to argue for passage of the bill which Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely already has passed in the Senate. At the same time, and into the same chambers, will go the organized industry's opponents of the bill, probably represented, as usual, by Charles Clyde Pettijohn, Hays organization counsel, to argue why the House should not pass the bill.

Hollywood will send several delegations, mostly on opposition to the bill's clause requiring submission to exhibitors of a synopsis in advance.

Exhibitors and Clubwomen

Both sides will be accompanied by the customary long lines of witnesses from exhibitor organizations, and clubwomen and others, many of whom have appeared at the numerous block booking bill hearings down through the years.

Speculation on the outcome of these hearings is livelier than usual, principally because of the position of the industry as a result of the barrage of trust suits and attacks of legislative and other nature in the last twelvemonth. On the industry's side is time, Congress running close to adjournment. In addition, importantly, the "key" New York anti-trust suit, which goes on trial on June 3rd, has Governmental demands for theatre circuit divorcement, abolition of block booking and a general reshaping.

Congressmen Attack Bill "Slow Poison," Says Costello

The Neely block-booking bill is "a legislative patent medicine to cure all the ills of the motion picture industry," but one which "contains a slow poison as its active ingredient," members of the House of Representatives were warned this week by Congressman John M. Costello, of California.

Launching a last-effort fight against the measure, the California delegation in Congress, in a series of "educational articles" in the Congressional Record and brief addresses on the floor, is attempting to explain to members, who soon may be called to pass on the bill, the unique and difficult problems which differentiate the film industry from all others.

"The wholesale distribution of motion pictures, which is what goes on between the production of the picture in the studio and the widely separated exhibitions of the motion picture in the theatres throughout the country, is vital to the operation of every motion picture theatre," Representative Costello declared in an explanation of block booking.

Calls Standard Pricing Impossible

"It is not possible to have a standard pricing system for the exhibition rights to motion pictures as between the wholesale dealer and the retail dealer, primarily because it is not possible to determine the delivered unit cost of the article sold by the wholesale distributor, that is, the exhibition rights to a particular motion picture at a particular theatre.

"Moreover, these quoted prices cannot be uniform, as one theatre can afford to pay many times what another theatre can afford, and one picture may be worth several times the value of another picture at the same theatre. This presents a problem in economics that is both difficult and unique, and is the fundamental reason for many marketing methods employed in motion picture distribution, both wholesale and retail, that are quite different from those used in other lines of business."

Conceding that only a "vague and uncertain price formula" has ever been possible in the industry, the Congressman said it is still in the "horse trading" era, with buyer and seller each seeking to make the best deal possible.

"Since what is bartered has uncertainties and contingencies much greater than is predictable as to its ultimate value, there is an inherent premium upon attempts at sharp trading," he said. "The pull for advantage is not lessened and the sharpness of trading is in no way dulled because the parties to the bargain in many ways are mutually interdependent. It is precisely because the wholesale distributor in most situations finds only certain exhibition outlets for the display of his motion pictures, and the exhibitor must make his bargain for motion pictures with a definitely limited number of wholesale distributors, that the feeling which attends the making of a bargain is so intense.

Notes "Turmoil of Disputes"

"Thus, the business of exhibiting and distributing motion pictures is kept in a turmoil of disputes, arguments, and controversies brought about by the fact that the marketing of the exhibition rights has to be on this uncertain basis which I have described, with the suspicion always present that the other fellow is getting the better of the bargain, or that a better bargain could be secured if it could be done over again."

Meeting the charge of "compulsory" block booking, as defined in the Neely bill, Mr. Costello held it is only logical "that a wholesale dealer with several pictures to license would be foolish not to accept the offer of an exhibitor who wanted to license all of the pictures offered rather than the offer of a rival exhibitor to license only part of the pictures. If this is true, he asked, "is it not the competitive buying between rival exhibitors that exercises the compulsion in block booking?

"Apparently the sponsors of this legislation realize that this compulsion, at least in part, is based upon the compelling desire of the exhibitor to secure the best possible terms in buying motion pictures for his theatre, because the important part of Section 3, the block booking section of the Neely bill, is concerned with regulating the prices quoted by the wholesale distributor to the exhibitor on the exhibition rights offered for sale.

"Exactly what pricing or price quotations by the wholesale distributor it is intended to declare illegal and punishable under the act appears to be uncertain and ambiguous But, as this is the heart of the act, it should be examined carefully and clearly understood, before Congress ventures into the field of price-control legislation for an industry that has the peculiarities of the motion picture to contend with in its marketing and pricing problem."

Warns of Opposite Effect

Congressman Costello predicted that this section of the bill might have an effect directly opposite to that contemplated by its sponsors and might "arbitrarily freeze the asking prices first quoted by each distributor on its pictures, which is usually somewhat higher than those finally agreed upon, prevent negotiations for more favorable prices and terms, and prohibit price discounts and reductions by the wholesale distributor to secure orders for more than one picture."

"It is strongly urged that such an arbitrary requirement by statute will force an artificial and very substantial increase in film costs, particularly to the smaller theatres, with no improvement likely in quality or values, which may prove disastrous to many small independent exhibitors," he said.

Exactly how the exhibition rights must be priced according to the specifications of the bill, what changes are forbidden, and what arrangement of prices and percentage terms will be within the law "are matters of considerable doubt that have never made explicit," he declared. "To impose such uncertainties and risks of fine and imprisonment on the innumerable transactions of the motion picture industry seems intolerable," he observed.

"No one quarrels with the avowed purposes of this act," he concluded. "Everyone wants to see better and finer motion pictures exhibited, and it is not surprising that this purpose is widely endorsed. There is nothing in the Neely bill that prohibits the showing of the most objectionable motion pictures or that will require the showing of the finest pictures. It is merely an uncertain but drastic bill to regulate wholesale prices and commercial transactions between the wholesale dealers and the retail dealers in the motion picture business that is likely to produce quite unexpected and devastating results. It is offered as a legislative patent medicine to cure all the ills of the motion picture industry, but it contains a slow poison as its active ingredient."

MANY ASK TIME TO ADDRESS HEARING

Both House and Senate committees were being swamped this week with requests for time to testify at the hearings Monday on the Neely block booking bill and the Neely affiliated theatre divorce bill.

At the Senate committee, where hearings on the theatre divorce measure are scheduled for May 16th, it was said that adequate time to present their cases will be allotted to the film companies but that no decision has been reached as to the division of time among other parties.

The House Interstate Commerce committee, which is to begin hearings next Monday on the block booking bill, already is foreseeing interminable hearings if all applications for time are granted. It is now seeking to have representatives from various groups and areas get together and agree upon a single spokesman.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Looking At It From This Corner

This year the cooling plant is not being depended upon to carry as much of the load in cajoling summer business. That would be the reaction in the field, according to where this department has inquired. Now that satisfactory cooling units are found in every kind of an establishment, the theatre's "exclusive" is gone, Round Tablers maintain. And with it, any expectation of filling the house with folks who come in just to escape the heat.

Little alarm is felt because of it, by the way, at least among the boys who depend as usual upon showmanship and hard work to sell their shows.

Hard work, incidentally, is about the answer offered by Harry Mandel for the week-to-week job being done by the RKO theatremen. The circuit slogan is "keep pounding" says the ad head, with every encouragement from headman John J. O'Connor to make the pounding mean something.

Budgetary restriction is not allowed to hamstring the manager, Mandel points out. Money is spent liberally for promotion. That would be indicated between the lines in last week's story on the drive recently completed by the RKO-men in the Greater New York area. Nothing spectacular or earth-shaking is required. The managers are expected to "do something" on each change to keep up boxoffice momentum. Evidently, they do.

This column fails to enthuse over exploitation contests inviting patrons to serve as amateur motion picture critics. If the industry is to be consistent in its arguments on the negative effect of motion picture criticism, it is hardly in keeping that theatremen be encouraged to make that criticism more important.

For his revival date on "Hell Below" at the FPC Capitol, Guelph, Ontario, Martin Simpson planted a poster alongside a street excavation. Copy was to the effect that the crowds were digging up the streets in their anxiety to get to the theatre. Reporting the stunt, Simpson writes it was "as old as the hills, but it did cause the natives to talk."

No idea is ever to be penalized at the boxoffice for age. On the contrary, that factor often is the reason for its success.

"There are no pre-sold attractions. Don't get the idea that a date and sig. cut attached to a pressbook ad will do the job for you. Every picture must have your local contribution of effort in order to deliver the maximum grosses.

"Let's get back into the showbusiness. The old tried and true proven methods still get money. Use them. Your job of selling does not end with the newspapers, radio, screen trailers and lobby display."

—From EVERT R. CUMMINGS, division manager, in "Broadcaster", Tri-States Theatres circuit organ.

Evidently there is pay-dirt in exploiting Columbia's "Blondie On a Budget." For the date at Alex Manta's Bucklen, in Elkhart, Ind., Manager Leo Haney sold the tiein to nearly every store in town appealing to family trade. The "budget" slant was plugged elaborately and numerously, especially in the best windows along the main business street. Tieup stills and theatre credits were conspicuous.

Haney reports the picture outgrossed all other previous dates in the same series.

Cover of the campaign on "Geronimo" received from the Rialto, Missoula, Mont., reads "presented by the staff." Inside, and neatly typed, are set down the names and positions of the entire personnel. The manager is Eddie Sharp. Must be a nice lad to work for.

Posted by Round Tabler Don Johnson immediately above his desk, in letters bold and challenging, is a sign reading: "A Fortnighter every Fortnight. A Quarter-Master every Quarter. Johnson's apt slogan is another good way of saying that the entrants most often represented in the Fortnights have the best chance of landing on top.

(Above) Jacked-up car with motor turning was planted in lobby of the Fox, Atlanta, by Tommie Read, on contest in which the "jalopy" was given for best guess on how many miles one of the wheels would turn in a nine-day, 12-hour a day period. 18,000 entries were reported by the Round Tabler.

Unique Novelty Ads Stressed by Krendel

As a supplement to his newspaper advertising in Hamilton, Ontario, Dan Krendel, Famous Players Canadian district manager, reports a number of attractive novelties to call quick attention to his attractions. For "Music in My Heart" at the Tivoli, for instance, Krendel made up a one-fold step throwaway, cover displaying a reverse red heart carrying the title, and headed by top line reading, "Posi-Tivoli, the surprise musical," etc. Body of folder when opened displayed advertising for the date.

On "Pinocchio," Dan used a cardboard figure of a mailman with mailbag, the latter slit for a small envelope reading, "A little letter with a big message for you inside." Removed and opened, letter inside addressed to the kiddies, called attention to the picture at the Capitol. Krendel goes strong for die-cut ideas, such as one for "It's a Date" made up in the form of a date pad, with copy on reverse side. Another that attracts is a cardboard folder with wings to be folded back so that a calendar for the month carrying theatre advertising can be placed to stand upright.

Seymour's Whisker Club Plugs "Grapes of Wrath"

Ten days ahead of "Grapes of Wrath" at the Erie, Hugo, Okla., Manager Dwight Seymour started a Whiskers Club. Contestants pledged themselves not to shave until after the contest held on the stage on opening night. Each entrant was required to wear a special three-inch button explaining his extra-hirsute adornment. Winner received a free shave and razor. Local papers carried the story on page one with the wire story picked up by papers all over the state.

For outside ballyhoo, Seymour dug up an aged jallopy, lettered it appropriately, had the conveyance furnished with odds and ends of household goods, as in the picture. The car covered an area of 60 miles, with two boys in costume in command, stopping off at county schools to distribute literature and talk on the picture. Special discount for groups of 15 or more students were allowed, which Dwight reports as bringing in two complete houses for a special morning show.

Lloyd Ties Druggists To "Dr. Cyclops" Promotion

The series of contests put on by Walter Lloyd for his "Dr. Cyclops" campaign at the Allyn, Hartford, Conn., included the cooperation of all druggists in the county for two questions-and-answers program over WNBC, based on the picture. Prizes were given for the best answers to the question, "The time you felt smallest in life." Other radio tieins were a song naming idea, a diamond story contest, and another sponsored by a furniture company in which prizes were given for the quickest post card answers to questions having to do with the attraction.

Lloyd had Western Union make up special wires for bulletin boards of large plants, factories, insurance companies, etc. He also had a man in costume on the streets for ballyhoo, stuffed magazines and out of town papers with heralds.

"A PIECE OF STRING"

The folks in Holyoke, Mass., are still chuckling about it and the trailers at the Victory never commanded such attention, according to Manager George Laby, who did it all with a piece of string, and successfully enough to bring in a tremendous opening day.

As patrons entered the theatre, they were given strings about 10 inches long. Nothing was said in explanation unless information was requested, when ushers advised patrons to hold on to string and to watch the screen. Then followed the trailer, reading:

"Attention, Please. As you entered this theatre you were given a piece of string. Please remove it from your pocket or purse. Tie it around the index finger of your left hand!" (Next frame was picture of hand with string tied around index finger.) "Now let that be a reminder not to miss this big triple hit show starting Sunday. Here are some previews of this great show."

Laby reports much word of mouth on every spill, patrons coming out with the string tied around their fingers. Laughter greeted the frame showing the picture of the hand.

Cohen Ties Organizations To Date on "My Son, My Son"

Batting for George Freeman, at Loew's Poli, Springfield, Mass., Louis Cohen pointed at leading local organizations by holding a screening for women leaders of PTA, Motion Picture Council, etc. Each clubwoman attending pledged five phone calls to friends and also stressed the value of the attraction at various meetings. Cohen had announcements made at a father-and-son dinner and at local colleges.

Book stores were tied in for window and counter displays and radio contest arranged for most famous sons. For street attention, Lou put out a man carrying giant reproduction of the book.

Boys and Girls Run Around On Powell's "Shop" Stunt

While at the Victory, Holyoke, Mass., Bill Powell had the local high school kids of both sexes in a dither on a number stunt for "Shop Around the Corner." Different color heralds, for boys and girls, were passed around. Youngsters were asked to compare numbers on heralds with couples finding matching numbers, admitted as guests, the stunt controlled by issuing 10 sets of the same numbers.

For the same date, Bill ran small one-column ads reading, "Wanted, young men and women to join the Blind Date Club. Headquarters at the Shop Around the Corner. Phone (theatre number)." The response was terrific, the Round Tabler reports.

Special Kid Shows

For "Gulliver's Travels," at Schine's New Paris, Paris, Ky., Ed May promoted the superintendent of schools to allow children to attend special morning show, accompanied by teachers and held at 9:30. Only stipulation was that pupils had to be back in class by 11:30. On his Donald Duck Easter kid party, May obtained easter rabbit and colored egg candies plus door prizes. Party started at noon to allow for stage games, etc. Both shows broke all records for kid shows, May reports.

Local "Seventeen" Winner Appears on Dallas Date

Selling "Seventeen" at the Rialto, Dallas, as the Southwestern premiere, Manager Louis Charninsky and Interstate publicist, Francis Barr, arranged for the local winner of Paramount's national contest on the picture to make a "personal," the angle being heavy for added publicity to follow up the original newspaper contest. In addition, special National Screen trailer on the winner's activities in Hollywood was shown just before her introduction. Other local contestants were guests for the occasion, arriving in parade formation in 60 taxicabs.

For the world premiere of "Shooting High," with Gene Autry present, Louie and Francis tied the event in with the local Spring Horse Show, with local horse enthusiasts on hand at the airport to greet the star, who later appeared on KRLD to be interviewed by the radio editor of the Times-Herald. At the premiere, a broadcast was put on from the lobby, service staff dressed in costume and cowboy singers worked the lobby to entertain the waiting crowd.

County School Tieup Lucrative for Nelson

Tieup that netted Glenn Nelson at the Harris in Findlay, Ohio, much newspaper and word-of-mouth publicity was that arranged for "Pinocchio" with the cooperation of Superintendent of County Schools.

Students of five schools attended a special showing morning before opening day, thus landing stories in paper ahead and follow-up day he opened. Special bannered busses conveyed the children to the theatre. Since the respective schools had to pay transportation company for the extra trip, Nelson offered to admit free all teachers accompanying the children, kids paying the usual 10-cent admission.

Kempkes, Redmond Promote High School "Sneak Days"

A lot of extra business is being gathered this year by the Bonham, Fairbury, Nebr., through senior high school classes in the drawing area on what is known as "Sneak Day" or "Picnic Day," when the students elect some larger city to celebrate the advent of Spring.

Well in advance, with Manager T. J. Kempkes, Jimmy Redmond, ad head, worked out a plan that included cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce. First, the theatremen mailed letters, signed by Kempkes, to 180 different presidents of senior classes, letters extolling the virtues of Fairbury as a place to picnic. Also stressed was the appeal of the theatre as a spot to wind up the day. As an extra inducement, special admission rates were offered to the classes in a group.

Second was another selling letter from the theatre to superintendents of the schools, in turn followed by a letter from the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, tieing in with the theatre's communications and offering the city's facilities to make the visitors to home. The Chamber of Commerce is behind the idea to the extent of underwriting a good part of the mailing costs. The theatre has also promoted free ice cream and soft drinks, although this is not mentioned in the letters.

Sufficient acceptances already are on hand to make the work worthwhile, writes Redmond, who expects that by the middle of the month from 70 to 80 parties will be scheduled, including theatre attendance. Cost to the theatre amounts to less than ten dollars.

Hershfield Ties Cadets To Contest On "Culver"

Smart promotion for "Spirit of Culver" at the Riviera, Chattanooga, Tenn., was executed by Manager Samson Hershfield, wherein the best-drilled cadets from local schools competed on the stage for the two main prizes. Entrants were given a rigid manual-of-arms drill, the judges being army officers from the nearby Fort Oglethorpe. Winner was given a loving cup, the runner-up, a term pass to the theatre.

Hershfield cracked the dailies on the stunt, with a three-column layout of the finals, showing the boys on stage, in action, and the manager presenting the trophy to the winner.

Harris Ties Ballplayer To "My Son" Engagement

Utilizing the element of local pride in a favorite son, Loew publicist Milt Harris, for the engagement of "My Son, My Son," at Loew's Stillman, Cleveland, arranged the timely presentation of a trophy to Bob Feller, ace pitcher of the Cleveland Indians at the team's first Sunday home game.

The Award was made at League Park before an unusually large opening day crowd and with the team members assembled at home plate, His Honor the Mayor made the presentation reading the inscription: "My Son, My Son. Cleveland is proud of you." Stunt was covered by radio and newspapers.

Six Stores Cooperate On Spring Style Show

One of the outstanding business and social events of the season in Fulton, Ky., a spring style show was put over successfully by Manager Hiram M. Meeks on the stage of the Malco Fulton with the cooperation of six leading merchants. Models were selected from among society matrons and high school girls, who participated in a tieup made with the Junior Woman's Club for the benefit of the local girl scouts.

Stage was set in Spring garden scene with picket fence as background and spring flowers intertwined. Tulips were set along the bottom. Archway, center, was set to allow models to enter, garden chairs and rock garden lending further atmosphere. Music was supplied by popular orchestra and in between the style showings, specialty numbers were presented. Papers gave generous publicity in news and society columns with stores running window announcements and tieing in with the advertising.

Ties Mayor to "Sidewalks"

His local Mayor being one of the officials present in New York on Paramount's party to city heads of towns named London, on behalf of "Sidewalks of London," Manager Bill Trudell tied the date in with the newsreel shots showing the visitors at the New York premiere. The theatreman invited the Mayor and City Council to see the special shots, arranging for the newspapers to cover the event with a four-column shot and caption.

National Music Week Celebrated by May

Support of the entire Paris, Ky., school system on behalf of National Music Week was obtained by Manager Ed May, at Schine's New Paris, school superintendent proclaiming the event and calling it to the attention of students and parents. A series of benefits sponsored by the music departments was held on the stage in which participated the high school concert band, glee clubs, quartets, dance soloists, American Legion drum and bugle corps.

Announcements were made in advance in classrooms and at assemblies, school bulletin boards carried film programs and each day's activities, and parades held day ahead and on opening night were headed by the high school marching band and Legion drum and bugle corps.

Zalesney Hosts at "Pinocchio" Breakfast

M. F. Zalesney of the West Theatre, Trinidad, Colo., has devised a novel manner of getting "Pinocchio" before all the school children of his town by inviting teachers and school principals to an early morning "Pinocchio" breakfast at the theatre and a private screening of the picture.

Through the cooperation of the superintendent of the schools, teachers attended a 7 A. M. screening of "Pinocchio" at the West theatre and were served breakfast promoted by Mr. Zalesney and his assistant, Henry Westerfield, from the local bakers and coffee merchants. The whole stunt was costless.

Blieden Covers Local Poles On Language Picture Date

How to go about exploiting an all-talking Polish picture is described by Manager Mel Blieden, Forsythe, East Chicago, Ind., reporting on the attraction, "Niedorajda." Heralds were distributed house-to-house in Polish neighborhoods and at Polish churches the Sunday ahead. One-sheets and snipes in windows and tacked to street poles.

Post cards were addressed to a list obtained from the Polish National Alliance, advertising stressed in the local Polish paper which also ran feature stories and art. Publicity in English papers was featured by comment in local movie columns. In addition, Blieden covered radio with a series of announcements on a popular Polish Hour, had Polish clergymen plug the date in the churches, tied in with distributor of Polish papers to stuff the heralds in all language papers throughout the entire section. Personal contacts were made with Polish boy and girl scout troops, the Alliance, and all Polish fraternities.

Golden Ties "Pinocchio" To Local Shrine Circus

For a full week ahead of his opening of "Pinocchio" at the RKO Palace in Rochester, Round Tabler Jay Golden promoted officials of the Shrine Circus and succeeded in having all peanuts sold during the week, distributed in imprinted envelopes. Golden figures he got his message before approximately 50,000 people.

Special serialization of the picture was run in cooperating paper two weeks in advance and a morning matinee for kids was held, coupons worth five cents being run in the paper and paid for by them, entitling children to admissions. Department store organized a special department of "Pinocchio" accessories which was exploited in a three-quarter page ad. Street bally consisted of lads in character masks, who also cavorted atop marquee and greeted children in the lobby.

Teaser Campaign for "Oz" Aids Stockholm Opening

For the Sweden premiere of "Wizard of Oz" at the Rigoletto, Stockholm, much weight was put behind a teaser campaign engineered by Walter Fuchs, M-G-M exploiteer, around the "Oz" in the title. Using a prominent Swedish actor as speaker, Fuchs put together a teaser trailer which played on the title in various ways, such as "Between Ozselves, I say Oz is a colOZal film," etc. The newspaper layouts followed the same idea, copy asking questions about the picture, with "OZ" emphasized, as were posters billed over the city.

Rainbow theme was emphasized in the lobby and ticket booth decorated in an emerald castle effect with cashiers in costume. Small boys dressed as Munchkins wearing papier-mâché masks played hit tunes on children's musical instruments and ushers were costumed in keeping. At the premiere, a special fairy-tale booklet was distributed, the booklet also used by the provincial theatres for the date.

Since the remaining Fortnights in the Second Quarter cover the fertile Spring period, continued keen competition among a spreading number of theatremen may be looked for. Headquarters has no way of knowing whether the continued present pace will be maintained. But it is safe to say that a great number of entrants who have already scored in the Quarter will continue to send in their material to insure top consideration in the Quarter-Master ratings.

Contests Feature 'Edison' Advance

Feature and contests tied to advertising are stressed in recent campaigns on "Young Tom Edison," an outstander being the three-day Mickey Rooney Leap Year Proposal put on with one of the papers in Newark, N. J., for the date at Loew's by Al Lippe, publicist. Unmarried girls under 25 were invited to write their proposals in not more than 100 words. Two main cash prizes were given for the best, with theatre tickets for the runners-up.

At the Kentucky, Danville, Ky., Bill Yeakle managed two contests. The first offered guest tickets for the best essays on the picture, the schools cooperating with class bulletins to encourage the students. In his newspaper, Yeakle worked out a co-op page contest wherein a large illustration of Rooney wearing a crown as the 1940 King of the Movies was featured above the ads. Then in each ad, a segment of a duplicate illustration was shown, readers asked to reassemble the segments from the different ads to make up the original, as they would in a jigsaw puzzle. With this, entrants were required to set down the slogans of all advertisers carried in the layout.

Missing Letter Idea Clicks

A "hidden word" co-op worked well for Hiram Meeks, at the Malco Fulton, in Fulton, Ky. This was done by dropping letters out of all the ads on the page and readers invited to guess the missing letters and from them make up a sentence that would have to do with the picture. Paper also ran streamer line above the masthead and feature story as a contest builder. Meeks writes he got more favorable reaction on this from the merchants since entrants were required to read every word in the ads to qualify.

In Minneapolis, at the State, George Tharp worked out a contest on Frank Steffy's campaign wherein prizes were given for those guessing the nearest total of lamp bulbs in windows of three different chain hardware stores. Tiein posters and other copy were carried, the stores furnishing entry blanks and running newspaper ads to build the contest. Tharp reports another contest slant with one of the high schools, tickets offered for the best 50-word essays on "Why I want to see," etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ann Sheridan Voted Ideal College Date

As a buildup for Ann Sheridan in "It All Came True" at the Warner houses in Philadelphia, Ev Callow, division ad head, tied in with the freshman class of the University of Pennsylvania. Students were asked to vote upon which star they would select as their ideal date to the annual university "Shipwreck Ball," so called because the collegians were also asked who they would choose for a companion if shipwrecked.

Voting was accomplished through questionnaires listing motion picture stars and other women in the news. According to the newspaper reports, Miss Sheridan finished first. The tiein was carried by the downtown papers and the college daily for prominent handling.

Taylor Recommends College Tieins

Contacts with local colleges are always worth their weight in gold, says Charlie Taylor, ad head for the Buffalo Theatres, Buffalo, in reporting on two stunts that brought much attention to the two attractions at Shea's Buffalo and Great Lakes theatres.

For Tommy Dorsey's personal appearance arrangements were made for a delegation of University of Buffalo students to welcome him at the station and invite him to the university for Saturday morning jam session. College used Dorsey's photo with story on the front page of the school paper and in return for his visit, maestro was made "A Fellow in the National College of Swing." The presentation of the medal awarded in connection with this "degree" was photographed by the Courier-Express.

For Ann Sheridan in "It All Came True," Taylor made contacts with the students at the University of Buffalo to take up the battle started by the big eastern colleges on Ann's ability as an actress. The university paper interviewed both boys and girls and signs were made up which were carried in a pickets' parade at the college. The Courier-Express published the photograph morning the picture opened.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Patrons Record Voices In Theatre Lobby

Promoting the local Federal Recording Radio people for one of their recording machines for lobby use, Manager George French and publicist Bill Morton for "Mice and Men" at the RKO Albee, Providence, invited departing patrons to express their opinion on the picture.

Contest angle was brought in by the award of guest tickets to those who could give the title of one of the forthcoming attractions at the theatre. Patrons were given the records, thus getting picture message into homes of those playing back record of their voices.

For the dual mystery, "House of Seven Gables" and "Black Friday," theatremen purchased some cheap penknives, and imprinted in red, title letters on newspapers. Knives were then stabbed through papers and into posts about town. In addition, a dozen women's handbags were dropped on the streets, copy on card inside read: "This is one mystery you can't solve, but if you return this bag you will receive a guest ticket to," etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lee Holds Quiz Contest With Cooperating Store

For the past 15 weeks conducted successfully was the Quiz contest reported by Millard Lee, publicist at the Arcade Theatre in Lake Charles, La. Program was sponsored by a local lumber company and broadcast from theatre stage through K. P. L. C.

Presented every Wednesday at 7:30 P. M. two announcers in the audience picked contestants who answered questions for cash prizes. Program was put on weekly at an expense of 20 dollars met entirely by the sponsor.

Varied Promotions Made on 'Ehrlich'

Localizing the picture's draw in his advertising for "Dr. Ehrlich," Manager Ted Irwin, Star, Lyons, Kan., ran a number of quotes from local names in his advance to build the date. Other quotes of magazine and newspaper clippings were made up as a lobby panel, the layout stressed by cashier who handed ticket-buyers a mimeographed memo reading, "May we call your attention to the lobby displays on the one picture all Rice County will be talking about for months."

In Sharon, Pa., John Schultz registered with two contests, newspaper and radio. The former asked readers to list the five previous pictures in which Robinson appeared. The latter was tied in similarly. Letters to doctors, nurses, clubs, etc., built further interest, and for street attention, Schultz had newsboys carrying back signs for the date.

Clevelanders Plug Cigar Slant

Three column tiein ad in the News was promoted by Manny Pearlstein and Dave Bachner for the date at Warners Hipp, Cleveland, paper using a scene still from the picture to sell the classified section. Tobacco dealers throughout the sector cooperated with window streamers showing Robinson smoking a cigar, tag line reading, "I can't think without a cigar in my mouth," taken from the dialog.

The date in Millinocket, Me., was built up by Bill Johnson at the Opera House with heralds to which were appended two different stickers. Copy aimed at various levels of patronage and gauged to catch immediate attention.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Buenos Aires Store Builds "Beau Geste"

Since one of the leading stores in Buenos Aires is named "Legion Etragera" (Foreign Legion) and does one of the largest volumes of advertising in the Argentine capital, the obvious tiein on behalf of "Beau Geste" at the Cine Opera was fully realized by Manager Domingo Leone and Guillermo Fox, Paramount publicity head in that sector. Store's advertising trademark is a figure of a Legionnaire and this was used extensively in co-op plugs in addition to elaborate window displays, one a tableau taken from the picture.

Exterior of the theatre carried a 50-foot cutout of Gary Cooper. Lobby and mezzanines were given a Foreign Legion atmosphere in all decoration.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

1920 Grads See "Twenties"

Reunion of the 1920 graduating class of the Rochester, Minn., high school was put into work through the efforts of Manager Harry Salisbury, of the Time, on a tiein with "Roaring Twenties." Salisbury cooperated with the Alumni Association to invite all living members of that class to be his guests at the picture. Paper ran story and Harry displayed local paper dated 20 years back. Guest tickets were given those finding their names among the news stories.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

With the recent honors voted Vivien Leigh in Hollywood on "GWTW," Gene Curtis built up his date on "Sidewalks of London" by plugging the attraction as the feature of an Academy Award Week. This was strengthened with the addition of two Award-winning shorts, "Sons of Liberty" and "Ugly Duckling." Tieups were made with local London tie and luggage shops. Pet shop ran a window of baby ducks and poster on "Duckling."

For display on "Mill on the Floss," Manager Lew Harris, Chakeres-Fairbanks, Springfield, Ohio, worked out an old-mill animation with windmill turned by motor against background of an outdoor setting. Display on "Invisible Man" featured a panel with black background against which was placed white dickey, collar and tie, and white gloves.

To build up woman appeal on "Earl of Chicago", at the Arcade, Springfield, Mass., Manager N. T. Prager promoted a candid camera and had boy working main street two days ahead taking pictures of local girls for a lobby identification gag. Snapshots were trimmed to show only lower half to tie in with the girl with the beautiful legs whose face was never seen in the picture.

Two professional cowhands visiting in Canton, Ohio, were used by Bill Harwell for street attention on "Virginia City," the riders in full western costume, working the main streets. Lobby highlight was the rear end of a covered wagon built over the boxoffice with canvas reading: "On to Virginia City." Directional arrows carrying title were planted in prominent spots.

Lighted candles placed around the lobby were used as a contest on "Light That Failed" at the Regent, Pittsburgh, by Manager Henry Sutton. Guest tickets were awarded those guessing nearest time the candles would "fail."

Readers entering the most complete list of previous pictures in which Laughton appeared were awarded passes on a newspaper tiein made by Manager Woody Praught for "Hunchback," Chateau, Rochester, Minn. Stills from some of the pictures were run as clues in the daily follow-up. Top lobby idea displayed stills from the previous "Hunchback" with Lon Chaney in the role, patrons asked to compare the two versions.

The pressbook tiein made with International Silver for "Eternally Yours" proved especially effective for the date at the Palace, Hamilton, Ontario, since the city is the headquarters of the silver company. This enabled the theatre to promote the advertiser for special newspaper co-op advertising, counter cards, jewelry store window displays and main window of leading downtown department store, reports Bert Brown, assistant manager.

MANAGER RIBBED, BOXOFFICE JUMPS

In his school days, Joe Ryan played Willie Baxter in an amateur performance of "Seventeen", which fact was duly noted in a local column when the picture was dated at the Eastman, St. Cloud, Minn. Ryan was ribbed plenty by his patrons but, since said ribbing was done at the theatre, the Round Tabler reports a lot of extra tickets sold as a result.

In connection with the weekly cooking class conducted by the Cleveland News Home Institute, Dave Bachner of Warners' advertising department tied in by offering five pairs of guest tickets as prizes to lucky ticket holders. Each time passes were presented, theatre received a plug, in addition, each envelope of recipes given every woman contained a card on current attraction at the theatre.

With a goodly number of Finns living in his neighborhood, Sid Scott, when he played Moft's "Finland Today" at the Capitol, in Sudbury, Can., contacted ministers and head of the Finnish Relief Drive for plugs on the short. A telephone canvass of the most prominent Finnish citizens was also engaged in with special ads planted in language papers.

For "Danger on Wheels", at Loew's Globe, Bridgeport, Conn., Harry Rose tied in with a local Safety Week by promoting the police department to make up a number of traffic stanchions, copy hooking safety to the attraction at the theatre. Rose also sold co-op ads to local tire companies.

Setting his date on "Victor Herbert" right into the annual high school band contest, George Bannan, offered the stage of Schine's Van Wert, in Van Wert, Ohio, to the school for the finals. As extra inducement, Bannan gave winners copies of Victor Herbert music autographed by the stars in the picture in addition to medals promoted from the leading music store. Newspaper featured the tiein during the three weeks of the contest and George also arranged for announcements to be made in all the schools.

CHURCHES COOPERATE ON M.O.T.'S "VATICAN"

A first-time cooperation from the local Catholic churches is reported by Bill Trudell in conjunction with the showing of M.O.T.'s "The Vatican", at the Capitol, London, Ontario, the five churches distributing circulars on the date to their congregations.

Top promotion by Manager Al Singer for "Ninotchka" at the Warner Strand, Pittsburgh, was a misspelled word contest featured in a double-truck sponsored by his neighborhood paper. About 25 ads were obtained with stills and display advertising on the date featured throughout, and contest introduced in a page-one story.

Since Ed Lamoureux's birthday comes on Feb. 29, the manager of the Empire, in Windsor, Ont., sold the local paper on tiein with a birthday party at the theatre to all locals having the same natal days. Daily went strong for it running scads of publicity on the Leap Year Babies topped with a full-page of those attending. Bill Pye, Ed's assistant, promoted a birthday cake, flowers to the oldest woman and pipe for the oldest man.

On "Vigil in the Night" at Loew's Palace, Meriden, Conn., dated just before Easter, Joe Samartano promoted his local paper for a five-day voting contest for the most popular nurse in town, accompanied by daily stories and voting blanks. Winner was awarded a complete Easter ensemble presented on the stage on last night of the run. Cooperating women's store also contributed special windows and played up the tiein in all advertising.

Offering a book of thrift tickets as a prize, F. Tickell, at the Capitol in Calgary, Alberta, ran a contest recently on "Swanee River," whereby patrons were invited to write 150-word review after having witnessed the film. Another gag used was the distribution of envelopes on the outside of which was printed "Confucius Say." Inside envelope was small card with copy: "One picture is worth 10,000 words, see," etc.

Since the theatre was not allowed to run a trailer on the coming attraction during the engagement of "GWTW", Mike Chakeres reports, the manager of the Regent, Springfield, Ohio, filled in the gap for "Grapes of Wrath" with special heralds distributed after each showing. Herald was a dignified job carrying cast, critics' quotes and personal message on back cover from the manager.

To build up his date on "Eternally Yours" at the Gayety, which draws mainly from the steel mills, Don Johnson promoted a F.H.A. short entitled "Homes of Today," on which he was able to sell a double-truck to neighborhood merchants. Page banner-lines were used for the two attractions, one plugging the short, the other stressing the feature.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 139, No. 7 May 18, 1940

"BOURBON STRAIGHT"

TYCOONISH Time, which says it is a "newsmagazine", is doing some full page institutional advertising in the metropolitan press "in which the Editors of Time hope to give all the readers of this newspaper a clearer picture of the world of newsgathering . . . "

The specimen at hand presents a half page halftone of an illustration photograph posed for the purpose of representing a reporter of circa 1910 emerging from the swinging doors of "Joe's", a saloon with gas lights in the window.

"A nose for news—and a stomach for whiskey" is the display line.

The headline and the disquisition which follows purport to depict the old time reporter "who has passed to some private and personal Nirvana of his own where every typewriter has all its keys and a bottle waits at every four alarm fire."

Fresh young Time decides: " . . . since the days of the old-time reporter both men and minds have changed. The reporter of today is a better man than his predecessor. He has to be. He is better educated, better paid. Neither he nor his editor can get away with the cheap sensationalism of yesterday's Yellow Journalism—and neither of them insists on any special license to get drunk. The reporter's passport today is respected everywhere and he is expected to live up to the code of his profession."

The advertising copy appears to have been done by some agency expert who got his lore of the journalism of yesterday from stage and screen and storybooks.

Competent knowledge would not have risked resort to color-blind slurs about yellow journalism as typifying the newspapers of yesteryear, charges that reporters of yesteryear were notable mostly as alcoholics, that they were relatively illiterate.

That in terms of comparison and inference is what Time, officially in paid space, has to say of the reporters and editors who gave America a great dynamic daily press, the equal of which the world had never seen before, and of which so sadly little survives in today's patterned and routine journalism.

HAVING used the reporter of the spectacular yesterdays for the purposes of quaint illustration and flamboyant headline—"Nose for News and Stomach for Whiskey," Time's advertisement would pluck for itself the plumage of what it deems his superior successor—"better man . . . better educated, better paid". For it says, " . . . the Newsmagazine has as grist for its weekly mill all that has been found out by the world's good reporters. Sometimes these good reporters are Time's own correspondents or legmen. . . "

Of Time's own legmen all of those this observer has found in action are from Vassar, Smith or Radcliffe. Indubitably they have nice legs but, like too many of the reporters of today's first-hand journalism, they tend to depend considerably on telephone voices and other remote contacts.

That reporter who had the "stomach for whiskey" used his own nose, his own legs, and wrote his own story, even if he had to take a telegraph operator with him. He did not have to worry about a typewriter with "all its keys" because he could also do it long hand and, if need be, dictate to the wire, complete with lead, narrative and inserts as required, and it was no mere adjectival bulletin of the sort which commonly passes for "a story" today.

WITH no legs from Bryn Mawr or Vassar to aid him, the old time reporter, the customer for "Joe's Place", collected his "color" along with the rest of the facts, so his story read like it came from where it happened—because it did.

That reporter, allegedly gone to Nirvana, used reporting rather than formulae and, for instance, never had to resort to such a cooky-cutter school of writing as that which aims at implication of first hand intimacy by such phraseology as: "hot-eyed Eugene ('Goober') Cox", or "Mrs. Mary Teresa Norton . . buxom chairlady" or "Lanky (6 ft. 6 in.) Playwright Robert Emmet Sherwood", "dormousy Edward Pountney", "Moon-faced David Rockefeller" (all specimens from Time of May 13—see any issue). That's the kind of reporting that can be done off a press service photograph.

"Hoteyed—lanky—dormousy—moon-faced"—are the ill-grace notes of a rewrite man half a world away from his story and trying to beguile the reader into feeling that he is getting ringside bulletins.

Perhaps the success of the method justifies it—but the opportunity for that success would not have existed if the daily journalism of today did that superior job that Time proclaims.

The fact is that both superior reporters and superior publishers grow fewer and fewer, as newspapers become more and more the organs of the department stores, as they lose to radio advertising time and lottery devices of merchandising.

Personality, and with it character, has gone out of the publishing offices, off the editors' desk and in such fashion as the papers indicate, into the "columns".

THE best reporting job that the newspapers of America have seen for a long, long time has been turned in by a columnist, Mr. Westbrook Pegler. The story which he has been unfolding about the state of some of the internal machinery of corrupt labour leadership, and about the nature of some of its personnel, is rather more of a scoop, a feat of reporting, than the more lauded performances of war coverage. It took no reporter to find the war, but it took a considerable reporter to find the facts in the smelly picture cited. Mr. Pegler was, incidentally, his own leg man, too, with no hearsay about records and documents.

There are not enough of the likes of Mr. Pegler to go around, so perhaps he just has to be syndicated.

The Pegler performance might be considered a certain sort of challenge to at least eight publishers, eight managing editors, eight city editors and any number of reporters in the metropolitan district of New York, alone, and some part of the story was and is in that once journalistically competent town of Chicago, too. What kind of daily journalism let that one sleep around—and who is following up now? There's a great chance for that "better paid, better educated" journalism that Time admires so much. And about Time, itself—there's nothing in its franchise to prevent its printing a story its editors never read in print ahead of it. They have typewriters with all the keys on them.

Perhaps they ought to send over to "Joe's" for a bottle.

—Terry Ramsaye

This Week in the News

Sweetens "Grapes"

AFTER seeing the advance trailer on Fox's "Grapes of Wrath," last Friday, Franklin E. Ferguson, of the Whitney theatre in Hamden, Conn., concluded: "The world is full of enough trouble as it is."

So when "Grapes" began its two-day run last Wednesday, at the Whitney, it had an "added" ending. The manager remembered that a recent Paramount newsreel also showed scenes similar in locale to those in the picture, but that the newsreel showed a "land boom in the Dust Bowl" with happy farmers returning home.

The new "Ferguson finish" began immediately after Twentieth Century-Fox's "Grapes" faded out. On the screen were flashed the words: "Just a minute, Mr. Steinbeck, ('Grapes' author) and you, too, Mr. Ford (director)." It was then explained that "a new added, happy, encouraging, yet truthful ending" would be shown. After "a little pat on the back" was given to the author and director, the trailer presented the newsreel report on present Dust Bowl conditions.

Patrons telephoned the theatre, it was reported, to find out when the picture went on "just so they could see the new ending," as it was advertised in newspaper amusement pages.

Fire on Ickes Fees

EFFORTS of the U. S. Interior Department of Harold Ickes to exact heavy tolls from Hollywood producers for the privilege of setting up their cameras on "location" in the public domain appeared this week to be headed for Congressional investigation.

Acting on a resolution introduced April 24th by Senator Henry F. Ashurst (Dem., Ariz.), second ranking member, the Senate Public Lands Committee on Thursday, May 9th, voted to make a favorable report on the Ashurst proposal for an inquiry into the question of picture-making on the public lands.

It was indicated that the resolution would be brought up in the Senate for consideration at the earliest opportunity, and it was confidently forecast by Washington supporters that the probe, for which the Committee would be given an expense fund of $6,000, would be approved.

Following the issuance by the Interior Department of a schedule of fees, running up to $500 a day, to be exacted from Hollywood producers desiring to use the public lands as locales for their features, Senator Ashurst attacked Secretary Ickes, declaring that Mr. Ickes had exceeded his authority.

An indication of Senate support for his resolution was seen in the action taken a few days thereafter, when, at Mr. Ashurst's prompting, it adopted an amendment to the Federal Security Agency appropriation bill prohibiting the Interior Department from imposing fees for the taking of pictures on public lands other than the National Parks which, by Congressional action, are under Interior control.

Shirley Quits

SHIRLEY TEMPLE has retired (at least temporarily) from the screen and a new champion Money Making Star will be selected this year by the nation's exhibitors.

Although still leading all women performers Miss Temple dropped in 1939 from first place, where she had reigned for several years, to fifth in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME Money Makers star poll. For $300,000 her contract, which had over a year to run, was bought up last week by Twentieth Century-Fox. Since 1934 the little star has grossed about $20,000,000 for the company.

Shirley's mother announced that she felt her daughter had not enjoyed the life a girl of her age should and also that the studio was not selecting stories suitable to her daughter's talents and appeal. A one-picture-a-year film contract would now be considered, according to Mrs. Temple.

Frank Orsatti, Hollywood talent agent, and also engaged in "Phonovision," nickel-in-the-slot motion pictures, said that Shirley Temple would appear on network radio programs, beginning next fall, after she has "enjoyed a vacation." No personal appearances are planned.

TelevisionNameTrouble

TELEVISION, like motion pictures in one period of development, is having "name trouble." The film industry at one time wanted to find a better name for its product—photoplay and hundreds of others were suggested. But it's still "movies." Now television wants to change its name.

The motive behind the desire to change "television" to something else springs from the wish of the Radio Corporation and the radio industry in general to "tieup" television more closely with radio. RCA-NBC favors the name "radiovision," first introduced by Lee De Forest. Another objection raised against "television" as a word is that it is "too long and inaccurate." The New York Times is reviewing television programs under the heading "Telepictures in Review." "Video" also is used.

Music Hall Records

NOW THAT the official gross receipts of "Rebecca's" six weeks' run at New York's Music Hall have finally been computed, duly entered in the books and certified, it can be established, for the record, that while it was held for a sixth week, for the longest run at that theatre, exceeding "Snow White's" five weeks, in 1938, "Snow White" still holds the record for gross admissions for one picture in one run at the Music Hall, as witness:

	"SNOW WHITE"	"REBECCA"
1st Week	$108,000	$110,700
2nd Week	110,000	95,800
3rd Week	112,000	87,800
4th Week	111,000	86,700
5th Week . . .	96,000	83,600
6th Week		67,900
TOTALS	$537,000 (a)	$532,500 (b)

Bonded Directors

SAMUEL BRONSTON, "Jimmy" Roosevelt's co-producer of proposed features for United Artists release, on Tuesday laid before Hollywood the unique proposition of having directors put up bonds to ensure their finishing a picture assignment within the budget prescribed.

Leaders of the Screen Directors Guild showed immediate interest, although they were noncommittal, except for their observation that Mr. Bronston "might have something there." James P. McGowan, oldtime director and now executive secretary of the Guild, said he would confer with Mr. Bronston to determine specifications of the plan.

Hollywood's general reaction was that the plan would work only with producing directors, that is, those who, in addition to guiding work on a set, also carry on actual production activities.

Hollywood's directors, for the most part, have long felt that they should have more voice earlier in the formulation of production plans, and more to say in the final drafting of the script.

If directors post bonds guaranteeing not to exceed budgets, protection for them against excessive costs through cast conditions, delays in story drafting, fixed charges and the like, would have to be in their contracts, it was said.

London Recovery

CABLES arriving in New York Wednesday afternoon from London's Wardour Street film row reported that, despite the intensity of the European war situation, the motion picture industry there was operating comparatively normally. Cinemas over the week-end, following the Nazis' "blitzkrieg" into Holland and Belgium, suffered depleted audiences, but by midweek were recovering, except theatres in the West End, where business remained virtually at a standstill.

Theatre closings were reported likely only in the event of bombings.

Production resumed, and Two Cities Films, Ltd., a British company, placed "Freedom" in work, on Wednesday, for RKO Radio, Mario Zampi producing, and Anthony Asquith directing.

The British Board of Trade, meanwhile, is maturing plans for legislation for reconstructing the British film business under the emergency.

In the United States, foreign film policies of American distributors were on a day-to-day basis as a result of the "total" war. See page 18.

Goldwyn-Gallup Poll

SAMUEL GOLDWYN, after his campaign of many years against double bills, believes that he has found a way to determine just what the public wants.

The press was summoned Wednesday morning to Mr. Goldwyn's suite in the towers of the Waldorf-Astoria to hear the annoucement from the producer that Dr. George Gallup's American Institute of Public Opinion would conduct a nationwide poll on the question of "double features."

Although Mr. Goldwyn said he "had offered to pay for the poll out of his own pocket," Dr. Gallup decided that double billing of motion pictures was a question of sufficient public interest to warrant an Institute poll, which is supported solely by newspapers subscribing for its services.

Dr. Gallup said he believed that the industry-Department of Commerce figure of 85,000,000 weekly attendance was "substantially exaggerated."

The motion picture poll will be conducted by the Institute's 1,100 investigators and perhaps as many as 30,000 persons will be questioned. It was emphasized that it was the cross-section and not the total number questioned that mattered in the question of accuracy in polls. It will take about two months to complete. The usual Gallup political poll is conducted in from ten days to two weeks.

Even if the poll goes against his opinions, Mr. Goldwyn's mind is made up: "I am not going to change my policy."

No Vaudeville

EFFORTS of the American Guild of Variety Artists to begin a "bring-back-vaudeville" campaign, by a series of all-vaudeville shows Sundays in a New York theatre, have been dropped by the Guild, because, its officials charged this week, they were balked by the stagehands' and musicians' unions.

The plan, as suggested by the Guild several weeks ago, would have seen the use of at least one New York theatre, on or near Broadway and heretofore used exclusively for films, for an all-star, all-vaudeville show, on "four or five" Sundays; the money to go to a "war chest" for the promotion of vaudeville. After these shows, and with the monies derived therefrom, the guild would have presented the circuits of the country with a special plan for use of vaudeville shows in theatres now using films only.

Sheila Kennedy was delegated by the Guild to gather statistics for presentation of a special plan to the circuits, and to enlist the cooperation of the stagehands and the musicians, for the Sunday shows. The money from these shows was to be for the vaudeville campaign only, the musicians and stagehands to donate their services gratis. It is reported they balked at the idea.

The Guild, even while meeting on Wednesday with circuit heads on a proposed union contract for all vaudeville players, was "still going ahead" with altered plans for vaudeville's revival.

Monogram's Position

MONOGRAM is in a favorable position, the management announced in Hollywood Friday, May 10th, and W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, denied reports that Pathe or any other group would take over the company, or that there would be any top personnel changes. He said the company had money to continue production and other operations. Franchise holders purchased an additional $100,000 in stock, the money being used to pay off loans, and the Guaranty Trust Company has loaned the company $300,000. All other bank loans have been paid in full.

He said that the weekly gross business of the company was higher now than at any other time in its history, and that the only drop in Monogram income from abroad had been through the devaluation of the pound sterling. Pathe of London, Monogram's English distributor, pays in pounds for pictures in advance of delivery.

Western production has been eliminated from Monogram's own activities, though the company will release 24 westerns. Scott R. Dunlap will concentrate on the 26 features on the 1940-41 schedule.

1,250 COAST THEATRES AGREE TO CONCILIATION ON 'BROAD PRINCIPLES'

Distributors Agree to Cooperate in Operation of Machinery to Settle Disputes Set Up by Western Distributors

Machinery is virtually assured for the conciliation of differences among independent exhibitors and between them and distributors in the states of California, Nevada, Washington, Idaho, Oregon and Alaska, from one end of the Pacific Coast to the other. This development was made certain last weekend by the action of 277 exhibitors, representing 1,250 theatres, at the first convention of the comparatively new Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, in the Ambassador hotel at Los Angeles. It was further assured by statements from the majors of their willingness to participate. (Photos on page 11.)

The Conference is the consolidation of member organizations, the ITO of Southern California and Arizona, and similar groups in Northern California, Nevada, Washington, Northern Idaho and Alaska and Oregon.

Conciliation Is Basis

The Southern California ITO, under Robert H. Poole, has successfully arbitrated disputes the last two years. The same principle now is being extended through the other Pacific States, with a new interpretation, given Monday night in Los Angeles by Mr. Poole: "The entire platform of principles expressing the PCCITO's aims will be a broad interpretation of the platform of conciliation." The conciliation program itself was explained in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, last week, on page 13. Mr. Poole, Monday, had been commissioned by the Conference's trustees to formulate an expression of aims.

Still undivulged, however, for public consumption, were all but one of 23 resolutions introduced at a secret closing session. Openly submitted at an early session was a resolution vigorously condemning double bills.

Mr. Poole left Los Angeles Wednesday night by train for Washington to testify at the Neely bill hearings before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, where he was to represent the Conference and the ITO of Southern California and Arizona. Hugh Bruen, trustee, was to follow him Saturday. The action was authorized at a week end trustee meeting. It had been generally understood at the convention that the plan under consideration would send Mr. Poole and one member from each state unit to the Neely hearings to put the 277 independent owners of the 1,250 theatres on record against the passage of the bill. This would have resulted in the largest single block of independent expression ever voiced against block booking legislation.

Sales Managers To Cooperate

The convention brought out that the distributors were willing to cooperate with the independents on their extended conciliation, Robert H. Poole, executive secretary, announcing in opening the convention that general sales managers of all distributor companies had agreed to conciliation.

Over the weekend, it was announced that L. O. Lukan, chairman of the organization's committee on dual bills, would tour the country to establish contact with other exhibitor organizations and Parent-Teachers' organizations, to eliminate double features.

Mr. Poole, said, at the same time, that the recommendations and resolutions on trade practices, made at the convention, would be presented to distributors, shortly, "in a conciliatory manner."

The resolution against double bills was introduced by Mr. Lukan, who said:

"I have heard the theory advanced that double bills encourage independent production. What does that mean?—to encourage production of 'dualers', or Class D pictures? I spent many years with the old First National Pictures, and we encouraged independent producers, but only in their efforts to make Class A pictures. Nobody deliberately planned to make poor pictures, as is now done, to supply the second picture for a two feature program. . . ."

Cites Objections to Duals

Mr. Lukan declared long programs tired mind and body, curtailing attendance of adults as well as children. He said the doubling of features cheapened both, and caused the public to lose the sense of picture value. He said the doubling of a strong and weak picture lessened the value of the good picture, that increased operating lengths, without increased operating revenue, harmed the exhibitor, and that selling of two features for a single low admission price was faulty merchandising.

"I believe the other component parts of this business will benefit by a single bill policy," said Mr. Lukan, "and that the distributors' pleas for proper terms and playing time will become realized, and that the exhibitors' opportunities for making money will be greatly enhanced."

He related that he had succeeded in having a petition for single bills signed by every independent theatre owner in Seattle, but that an affiliated circuit had squashed the movement by refusing to cooperate.

In opening the convention, on last Wednesday, Mr. Poole emphasized the necessity for conciliation.

"Many things have happened," he said, "to bring this industry to a crisis, and we have had so many difficulties in every branch of the industry, that we have reached a saturation point. General sales managers, in shifting about from company to company, have strived to build up new records in their new affiliations, and, in doing so, have built up a system of pernicious practices. Such a point has been reached that we believe they themselves would like to change these conditions.

"But," he continued, "if we changed these conditions suddenly, we would have a complete production catastrophe.

"What the Pacific Coast Conference proposes, and we are doing it, is to provide a vehicle for calm, orderly procedure in bringing about changes that will benefit the entire industry. We desire to have an honest, constructive deal for everyone, including the little fellows. We propose to weld this industry's branches into a harmonious setup. We have set up a machine, through which harmonious progress can be achieved, fear of retaliation or anything else will be abolished, conditions under which exhibitors and distributors will have greater revenues, will be created, and the motion picture industry will go forward."

Speaks at Banquet

At a banquet given to the Conference members Wednesday night by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, Mr. Poole repeated his comments on conciliation, and pledged that the organization would strive for harmony among all industry branches. His talk was in reply to one by Y. Frank Freeman, of Paramount, and president of the AMPP, who noted that the industry had grown to its present stature without outside interference, and that all elements should work together.

At the banquet Walter Wanger told the exhibitors that quality, rather than quantity, was the key word for production in the coming year. Charles Skouras, of Fox West Coast circuit, warned that quality pictures were dependent on exhibitor cooperation, meaning increased playing time and more playing time for percentage pictures, a wire from Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, of New York, was read. offering the Pacific Coast Conference the aid of his organization.

Goldwyn Lauds Move

At the Friday session of the convention, when the exhibitors resolved against double bills and instructed its trustees, under Mr. Lukan, to draft methods of eliminating duals, they had before them a telegram from Samuel Goldwyn, independent producer, urging the organization to "lead the way to restoring motion pictures to the popularity and importance they once had with the public."

"Your stand against double features," said Mr. Goldwyn, "will have a powerful effect in changing the course of the entire industry, as it faces its greatest crisis, in decreasing audiences and restricted markets abroad, making production of outstanding pictures virtually impossible unless exhibition conditions change. The production of quality pictures is vitally endangered by double features. The public is certainly in rebellion against them. If the producer, exhibitor, and public do not want double features—why have them?"

If the Neely Bill were passed, motion picture companies could not afford "big" productions, and MGM for one would have to cut its production 25 per cent, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, told the Thursday session. He said "a majority of those favoring the Neely Bill do not have a dime at stake in this business."

Studios under such a law could not afford

RODGERS, KUYKENDALL URGE UNITY

to experiment with series such as "The Hardy Family" and "Dr. Kildare," Mr. Rodgers asserted, adding, "Moreover, I couldn't afford to send a salesman 1,200 miles or so to see one picture."

(Hearings on the Neely Bill started Monday in Washington. See page 14.)

Commends Code Contacts

Mr. Rodgers praised the contacts between distributors and exhibitors afforded by the negotiations on a fair trade practice code last year. He pledged cooperation of MGM to the Conference plan for conciliation, thus:

"Whatever means you adopt to better trade relations, our company will be glad to cooperate with you, on either conciliation or arbitration."

Of the slackened foreign market Mr. Rodgers declared that the result would be better MGM product. "We now spend more than at any time in the history of our company," he said, "and to pare costs at this time is impossible."

Mr. Rodgers remarked that the many "persecution suits" eventually would affect exhibitors. He asked why the industry had been prevented from putting into effect its fair trade practice code (opposed by National Allied States Association, and ruled illegal by the U. S. Department of Justice); he praised percentage policies, as contributory to better production, and emphasized the adjustment policy of his company, adding, however:

"We don't want anyone begging for adjustment—that is not good business."

Kuykendall Attacks Jealousies

Also speaking on Thursday, Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, deplored the lack of a national fair trade practice code, assailed the petty jealousies which have obstructed harmony, and argued the distributors' contention that exhibitors had not shown enough interest in a fair practice code; pointing out that his organization had worked for such a code for five years.

Much of the problems of exhibitors would have disappeared if the distributors, earlier, had granted a 25 per cent cancellation clause, Mr. Kuykendall said. Communities would have been given freer choice in motion pictures, and some of the agitation for a Federal measure against block booking would have been eliminated, he indicated.

Mr. Kuykendall said he was disappointed at the refusal of the Justice Department to allow the writing of an industry fair practice code. He added: "I still insist that there is nothing to prevent distributors from writing into their contracts those essentials that could be of such tremendous benefit to exhibitors, and be of no harm to producer-distributor interests."

Assails Neely Bill

The exhibitor leader assailed the Neely bill: it would, he said, restrain production; it would increase the price of pictures to the exhibitor; and it is an undercover attempt at censorship. Theatre divorcement, such as Senator Matthew Neely hopes to achieve through a second bill in Congress, and for which the Government is striving, by suit, would not particularly benefit the independent exhibitor, he asserted, noting that the theatres now run by affiliated circuits in competition to the independent exhibitor, would still remain his competition; and that independent exhibitors "have found, in many instances, that 100 per cent independent opposition is much tougher than so called affiliated opposition."

Mr. Kuykendall told the Conference that admissions should be scaled according to picture; and that the present constant admission price, regardless of picture is "screwy."

Mr. Kuykendall touched on many subjects. On clearance, he remarked that it was evident that powerful buyers, with distributor consent, has set up arbitrary clearance, harming smaller exhibitors. On expenditures in studios, he asserted he did not always agree with those who claim the studios waste money. On pictures in slot machines, a development in which several companies are interested, and which will be one of the entertainment mediums of the year whose competition will be carefully chronicled by the small theatre owner, he said that if licentious pictures are used in these machines, the discredit will also fall on the small exhibitor. On growing use of non-theatrical pictures, he believed that the solution of the problem rested with the producer-distributors.

Contact with Civic Clubs

H. W. Bruen, Conference trustee, of Whittier, California, told the convention of the activities of independent exhibitors in maintaining contact with civic clubs and other organizations. Also, in passing upon the need for harmony between various parts of the industry, he remarked that he believed the distributors, as represented by Mr. Rodgers, and by Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, were sincere, in their negotiations with the exhibitor bodies, prior to the formation of the fair trade practice code last year.

J. M. Hone, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, related his experiences in winning over legislators in his state to the viewpoint of the motion picture industry, and, in so doing, averting legislation harmful to the exhibitors interests. He noted that at the 1939 session of the legislature, a two per cent tax was proposed, on personal tangible property—which would have included films and trailers. After a few sessions with legislators at the state Capitol, he succeeded in having the tax quashed, he said.

Assails Government Meddling

William Ripley, Conference trustee, from Washington, assailed meddling of Government in business. Harmony is the answer to Government threats, he indicated, adding that "The Government wants to establish some sort of regulation of our industry."

Other speakers, at various times during the convention, and at the AMPP banquet were Robert White, of Oregon; Jack Warner, and S. Charles Einfeld, of Warner Brothers; Jesse Lasky, independent producer, releasing through Warners; Edmund Grainger, Republic; Jack Gross; John K. Hilliard, chairman of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Research Council Theatre Standardization Committee; Joseph Pasternak, Universal.

It was understood that among the resolutions passed in secret session were some against non-theatrical pictures, changing of a second picture on a holdover, participation in exchange drives, demanding of percentage bookings in subsequent runs, higher percentages, and increased prices for accessories and trailers.

CHECK PAYMENTS ON SHORTS: WOOD

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, this week advised members who pay for short subjects under a weekly payment plan "to check their payments for 1938-39 short subjects against the total number of shorts actually released by the exchanges." In some instances, the exhibitor will find, he said, that the exchange did not release all the shorts sold "that they paid for, and they are entitled to a credit."

Silver Pleads For Showmanship

M. A. Silver, Warner Theatre zone manager, called for a rebirth of showmanship in the face of a threatened product shortage, at the annual spring meeting in Albany on Tuesday. Staffs of the 10 theatres in the district headed by C. A. Smakwitz were present.

Policies, bookings and exploitation plans for the summer were discussed. Mr. Silver suggested augmented selling campaigns on all exploitable pictures to maintain grosses. He said, "Let's make the public more showconscious by reviving tried and true attention-getting stunts and 'Back to Barnum Ballyhoo'." Strict economy in operations, selected shorts to avoid double bills as much as possible and drive for child attendance were also urged.

Those present included: Max Friedman, booker; Joseph Weinstein, short subject booker; J. P. Faughman, contract manager; Jules Curley, advertising manager and the following theatre managers: A. M. Roy, Strand, Albany; William Tallman, Ritz, Albany; Al La Flamme, Madison, Albany; Ed Selette, Albany; Leo Rosen, Troy; Sid Dommer, Lincoln, Troy; Jack Swartout, American, Troy; William Haynes, Stanley, Utica; Arnold Stoltz, Avon, Utica, and Jack Breslin, Utica.

A similar meeting was held last week in the Buffalo district where Ralph Crabill is district manager.

Sound Films for Schools Proposed in New York

Motion pictures have been recommended as a complement to textbooks by the Board of Superintendents of the New York City school system which suggested that sound films be shown in elementary, junior high and high school classrooms, beginning next September. The Board of Education is expected to approve the proposal.

The recommendations follow a five-year study. It has been found, according to Dr. Harold G. Campbell, Superintendent of Schools, that most schools have projectors and the necessary equipment and 16mm. films are not too expensive for classroom use. Eventually it is planned for the school system to build up its own film library.

Lazarus Resigns from Allied

Henry Lazarus, president of Allied Theatre Owners of Louisiana, has resigned from that organization and has also severed his connections with Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors.

COMMITTEEMEN RIDDLE NEELY BILL SUPPORTERS AT HOUSE HEARINGS

Club Representatives and Myers Face Lengthy Grilling; Allied Leader Urges Bill Be Viewed as a Whole

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Proponents of the Neely anti-block booking bill, including civic and women's club representatives as well as Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Association, were subjected to a heavy barrage of criticism and questioning by members of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce as hearings proceeded on the bill before that committee this week.

The Representatives took turns at embarrassing witnesses who appeared in support of the bill with attacks on what they called its "loose language" and, in the case of at least one women's club representative, with implications that her organization had been made the tool of an "organized minority" and did not represent a spontaneous public sentiment. The standard arguments in support of the bill, built around the belief that it would "allow local community selection of pictures" and that under its protection exhibitors would show only pictures acceptable to their audiences, were special targets of Congressional attack.

Witnesses who had come prepared to make concise statements of their views and answer only desultory questioning were subjected to lengthy grilling by the committeemen. After the first two days, Mr. Myers took the stand on Wednesday to urge the committee to consider the bill "as a whole" and in the light of the trade practices which it aimed to correct rather than to single out its separate provisions for attack. His statement was made after members of the committee had subjected Henry R. Atkinson of Boston to three hours of questioning, hitting most heavily at the synopsis provisions.

The hearings were to continue through the rest of the week.

75 at Opening of Hearing

In sharp contrast with the oversized crowds which had attended previous hearings, only about 75 were present when the hearings began Monday. It was the 44th attempt in Congress, all unsuccessful to date, to regulate films by Federal legislation (see page 63.)

Only four other members—Representatives E. A. Kelly (Ill.) and L. H. Boren (Okla.), Democrats, and J. W. Wadsworth (N. Y.) and Charles A. Wolverton (N. J.), Republicans—were present when, at 10 A. M., Chairman Clarence F. Lea (Dem., Cal.), declared the hearing open. Within a short time, however, a dozen other members came in, but it was noticeable that while nearly all the Republican members were present, only about a half-dozen of the Democrats showed up on the opening day.

Leading off with what she apparently expected would be merely an opening statement on behalf of the National Committee for Legislation to Abolish Block Booking and Blind Selling of Motion Pictures, of which she is chairman, with more detailed testimony to be given upon her reappearance later as representative of the national Congress of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman of Washington found herself almost immediately the target of a barrage of questions by committee members.

Harris & Ewing

Abram F. Myers, general counsel for Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, and Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, as the hearings opened.

Parries All Questions

Deftly sidestepping all questions having to do with details of industry practices, Mrs. Bannerman suggested such inquiries be directed at the exhibitors who would appear later.

Her statement was directed principally to an outline of the efforts which have been made over the last decade or more to obtain the enactment of block booking legislation which, she claimed, is supported by 33 national organizations.

Under present conditions, she explained, "the local community is at the mercy of distant Hollywood," which has "obliterated" its right to select the entertainment to be shown within it.

The opening of the exhibition market to the independent producer under the bill would help restore competitive conditions, she asserted, adding that block booking and blind selling "are the basic pillars of the economic monopoly which the Big Eight producers enjoy."

Presents Payne Fund Studies

Mrs. Bannerman, following long-established custom, presented the committee with a set of the Payne Fund studies on which proponents of the legislation have relied for much of their ammunition and, in line with the program charges of those reports, attacked the showing of "crime" pictures on children's programs or the "dualing" of them with acceptable pictures.

The witness also went into detail regarding the efforts that civic organizations have made to obtain the cooperation of the producers in elevating the moral tone of pictures, and asserted such attempts never had been successful. "The movies seem to be the only business where the customer is always wrong," she observed.

Following her statement, Mrs. Bannerman immediately was showered with questions, answering queries by Representative Wolverton, as to the New York anti-trust suit, by presenting him with a copy of the Government's complaint.

Representative Boren questioned claims of the producers that the best quality pictures were shown by the distributor-owned houses rather than the independents, Mrs. Bannerman asserting that this was due to the fact that the former had a right of selection which was denied the independents. Asked about the general quality of films, however, she said, "I think everyone admits that pictures have improved somewhat since 1934—but the trade practices still persist."

Asked by the Congressman as to the position of her organization on the question of divorce of exhibition from distribution, she said the PTA had taken no stand on that question.

Representative Carl Hinshaw (Rep., Cal.) expressed interest in that provision of the bill prohibiting the offering of films in blocks, but Mrs. Bannerman insisted there was no barrier to exhibitor buying as many pictures at a time as he desired. However, she explained, to be effective, selection must be made before the contract is signed.

Substitution Brought Up

Congressman Hinshaw called attention to a denial by the Californian PTA that it had approved the bill, the witness declaring that state the only one which has not taken such action.

Asked by Representative Herron Pearson (Dem., Tenn.) whether it is true that an exhibitor does not have to show all the pictures he buys, Mrs. Bannerman countered with the question, "Why should an exhibitor buy a whole block of pictures, maybe a number of which he does not feel appropriate?"

"Doesn't he have the right of substitution?" the Congressman persisted.

"The exhibitor himself can give the answer to that," the witness replied.

Questioned further about the New York suit by Representative Clarence J. Brown (Rep., Ohio), Mrs. Bannerman referred him to the testimony of Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, before the Neely subcommittee last month.

Asked by Congressman Oscar Youngdahl (Rep., Minn.) whether her organization made any investigation of the trade practice situation before "taking a stand on it," the witness declared, "We have experienced it for the last 20 years."

"Then you should be familiar with the type of contracts issued under the block booking system," Mr. Youngdahl suggested. "As a result of your investigation do you not know that there is a certain percentage of refusal?"

"Provided he takes a whole block," Mrs. Bannerman agreed, adding that the permissible percentage of rejections is "variable."

The Public's "Say"

"Is it your position that the public doesn't have enough say about the type of picture they shall see in the theatres?" Representative Charles A. Halleck (Rep., Ind.) inquired.

"Yes," the witness answered.

"If the public generally, by majority sentiment or vote, could determine for itself the type of pictures it would see, would the moral tone be better or worse?"

Under those circumstances, she said, it would naturally be much higher.

Raising the question of representation, Congressman Elmer J. Ryan (Dem., Minn.) pointed out that "we here in Congress have had quite a bit of experience with what are known as organized minorities. In reality, many times the groups creating an appearance of public sentiment do not represent the public. May not these uprisings on motion pictures be organized by minorities rather than the general public?"

"No," Mrs. Bannerman insisted; "I think they are quite spontaneous."

The question of how community selection would be exercised in a large city such as New York was raised by Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Dem., N. Y.), the witness explaining that in the large cities the community groups center around the schools. Selection would be aimed at the neighborhood houses, she said, rather than the "downtown" theatres, which do not have block booking.

Defends His Handiwork

Waxing rhapsodical about the importance of motion pictures in the daily life of the nation, Henry R. Atkinson of Boston told the committee they were the greatest invention "since the printing press and radio."

Mr. Atkinson explained that he was a member of the legal committee which drafted the main provisions of the Neely bill, and emphasized that he never had been retained professionally to support the legislation.

Defending his handiwork, he asserted that "if a censorship movement ever sweeps this country, which seems unlikely, it would be no substitute for this bill."

"This bill is fundamental," he declared.

"Is the local exhibitor interested in what his public wants or in his box office?" Representative Hinshaw interjected.

"They are the same thing," Atkinson retorted.

He also launched a sharp attack on Hollywood, asserting that the "American common denominator of taste is well above that of Hollywood" and that it was the low moral tone of Hollywood individuals and pictures which led to "boycotts." If the Legion of Decency abandoned its present "boycott," he said, conditions immediately would deteriorate. "The only check we can have against it is local power of selection," he explained.

The witness was asked by Representative Hinshaw about cancellations, the Congressman explaining, "I want to get at this community selection; I want to find out how these communities are going to select these pictures."

"The ultimate control of the exhibitor is through the box office," Mr. Atkinson explained. "The local exhibitor is probably going to be free to show the pictures his people want."

Some exhibitors, he asserted, are interested in building a reputation rather than in "excess profits," but cannot do so under current conditions. "At the present time, no matter what they say, the local exhibitor has to take pictures that he has contracted for blindly; under this bill he will have a synopsis."

Harris & Ewing

First witness for the proponents of the Neely bill as hearings opened before a Senate committee in Washington this week was Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, above, representing a national women's club committee to abolish block booking.

Thorough "Going Over"

Members of the committee gave Mr. Atkinson the most thorough "going over" ever experienced by a witness at a block booking hearing. After more than a half hour of testimony and questioning on Monday, he was recalled to the stand Tuesday for another two and one-half hours of examination, in which not one member of the committee came to his support.

During the questioning of the witness it became apparent that the committee was unwilling to accept what members called the "loose language" in which the bill was written or provisions which they held to be unenforceable, and more than once Mr. Atkinson was required to defend the measure against the charge of censorship.

Mr. Atkinson's difficult period began when Representative Hinshaw asked, "How can you determine in advance what a reasonable price is?"

Apparently unable to give a definite answer, the witness finally said it would have to be by "the exercise of due care and consideration of all factors."

"When a picture is contemplated, it is impossible to estimate the return," the California member persisted.

"I never made a motion picture," Mr. Atkinson said, adding that under the present setup the exhibitors "are required to underwrite the costs."

"Under this bill the distributor has got to know something before he makes his contract," he admitted, adding that he could "know something" by making a number of leases in advance of production, which would give him a test of the possible popularity of the film.

He admitted, however, that unless a protective clause were inserted in such contracts, the producer would have to make the picture even if he found it was going to be a loss, but contended that a producer would be less likely to make "flops."

"Test of Exhibitor Sentiment"

"Some films that have cost enormous sums have been flops so far as the box office is concerned," Congressman Hinshaw pointed out. "The producer has to average his return."

"That is one of the advantages of this bill from the point of view of the producer," Mr. Atkinson contended. "He will be able to get a test of exhibitor sentiment."

"Do you believe that the exhibitor can tell from a synopsis whether a picture is going to be a good money maker?" Mr. Hinshaw asked.

"He can get some idea," Atkinson said.

"How?" interjected Representative Luther Patrick (Dem., Ala.). "How in heck can he tell from the synopsis?"

"The synopsis will give a general outline of the story and the principal characters," the witness explained.

Synopses Discussed

Getting into a discussion of synopses, which he said the companies now did not provide at all, Mr. Atkinson read an evaluation of the characters in "Primrose Path" as written by someone who had seen the film, and was asked by the committee to present a company synopsis for comparison.

Representative Hinshaw suggested the producer might not give the same description of the characters as the witness, and Mr. Atkinson retorted, "It would be approximately the same."

"Not if he was smart," the Representative countered.

Atkinson explained that the exhibitor would be responsible for what he showed in his theatre.

"Doesn't the whole picture industry act in response to the public demand even now," Representave Patrick asked.

"As one unified monopoly, yes," the witness admitted.

"The point is," continued the Congressman, "are you getting away from popular appeal?"

Denies It's Censorship

"Oh, not in the least. What we are trying to do is to give local communities—not in the sense of a regimented nation under the dictates of a monopoly in Hollywood—a chance to raise the American level."

"Do you also feel the community would be given a range of censorship?"

"There is no censorship at all. What do you do when you want to get something done at home?"

"I ask my wife," the Congressman said.

Mr. Atkinson said that producers would be able to change their pictures after a synopsis had been issued and contracts made, but admitted that this was not explicitly provided for in the bill and that such changes probably would be restricted materially.

Sees Lower Rentals

He denied that the bill would tend to raise lease prices, contending that the opposite would be true since the increased competition would tend to reduce waste.

"Do you mean the more circumscribed the producer is the less it will cost him to make pictures?" Representative Patrick asked.

"The more competition you have the less waste there will be," Mr. Atkinson insisted.

Representative Charles L. South (Dem.,

SYNOPSIS PROVISION IS TARGET

Tex.) expressed interest in the question of the synopsis, asking what information an exhibitor now has when he enters into negotiations for a certain picture.

"He gets a price and a lot of sales talk," the witness said.

"By what is the exhibitor influenced in making his selection?" Mr. South asked.

"By the name of the company; he has nothing else to go on."

"Doesn't the producer want to keep the good will of the exhibitor and the public and sell his pictures the next year?" Representative Patrick interjected.

"Sometimes it seems to me that he just doesn't care," Atkinson replied.

Questioning the clarity of the synopsis provision, Representative Pearson asserted it would lead to the bringing of innumerable suits and the clogging of the courts, and also asked what would happen to pictures the exhibitors would not buy.

"What will happen to the producer after block booking is eliminated and you leave to the exhibitor the selection of pictures," he asked. "What will happen to the rejected pictures? Where are they going and what is going to happen to them?"

"They won't have to be shown and paid for by the public," Mr. Atkinson retorted. "The producer won't make those pictures."

"Well," continued the Congressman, "assume a producer produces 50 pictures and he offers them and 25 are taken by exhibitors and 25 lag and they have no way to dispose of them. Would not it follow that there would be cheap picture houses constructed all over the country offering rejected pictures at 10 and 15 cents and masses of people going to see the very pictures that you propose to stop under this act?"

"The intent of the act is to give the good theatre a chance not to show these pictures," the witness said.

"It would make it possible for many times as many people to see bad pictures," Mr. Pearson asserted.

Charges "Loose Language"

The "loose language" of Section 4 would make it necessary for the Supreme Court to rule on a tremendous number of cases, it was declared by Representative McGranery.

Mr. Atkinson denied that there would be many suits and attempted to dispose of the matter by the suggestion that the time and expense involved would keep litigation down. Further, he suggested, one suit would establish a precedent applicable all over the country, but lawyers on the committee held that no decision of a circuit court necessarily held beyond its circuit.

Members of the committee agreed that the question whether a picture lived up to the synopsis would be a matter of opinion and that there would be a flood of suits.

"Don't you think it would be better to spend some time on this now and write a definite provision?" Mr. McGranery asked, adding that the only thing needed to make the bill complete was a provision for a board of censorship.

Chairman Lea also questioned the witness, asking who was to determine whether the prices asked by a producer for a film in a block and when sold separately had a "reasonable" relationship, and Atkinson admitted that it would be a matter for the courts.

Myers Gives Views

Seeking to avoid the extensive questioning which had been directed at their witnesses, the civic groups sponsoring the bill interrupted their testimony Wednesday in order that Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States, might present the views of the independent exhibitors.

Mr. Myers urged the committee to abandon its probe of the various provisions of the bill and consider it "as a whole" and in the light of the abuses at which it is directed.

He told the committee, "I don't believe that anyone will quarrel with the objects of the bill," and added that many of the bill's opponents have at one time or another announced their sympathy with its purposes.

"This is as much an anti-monopoly bill as a community freedom bill," he said, "and regulation of monopoly always has been considered a proper subject of legislation.

"In no other line of business is the purchaser required by the concerns controlling the sources of necessary supplies to accept the full line offered without being permitted to select the goods best suited to his class of patrons and reject that which he knows will not be acceptable.

"By this method the producers require the independent exhibitors to underwrite completely and in advance all of their products, including the inferior products which they are unwilling to accept in their own theatres."

Defends Price Provisions

Taking up the differential provisions of the bill, Mr. Myers denied there was any price-fixing involved, and explained that at one time the distributors did put the prices of the individual pictures in their contracts.

He was questioned extensively by Representative Boren as to methods of fixing prices under the present system, and explained that the distributors seek "all the traffic will bear."

However, he said, the distributors have worked out a mathematical formula for each house "based on previous experience with the theatre," adding that "we are not supposed to know that."

Regardless of how fine an independent house may be, he testified, it is unable to get better than subsequent runs in any situation where there is an affiliated or large chain house. Further, he said, the distributors have written into their contract a restriction against admissions under 15 cents, in order, he charged, to minimize the differential between the admissions of first and subsequent run theatres.

He told representatives who asked regarding the situation that the bill would make little difference in the present run structure, except as a result of the increased competition which it is expected to foster.

Mr. Myers refused to admit the view of Representative Hinshaw that the film industry operated much as do the automobile and other industries which give exclusive franchises to dealers in important areas but license smaller dealers to represent them also in a subsidiary capacity.

Representative McGranery took a prominent part in the questioning of the Allied witness, indicating his approval of the elimination of block booking but making it clear he could not accept the synopsis provisions, which he characterized as ambiguous. Mr. McGranery suggested that the section be confined to a requirement merely for a "true" synopsis, which he said would meet the situation.

Mr. Myers promised to give the proposal thought, but pointed out that if the bill was amended it might not become law this year, since it would have to go back to the Senate for approval of the changes.

Exhibits Contract

Showing the committee a copy of an MGM contract, Mr. Myers said the only description of the picture therein was the number to be assigned to each classification. The only film named, he pointed out, was "Gone With the Wind" and the only reference was "you don't get that."

He explained the single selling of "Wind" which, he said, "was released under conditions which this bill would create," but it was pointed out by Representative Patrick that if the bill became law and all pictures were so released the "back street" exhibitor would have small chance of getting the good films. The witness declared there would be no great flood of litigation under the measure, pointing out that all punitive actions would have to be brought by the Government and asserting that few exhibitors could afford the luxury of going to court over no more than the rental of a picture.

Sees Aid for Independents

Answering questions as to the status of independent producers, he told the committee that under present conditions exhibitors have no playing time for independent pictures but that under the bill, with single selling, they would be able to encourage such productions.

On Wednesday the committee also heard representatives of a half dozen public groups, who, in brief statements, placed their organizations on record as supporting the bill. Those who appeared included: Mrs. Mary R. Carver, Washington, of the Council of Women for Home Missions; Mrs. Elizabeth St. John, Honolulu, of the Hawaii PTA; Mrs. Howard S. Shepard of the Worcester, Mass., Better Films Council; Miss Gladys Wykoff, Washington, American Home Economics Association; Miss Izora Scott, Washington, Women's Christian Temperance Union; Miss Inez Colcord, Washington, American Association of University Women, and Mrs. Robert L. Jeffreys of the District of Columbia PTA.

On Thursday, the committee heard another dozen representatives of the public groups, paving the way for the appearance of the exhibitor witnesses, who included, among Allied representatives, Sidney Samuelson, Col. H. A. Cole, Nathan Yamins, and I. E. Chadwick, producer.

In the Senate the Judiciary Committee was to start hearings Thursday on Senator Neely's newest legislative proposal, a measure to compel divorcement of distribution and exhibition. Many of the witnesses at the House Committee hearings were to appear also at these sessions.

NEELY NOMINATED W. VA. GOVERNOR

Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, of West Virginia, a name familiar to all branches of the motion picture industry because of his two bills to "reform" it—one would divorce producer-distributors from their theatres, the other (the subject of hearings in Washington this week) would bar block and blind booking and the interchange of stars and would require submission of synopses before production—on Tuesday won the Democratic nomination for Governor of his state, over R. Carl Andrews, on the basis of Wednesday's count of half of the ballots.

West Virginia went heavily Democratic in the last Presidential election.

SEARS, ROEBUCK TO USE GIVEAWAYS AT THEATRES FOR ITS 500 STORES

Cash-Value Coupons Will Be Redeemable Only at Sears Retail Stores or by Mail Order in Philadelphia Test

Sears, Roebuck & Company, one of the two largest mail order-retail organizations in the country (Montgomery Ward is the other), doing a $600,000,000 annual business from an estimated 40,000,000 customers through 55,000 employees in 500 Sears stores, has completed definite plans for a movie giveaway at theatres all over the country in what seems to be potentially the most extensive single giveaway proposition ever to reach a business which already has seen giveaway inducements penetrate virtually every corner of exhibition.

Profit-Sharing Plan

A new departure in movie giveaways, adapting the profit-sharing principle to box-office patronage, will be offered to motion picture exhibitors on a nationwide scale. The plan, to be tested in Philadelphia on June 3rd, and continuing for the remainder of the month, will have theatres presenting patrons with cash-value coupons redeemable in merchandise only at any Sears retail store or in mail order purchases.

The coupons are to be in denominations of one, two and five cents and may be extended later to include coupons of six and seven cent value. It is to be left to the discretion of the exhibitor as to what coupon value to give away with a particular picture since the exhibitor pays for the face value of the coupons, Sears taking care of all attending advertising and promotion expenditures.

E. J. Nunn, Sears executive in Philadelphia in charge of merchandise promotion and handling the giveaway test in that city, said that the mail order house had been quietly studying the idea for almost a year. The experiment in Philadelphia will be at six independent neighborhood houses. Three already have been selected, the Hollywood, President and Southern.

For National Application

"Once it gets going and we see how it works out here," said Mr. Nunn, in Philadelphia, "the idea will be extended nationally."

The test there will have to measure up to three qualifications: It must show box-office increases for the exhibitor to justify the cost of the coupons to him; it must make for appreciable increases in sales at Sears retail stores in the area or in mail order purchases; and the public's reaction to the plan must manifest itself in a favorable light.

Similar in character to the coupons formerly given away by the United Cigar Stores, for redemption of merchandise, the coupon reads that it is "acceptable on presentation, except where prohibited by law, as payment in full or in part, for any merchandise displayed in the Sears current mail order catalogue or any Sears retail store."

Mr. Nunn explained that the coupons would be accepted as cash payment in full or in part for merchandise and even as a deposit to hold any item for future sale. The coupons are transferable; anyone may buy Sears merchandise with them, regardless of the theatre. The name of the theatre is stamped on each coupon only for checking purposes.

A folder, to be distributed to patrons at the six Philadelphia houses a week previous to the test, advises that the coupons are "as good as gold for anything sold by Sears." It is further explained that the giveaway plan has a double-saving feature, the theatre saving the patron money by giving back a cash value coupon for each ticket bought, and that by redeeming the coupons through Sears, there is a further money saving in the lower prices offered by the mail order house.

"Outside" Corporation Set Up

With Sears' yearly business approximating $600,000,000, from the estimated 40,000,000 customers, Sears figures that if this new movie giveaway plan can bring in only one-fourth of 1 per cent in new business, or $1,500,000, it will be considered a highly successful promotion.

It is understood that an "outside" corporation has been set up for the sale of coupons to exhibitors throughout the country. The sales organization is headed, it is understood, by Robert F. Bogatin, a Philadelphia attorney and motion picture exhibitor, and the company also includes Charlie Goldfine, operator of the Alden theatre in Philadelphia, and Moe Verbin, a former manager for William Goldman houses in Philadelphia and now theatrical advertising solicitor for the Philadelphia Record, daily newspaper. It is understood that this group toyed with the idea for several years before submitting it to Sears, Roebuck, which held it under advisement for months.

Mr. Nunn intimated that Mr. Bogatin's organization would take care of the actual distribution of coupons. Mr. Bogatin could not be reached. The original intention, it is understood, was to test the plan first in Chicago, and a second experiment may yet be conducted in that city in view of the fact that the Sears main offices are in that city, before extending it on a nationwide scale.

Montana Outlaws Bank Night

The Montana supreme court has outlawed Bank Night. In its decision the state's highest court held that Bank Night as operated by Missoula County and other theatres violates the Montana lottery statutes. The decision resulted from a test case instituted by Edward Dussault, Missoula County prosecuting attorney.

The Mississippi House of Representatives for the second time has turned down the Stansel bill proposing a steep "special privilege" taxation on giveaways.

Reconsidered through amendment fixing the levy at from $50 to $200 per day, on the days of the awards, depending upon the population of the community, the House voted 55 to 43 in favor of the measure but 59 votes were needed for its passage.

Missouri Game Held Lottery

A money giveaway, National Numbers Bank, which is being developed by the Velvo Corporation (Kirk & Haysler) in Kansas City for use by theatres, was held to be a lottery under Missouri statutes in an opinion by the office of the state attorney general at the request of the company. A. C. Haysler of the Velvo Corporation indicated he felt that the plan was not a lottery and that the company was going ahead with its development.

The Kansas City police have clamped down on anything that smacks of a lottery—even to the use of coupons in giveaways where the winner is decided by a drawing. Exhibitors are arranging contests of one sort or another to meet the requirements of police enforcement.

Milwaukee Injunction Sought

Holding to his promise to bring action against other Milwaukee halls which refused to discontinue Bingo games in the face of a state supreme court ruling holding the game a lottery, Charles W. Trampe, head of Film Service, Inc., has obtained an order from John C. Kleczka, circuit court judge, requiring the American Luther Association's officers to show cause why an injunction should not be issued. Benjamin J. Miller, who represented Mr. Trampe in the action against the Bahn Frei hall, in which an injunction was obtained against the organization, filed the complaint.

Rhode Island Ruling

The Rhode Island supreme court has ruled that Bank Night, as conducted in 1938 by Big Chief Corporation, a grocery concern, was not a lottery and ordered the case remitted to the superior court, with directions to find the defendant "not guilty."

Cincinnati Bingo Profits

Bingo profits in Cincinnati reached a new high in April when 231 parties, sponsored by religious, charitable and other organizations, grossed $212,945.02. Awards amounted to $51,515.84, leaving net profit of $161,429.18 to sponsors. The average net cost to each participant was 59.8 cents. The average net cost for theatre admissions is 35 cents.

Two suits have been filed in common pleas court, Troy, Ohio, against the Troy Amusement Company and its stockholders, C. F. Pfister, Catherine Pfister, Wm. H. Maier and Salena Maier. The first suit, filed by Michael E. Norris, attorney, seeks judgment for $8 expended for admissions over a 40-week period of Bank Night operation, and $500 damages under the Ohio lottery law on the contention that Bank Night, as conducted by the Mayflower theatre, Troy, is a lottery.

The second suit, also filed by Mr. Norris, seeks $52,000 claim due to plaintiff as having been won from Josephine Norris and 9,997 other participants of Bank Night at the Mayflower from November 7, 1938 to November 6, 1939.

Phillip Miller, operating the Casion theatre, a Hamilton, Ohio, neighborhood house, recently charged by police with conducting a game of chance because he awarded $1 bills to patrons in drawings at his theatre, has been fined the costs in municipal court.

BRITONS FEAR FURTHER GOVERNMENT CONTROL

British exhibitors this week foresaw a possible extension of Government control in a development out of recent action by the London Council to eliminate nudity and suggestive dialogue in vaudeville houses.

Originally motion picture theatres were not directly concerned, but the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association was among the entertainment organizations invited to a conference convened by the Lord Chamberlain, official governing theatres, and the Home Secretary, who controls all licensed houses.

It was agreed to cooperate with the officials in eliminating the causes of the complaints.

LIGHTNING WAR PUTS U. S. FOREIGN FILM POLICY ON DAY-TO-DAY BASIS

Battle and Destruction Close 1,400 Theatres as Total War Is Launched; Estimates on Losses Up to 100 Per Cent

The total war which struck western Europe with lightning swiftness destroyed, at least for the moment, perhaps for a long time, a major portion of what film markets had remained open to American distributors after the Nazi legions began to march last September, forced further revision downward of foreign revenue budgets, and put the operations of foreign departments on a day to day, almost hour to hour, basis.

1,400 Houses Closed

Nearly 1,400 theatres in the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg which normally return about three per cent of the American companies' foreign revenue were closed when the skies began to rain bombs and parachute troops. It is expected that when they reopen it will be under drastic regulation, even in the unoccupied areas, because of the constant danger of fresh waves of bombs. The loss of approximately $2,500,000 in annual revenue in these countries, added to that incurred last month in Norway, Denmark and for all practical purposes, Sweden, and to that of Poland, Italy, Spain and most of the Balkan countries amounts to approximately 25 per cent of the total foreign revenue.

Except for South America and the Orient what remains of the foreign market is reported to be further dangerously threatened. As of the hour of publication only France and England, of all western and central Europe, remain open and there are indications of immediate reductions in these countries. In France theatres were ordered Monday to return to the 11 o'clock closings which were enforced for a few weeks in September and in England the dark news from the Low Countries, combined with the cancellation of the annual Whitsuntide week end holiday lowered theatre grosses 20 per cent from the subnormal level to which they held during the winter months.

Cost Allocations Revised

The thunder of the war machines silenced whatever sketchy plans foreign department executives had been able to draw up during the comparative quiet of the previous months. Allocations of revenue to negative cost amortization were revised by Loew's and Columbia. Other companies preferred to wait until the picture becomes less chaotic and adopted temporary bookkeeping measures. Walter J. Hutchinson, head of 20th Century-Fox foreign distribution postponed indefinitely a scheduled trip to Europe. E. J. Mannix and Irving Asher, in New York awaiting a clipper sailing, abruptly abandoned plans to study production possibilities for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in England and returned to Hollywood. Loet Barnstyn, franchise holder in Holland for Columbia and United Artists was in New York negotiating new film contracts when news came of the attack on his homeland. We had word that his family was safe but he had to abandon all plans, including those for his return.

Reginald Armour, European general manager for RKO Radio, arriving in New York Monday said the changed conditions would necessitate an entirely new formula for operations in Europe. He planned to confer on the reorganization with Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales, during his stay in New York. On the brighter side he expressed the conviction that the disruption of production in the war torn countries would insure the continuation of the American activities in Europe, always assuming that wide-spread and constant bombing raids do not force the closing of theatres.

Total Loss Seen

Other foreign department executives said the picture could hardly be any blacker than at present. Turning to maps of Europe they pointed in succession to Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Spain, Italy, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Holland, Belgium and the Balkans. One foreign head said that in his opinion the European market should be written off entirely and he pointed out, too, that there is little possibility of compensating for European losses by increasing activity in the Latin American field. Most of the major distributors have been concentrating important sales activity in those countries for some years.

In addition to the immediate and future loss of revenue the war has brought important losses in physical assets. A report made by William C. Bullitt, U. S. ambassador to France, to Harold Smith, representative of the Hays organization in Paris, indicated this week that all American companies' assets in Poland had been confiscated by the conquerors of that country. Several ships carrying film shipments to ports in western Europe were sunk by submarines or mines. Losses in Holland and Belgium are not known and cannot be estimated in New York, it was said, because of the disruption of communications. Many of the companies had not heard by midweek from their offices in either country. Communications from even France and England are subject to long delay.

Production Plans Revised

Studios took cognizance of the changed and rapidly shifting foreign situation with announcements of production changes. William A. Scully, general sales manager, and Nate Blumberg, president of Universal, told their sales forces at the annual convention in Atlantic City Monday that the war had caused the company to increase the number of top budget pictures in order to increase the company's domestic revenue.

In a process of "streamlining" studio operations Paramount announced the signing of William Meiklejohn, Hollywood talent agent, to head the company's talent and casting departments. Y. Frank Freeman, announcing the contract, said the move meant that Paramount would "aggressively seek film personalities of proven box office value."

Dependence on the American market for the total revenues of 20th Century-Fox during the new season was emphasized as a basic company policy in messages to the sales forces from Sidney R. Kent, president; Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution. They pointed out the necessity for a 40 per cent increase in domestic revenue since, they said, the company's normal returns from foreign markets outside of the Americas aggregated that much of the total revenue.

"With foreign revenue cut off, with a prolonged war threatening finally to shut off every dollar from abroad except in Central and South America," Mr. Kent's message said, "we are faced with the necessity of living within our American revenue, if we are to live at all. And the question of whether or not we can sustain ourselves will be pretty largely determined in the coming year by what we are able to show with the new season's pictures."

Reallocations Made

A Columbia financial report this week announced that film costs had been reallocated because of the war. The new setup makes the domestic market responsible for 75 per cent of the company's gross, an increase of 10 per cent over nine months ago. The report, embodied in a letter to stockholders from Harry Cohn, president, said the 10 per cent reallocation began with a five per cent reduction of the allocation to the United Kingdom during the six months ended December 30, 1939, and was followed with an additional five per cent reduction in foreign allocations on January 1, 1940. The percentage of Columbia's film costs allocated to the United Kingdom now is 20 per cent and to all other foreign markets, five per cent.

Loew's, Inc., announced last week that allocations of costs had been revised from 65 per cent domestic and 35 per cent foreign to 70 per cent domestic and 30 per cent foreign.

Restrictions in Australia

Revenues from the British Empire, already reduced and restricted by war conditions, were further affected this week by the announcement of a new monetary agreement between American distributors and the Australian Government under which they will be allowed to withdraw only 50 per cent of their total Australian revenue. The scale is to be based on the revenue during the year ended June 30, 1939. The American companies' proposals for withdrawal of 75 per cent of their revenue were rejected.

The new agreement is retroactive to last March 1st and runs to April 1, 1941. As in the case of the monetary agreement with Great Britain the American distributors will be permitted to withdraw up to 75 per cent of the total authorized for remittance during the first half of the agreement.

The amount to be withdrawn by individual companies must be computed by agreement among them. The Australian Government is designating the total amount to be withdrawn as a lump sum equal to the total business of the American companies for the period designated. It is estimated that the amount will be $4,500,000.

ALLIED TO FIGHT RENTAL INCREASES

Conditions in the motion picture industry abroad caused by the European war should not be used by the distributors as a basis for heavy rental demands in this country, it was declared this week by Allied States Association following a directors meeting at which that subject and "nickel-in-the-slot" pictures were considered.

The question of rentals was considered at length at the meeting and it was decided that all available data on economic conditions and prospects for the future, particularly as affected by the spread of the European war, should be compiled and laid before Allied exhibitors at their Chicago convention.

Announcing this decision, the Association declared, "It is believed that authentic data is needed as a background for the consideration of demands being made by the distributors for higher film rentals."

CENTURY-FOX FILM CORPORATION

PRODUCT ANNOUNCEMENT for 1940-41

At a time when great pictures are more than ever necessary for the continued prosperity of our industry, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation takes pride in announcing its production program for the season 1940-41.

We expect to release 52 feature pictures; and, for exhibitors throughout the world, it is of the utmost importance to note that with leading foreign markets destroyed or weakened by war or currency restrictions, this Company has made no curtailment in its production budget. In our opinion this is the only policy which can assure to theatre operators and ourselves the quality of pictures which is vital to progress and profitable operation.

From the stories and with the stars, players and directors listed on the following pages will come the great majority of the productions released by this Company next season. Because of circumstances which nobody now can foresee, some of these stories may not be produced—in their final form some may not measure up to our hopes, others may be replaced with timelier, more important subjects. In every case, however, where a change is made, it will be done solely to improve the program.

In listing the personalities for our product, as well as directors, we name only those who are under contract to this Company or whom we have already borrowed from other producing companies. As in the past, however, we expect to use additional boxoffice names not now ready for announcement.

Twentieth Century-Fox is proud in the knowledge that as of today we have on our books more accounts than ever before in the history of this Company. To our customers throughout the world we present this program which we sincerely believe to be the greatest and most forward-looking list of pictures we have ever had.

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation

FROM 20th CENTURY-FOX FOR 1940-41

. . . of which 26 will be produced from the following stories, or others timelier and greater . . . all on a scale worthy of these extraordinary properties!

BRIGHAM YOUNG

Tremendous, human—being produced on a heroic scale. The cast already includes TYRONE POWER, LINDA DARNELL, DEAN JAGGER (brilliant Broadway star), Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Brian Donlevy, Mary Astor, Vincent Price. Written by Louis Bromfield ("The Rains Came"). Screen play by Lamar Trotti, author of "In Old Chicago." Directed by Henry Hathaway. To be launched with the greatest nationwide promotion 20th ever gave a picture.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS

Without a doubt the greatest sea story ever written! Set for the spectacular top-budget production its scope demands. Directed by Henry King.

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY

Today's runaway best-seller! The story property of the year! Richard Llewellyn's powerful, emotional novel will receive a production that assures it a place among the great pictures of all time. Directed by John Ford.

TIN PAN ALLEY

A lavish and magnificent musical on the scale of "Lillian Russell" —in the romantic setting where are born the songs the whole world sings and plays and remembers.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE

TYRONE POWER . . . ALICE FAYE . . . DON AMECHE . . . HENRY FONDA . . . LINDA DARNELL . . . EDWARD ARNOLD! New York during the decade that transformed it from an ordinary seaport to the world's greatest metropolis!

WESTERN UNION

by Zane Grey

Words of meaning to every American, and in them Zane Grey found his last and greatest story. The epochal spanning of our continent by wire—a vital lifeline to the nation torn asunder by the fury of the Civil War. A production of maximum importance and showmanship opportunity.

THE GREAT PROFILE

Adolphe Menjou plays the title role.

THE RETURN OF FRANK JAMES

In Technicolor

Boxoffice successor to "Jesse James," unanimously acknowledged 1939's biggest money-maker. HENRY FONDA plays the title role. Others already cast are Andrea Leeds, Henry Hull, Jackie Cooper, John Carradine, Donald Meek, J. Edward Bromberg, Eddie Collins. A top-profit certainty, made in response to unprecedented audience demand. Directed by Fritz Lang.

5th AVENUE

The brilliant new novel by Polan Banks. A story of the five decades from the glittering nineties to now. Definitely important boxoffice.

SGT. SAM DREBEN, U. S. A.

The unparalleled adventures of Fighting Sam Dreben, named by General Pershing "a one-man army." Vital and colorful, his thrill-packed story receives merited big-scale handling! Story by William Anthony McGuire. Directed by John Ford.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY

In Technicolor

The stand-out musical of 1940-41. Starring ALICE FAYE, DON AMECHE . . . and introducing tantalizing, torrid-voiced CARMEN MIRANDA of "Streets of Paris," Broadway hit that was her personal triumph. Songs by Mack Gordon. Directed by Irving Cummings.

HIGHWAY 66

The route that "The Grapes of Wrath" made immortal becomes the scene of another powerfully realistic drama . . . doubly boxoffice because of its association in the minds of movie-going millions with the sweepingly successful Steinbeck masterpiece.

THE GREAT COMMANDMENT

Its greatness given even more powerful impact by its astounding parallel to the happenings of our own times. Spectacular drama of a crushed and helpless people during the last days of Christ. The matchless might of Roman arms . . . countless legions and fearsome war chariots plunging resistlessly through enemy hosts. And through it all a truly inspiring love story. TYRONE POWER and LINDA DARNELL head the impressive cast!

SONG OF THE ISLANDS

Seldom has a story locale lent itself to such spectacular production. Vitally, arrestingly different drama of Hawaii's vast plantations . . . sensationally climaxed by a hurricane-driven, cane-field fire that threatens the island and its people with flaming destruction!

CHAD HANNA

The newest and greatest novel by the famous author of "Drums Along the Mohawk," Walter D. Edmonds! One of 20th's most important story acquisitions—already sweeping to the top of the book lists—acclaimed a "sure-fire, big-time best seller"! The exciting, warming, human story in which young Chad Hanna figures will be an unforgettable picture . . . produced with all the sweep and scope it merits!

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY

Drama at its mightiest . . . sweeping from the gay, dissolute court of England's Charles II to the remotest outposts of the savage Canadian Northland . . . depicting the London Plague and Fire, notorious Nell Gwyn, high intrigue, heart-stirring forest adventure. Story by Lamar Trotti.

I MARRIED A NAZI

The sensational Liberty Magazine serial that created a national furore . . . relating the amazing, unforgettable experiences of a young American woman, plunged into the Nazi reign of terror. JOAN BENNETT will co-star with RICHARD GREENE. GEORGE SANDERS also has an important role. Front-page impact, record grosses.

BELLE STARR

The fiery, high-born Southern beauty who became history's most notorious woman outlaw when carpet-baggers pillaged her family's fortune and Yankee troops murdered her father. Tempestuous romance, blazing with thrill and adventure. Story by Nunnally Johnson. ALICE FAYE will play the title role.

BROTHERS

Moving human drama of two brothers, bred in the teeming waterfront of today's San Francisco, and the girl they both loved. To be cast with three great stars!

RED CROSS NURSE

No more vital theme has ever inspired a great picture. Courage and sacrifice against a thrilling panorama of hurricanes, floods, Arctic storms, mine disaster. Alive with heart-lift, showmanship wallop.

DOWN ON THE WABASH

(TENTATIVE TITLE)

The realistic story of a young, small-town banker whose faith in himself and his fellow-men caused him to revolt against the powers throttling the community that was his home. Rich in young and mature love . . . electrifying in its explosive surprise climax.

Elsa Maxwell's PUBLIC DEB No. 1

(TENTATIVE TITLE)

Keyed to today's smartest comedy vogue! With famed Elsa Maxwell showing how debs tick and click. Co-starring LINDA DARNELL, GEORGE MURPHY, with Charles Ruggles, Ralph Bellamy, Mischa Auer, Berton Churchill, Franklyn Pangborn, Maxie Rosenbloom. Directed by Gregory Ratoff.

Irving Berlin's SAY IT WITH MUSIC

The "Alexander's Ragtime Band" of 1940-41! The great romance of the glamorous, fantastic 1920's . . . keyed to a title of incalculable value. Six new Irving Berlin hits will be added to his finest melodies of that incredible decade. Outstanding cast and production further insure the importance of this attraction. A showmanship show!

YOUNG PEOPLE

SHIRLEY TEMPLE, JACK OAKIE, CHARLOTTE GREENWOOD! The tumultuous and exciting cavalcade of a vaudeville child-star's rise, bringing back to you memorable highlights of Shirley's own spectacular career . . . featuring Gordon & Warren's best songs ever and a top-name cast. Directed by Allan Dwan.

THE CALIFORNIAN

Turbulent, action-crammed drama of California's most romantic days. Blazing with the reckless deeds of a mysterious caballero whose daring forays terrorized the tyrant clique despoiling the country and its people. TYRONE POWER heads a spectacular cast.

THE KHYBER PASS

A cut in the mountains which today holds the fascinated attention of the world. The great story of the historic gateway to the wealth of India.

STUDIO CLUB

Drama spotlighting the fascinating lives and careers of the world's most gorgeous girls . . . famed even in Hollywood for their loveliness! Revealing their ambitions, heart-breaks, loves, schemes! A story thrilling and unusual!

SUN VALLEY

Playground for the wealth and aristocracy of all the world . . . the internationally-famed headquarters for winter sports becomes the scene of SONJA HENIE'S most dazzling and enthralling picture. An exploitation natural of naturals.

YESTERDAY'S HEROES

William Brent's sensational Saturday Evening Post serial. A daringly new kind of football story showing the bitter disillusion of proud grid stars, when the high-pressure college "system" has used them up and their fame is forgotten. Packed every second with scoring punch.

LADIES OF THE ROAD

Hitch-hiking along the nation's highways . . . riding the rods of the transcontinental freight trains . . . a strange new class of itinerants confronts America! Their story will be screened in all its drama and timeliness!

DANCE HALL

Adapted from W. R. Burnett's powerful novel of young people in the steel towns. To be made with the same daring realism that characterized "The Grapes of Wrath."

LUCKY BALDWIN

The stirring, spectacular glorification of a great legend! What "Kentucky" did for Kentucky horse-racing, this will do for golden California and its same sport! And against this vivid background—the strange, dramatic and eventful life of the Far West's most colorful character! Of foregone appeal to every entertainment lover!

UNCENSORED

The absorbing adventures of London's gayest master-crook. Suspenseful audience dynamite!

MAN HUNT

Geoffrey Household's best - selling, super - thrilling novel of a big-game hunter who single-handed goes after the biggest game of all—a world-hated dictator!

59 FROM 'U' IN 1940-1941; MORE TOP BUDGETS TO OFFSET FOREIGN LOSSES

42 Features in Addition to 3 Frank Lloyd Productions, 7 Arlen - Devine Subjects and 7 with Johnny Mack Brown

Universal Pictures will make a bid for greater domestic business in 1940-41 to offset diminishing foreign returns, by producing more pictures and of a top-budget standard than it did in 1939-40, it was announced Sunday, May 12th, by William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager, to the Universal sales convention at the Ambassador Hotel, Atlantic City, at the first of two regional conventions. The second opens Sunday, May 18th, in Chicago.

"We will produce not ony more pictures than we did last season, but definitely more top-budget pictures," Mr. Scully said, detailing 45 features and 14 action films.

What Universal Offers

The 1940-41 Universal production program lists 42 features, in addition to three Frank Lloyd productions, seven co-starring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine and seven starring Johnny Mack Brown.

"Stars already assigned to the casts of new product almost double the number the company has previously offered," said the announcement. Heading the list are Deanna Durbin, Marlene Dietrich, Irene Dunne, W. C. Fields, Charles Boyer, Walter Pidgeon, Kay Francis, Gloria Jean, Allan Jones, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, the Ritz Brothers, Baby Sandy, Victor McLaglen, Hugh Herbert, the Andrews Sisters, Karloff and Lugosi, the Dead End Kids and the Little Tough Guys.

"An important contribution to the program," Mr. Scully pointed out, "will be the three productions to be made by Frank Lloyd, two-time Academy Award winner and producer of such films as 'Mutiny on the Bounty,' 'Cavalcade' and 'Wells Fargo'."

In addition to the salesmen (listed in Motion Picture Herald, May 11, page 39), district and branch managers under eastern sales manager F. J. A. McCarthy were present to hear Mr. Scully's announcement. N. J. Blumberg, president, and J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, also attended. Other top executives included Cliff Work, vice-president and general manager of the studio; Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs; and W. J. Heineman, western sales manager, who will gather his exchange men together in Chicago over week-end for the second regional meeting.

Will Produce "Back Street"

The news that Universal will make "Back Street," based on Fannie Hurst's novel, was described as a highlight of the program.

In his announcement, Mr. Scully named Joe Pasternak, Henry Koster, George Marshall, William Seiter, Tay Garnett and Richard Wallace among the production heads who will supervise the filming of the new pictures.

He recalled the company's "flexible" policy, originally set forth last year, under which additional stars and productions frequently were added to the announced program; this will continue. It was in this manner that Marlene Dietrich was added to "Destry Rides Again."

Mr. Scully called attention to what he described as "a new note" in the company's western series for 1940-41, the addition of a new type of feminine lead to the cast which stars Johnny Mack Brown and features Fuzzy Knight. She is Julie Duncan, stunt-girl.

The Complete List

The complete product list presented by Mr. Scully, follows:

Two Deana Durbin Pictures, to be produced by Joe Pasternak and directed by Henry Koster.

Back Street, from the novel by Fannie Hurst; screenplay by S. K. Lauren.

Sales Policies Discussed

The meeting opened at 10 Saturday morning, at the Ambassador, with assembly and an address of welcome by Mr. Scully. More than 125 Universal executives, salesmen and exchange operatives were present. Mr. McCarthy called the roll, and the business sessions followed immediately. The morning and afternoon sessions were given over to a review of the past year, with addresses by Messrs. Blumberg, Scully, McCarthy, Jordan, Abrams, Murray, Schimel Seidelman and Joseph, covering all phases of sales, distribution and promotion.

On Sunday morning, following a screening at the Stanley theatre on the boardwalk, the announcement of the new year's product was made by Mr. Scully, after which the conventioneers were addressed by Cliff Work, head of the studios, and Jack Skirball. The remainder of the day, following lunch, was devoted entirely to a discussion of sales policies for the new season. There was an informal get-together in the Ambassador Grill after the sessions, with a dinner at 8:30 Sunday evening.

The Monday sessions were again begun with screenings, followed by group conferences of district and branch managers and their sales forces with Mr. Scully and Mr. McCarthy.

President Blumberg told the salesmen Monday that 15 of the new season's pictures will be completed and in exchanges by September 1st. Cliff Work, studio head, added that five of the 15 will be those named as "top bracket productions."

Mr. Blumberg explained that the studio has essentially completed its commitments for the current season, and that June, July and August are open entirely for new season production. This week six of the 1940-41 productions will go before the cameras, he added. Other scripts are completed, producers assigned to them and players cast. As further stage space becomes available, added pictures will be started.

The five "top bracket" pictures that will be ready for the opening of the new season are: Marlene Dietrich production, "Seven Sinners"; "When the Daltons Rode," with Walter Pidgeon and Kay Francis; "Little Bit of Heaven," first of the two Gloria Jean productions; "Riviera," starring Allan Jones, and "Back Street," the Fannie Hurst novel.

Hays Railroad Director

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on Wednesday applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington for authorization to become a director of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad Company. The application stated that Mr. Hays would represent the interests of the holders of preferred stock in the company, who would acquire 220,461 shares of common following a plan to reorganize the line, it being understood that Mr. Hays would be on the new board of the company, in receivership since 1933.

House Committee Bars Federal Film Funds

The Appropriations bill, carrying a specific prohibition against the allocation of funds by any Federal department for Federal film or radio services, was approved by the House Appropriations Committee Wednesday and sent to the floor of the House.

13 PRODUCERS TO MAKE 22 FOR UA IN 1940-1941 TO COST 30 MILLIONS

United Artists Will Make Fewer Films and Concentrate on Higher Quality, New York Convention Is Told

A program calling for a minimum of 22 productions claimed to represent an investment of nearly $30,000,000 and coming from the studios of 13 independent producers, will be released by United Artists in 1940-41, it was announced by Maurice Silverstone, chief of worldwide operations of United Artists, at the company's annual convention, Monday, at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York.

The convention was attended by the sales staffs of eastern United States and Canada, and was under the chairmanship of Harry L. Gold, vice-president and eastern general sales manager. The western sales staff will convene at the Congress Hotel in Chicago, May 17, 18 and 19.

Fewer Films Because of War

Mr. Silverstone told the sales representatives that since the industry now must depend almost entirely on the domestic market for its income because of conditions abroad, United Artists' producers had decided to make fewer pictures and to direct all resources toward increasing the quality of the productions.

The producers under whose banners the films for U.A. artists will be produced are Charles Chaplin ,Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, Edward Small, Hal Roach, Sol Lesser, Ernst Lubitsch, David L. Loew and Albert Lewin, James Roosevelt, Richard Rowland and Gabriel Pascal.

"The production schedule planned by these producers represents the costliest annual output in the 21-year history of United Artists," it was said.

Mr. Selznick, head of Selznick International, addressed the convention Tuesday. He said in the future his pictures, besides being sold separately, must also be sold only after completion. He said no exhibitor would be asked to sign a contract for his product unseen.

PRODUCER AWARD FOR NEW TALENT

Another "oscar" should be added to the growing list of awards made for film work by the Academy and critics and other groups, according to Maurice Silverstone, chief executive of United Artists, who proposed, at the company's New York sales convention luncheon, Monday, that a special trophy be presented annually to the producer who, in the opinion of film critics, introduced the best new screen talent.

Mr. Silverstone said "new blood" was one of the greatest needs of the industry at the present time and thought that producers who help by introducing new talent should be rewarded. United Artists, alone or with other companies, would donate the trophy, which would be awarded by film critics.

The importance of domestic revenue and the falling off of revenue from foreign markets was stressed by company executives.

Other Tuesday speakers included Sol Lesser, producer; Lynn Farnol, director of advertising and publicity; Monroe Greenthal, exploitation manager, and Al Margolies, manager of publicity.

Harry L. Gold, eastern sales manager, presided at the closing session Wednesday, aided by Charles Stern, Bert Stearn, Haskell Masters and David Prince, district managers.

Speakers at the Wednesday session included Moe Streimer, special home office representative, and Arthur Silverstone, assistant to Mr. Gold.

UA excutives left for Chicago Wednesday night for the final convention there Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

The details of the production plans are as follows:

CHARLES CHAPLIN

Already completed and in final stages of editing is "Production No. 6," Mr. Chaplin's first film in four years. Written, directed and produced by him, "Production No. 6" will be released shortly.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN

"The Westerner," dramatizing the period in which Judge Roy Bean and Lily Langtry were leading figures in the American Southwest. This has been completed. Gary Cooper is the star, with a cast headed by Walter Brennan, Fred Stone, Doris Davenport, Forrest Tucker and Lillian Bond; direction, by William Wyler, from the screenplay by Jo Swerling and Niven Busch.

ALEXANDER KORDA

From the studios of Alexander Korda, both in Hollywood and in London, will come three productions:

"The Thief of Bagdad," in color, with a cast headed by Sabu ('Elephant Boy'), Conrad Veidt, June Duprez and John Justin. William Cameron Menzies is associate producer.

"Womanhunt," starring Vivien Leigh, based on the novel, "Gone to Earth," by Mary Webb.

"Lady in the Dark," starring Merle Oberon, with Melvyn Douglas.

DAVID O. SELZNICK

David O. Selznick will contribute two productions. Selection of stories will be made from a number now under consideration.

WALTER WANGER

From Walter Wanger will come two films:

"Foreign Correspondent," an Alfred Hitchcock production, with Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, Albert Basserman, George Sanders, Robert Benchley and Eduardo Ciannelli. Now nearing completion, screenplay by Charles Bennett and Joan Harrison, with dialogue by James Hilton.

"The Long Voyage Home," a John Ford production, from the play by Eugene O'Neill and adaptation by Dudley Nichols. Cast includes John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Mildred Natwick, Ian Hunter, Wilfrid Lawson, John Qualen, Barry Fitzgerald and Arthur Shields, under direction of John Ford for the Argosy Corporation.

EDWARD SMALL

Edward Small will be represented on the 1940-41 program with "The Corsican Brothers," by Alexandre Dumas.

HAL ROACH

Hal Roach will contribute five productions:

"Road Show," a comedy based on the Eric Hatch novel, with songs by Hoagy Carmichael. Walter Connolly has been signed for a lead.

"Niagara Falls," comedy-romance, featuring John Hubbard, Carole Landis and Billie Burke.

"Topper Returns," a follow-up to the Thorne Smith novels, "Topper" and "Topper Takes a Trip." Roland Young and Billie Burke will be featured.

"The Unholy Horde," with Lon Chaney, Jr., directed by Richard Wallace, from the screenplay by Grover Jones.

"Broadway Limited," comedy-romance, with Victor McLaglen and Victor Mature, screenplay by Grover Jones.

SOL LESSER

Sol Lesser will follow his first film for United Artists release, "Our Town," with another, title and cast of which are to be announced shortly.

ERNST LUBITSCH

Early announcement will be made of Ernst Lubitsch's 1940-41 production for United Artists release, to be presented by Sol Lesser.

DAVID L. LOEW and ALBERT LEWIN

The Loew-Lewin organization will start its career with United Artists with two productions:

"Flotsam," from the new novel by Erich Maria Remarque, starring Fredric March and directed by John Cromwell, screenplay by Talbot Jennings.

"Night Music," based on the new play by Clifford Odets.

JAMES ROOSEVELT

James Roosevelt will open his career in independent production with "Pot O' Gold," suggested by the radio program. Horace Heidt's orchestra will appear.

RICHARD ROWLAND

Richard Rowland will be represented by "Cheers for Miss Bishop," based on the novel by Bess Streeter Aldrich.

GABRIEL PASCAL

George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara," produced and directed by Gabriel Pascal, will be on the 1940-41 program. The film is now filming, with Wendy Hiller, of "Pygmalion," and Robert Morley in the leads.

Five of the 13 independent UA producers were present at the Eastern sales convention. They were Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Hal Roach, Sol Lesser and James Roosevelt.

Mr. Samuel Goldwyn arrived from Hollywood Monday and participated in the sales sessions both in New York and in Chicago.

From 20 cities in Eastern United States and in Canada, sales representatives of United Artists gathered for the New York convention.

Among the executives who attended, besides Mr. Goldwyn, were Murray Silverstone, chief of world-wide operations; L. I. Schlaifer, vice president and western sales manager; Harry D. Buckley, vice president in charge of corporate affairs; Arthur W. Kelly, vice president in charges of foreign distribution; Paul N. Lazarus, contract manager; Charles Stern, Eastern district manager; Bert M. Stearn, middle-western district manager; David Prince, southern district manager; Haskell M. Masters, Canadian district manager, and Moe Streimer, special home office representative.

Also Lynn Farnol, Monroe W. Greenthal, Albert Margolies, Sam Cohen, Arthur Silverstone, H. J. Muller, Charles M. Steele, N. A. Thompson, Walter Gould, T. P. Mulrooney, Len Daly, Phil Dow, Seymour Poe, S. W. McGrath, Jack Wrege, George Roth, Abe Dickstein, Robert Hilton, Earl J. Denison, Robert Goldfarb and R. G. Sidley.

Among the producers' representatives who were present were James A. Mulvey, vice president and eastern representative for Samuel Goldwyn; Emanuel Silverstone, Alexander Korda representative; Lowell V. Calvert, eastern representative for David O. Selznick; Harry Kosiner, eastern representative for Walter Wanger; J. J. Milstein, eastern representative for Edward Small; Thomas Walker, vice president and eastern representative for Hal Roach.

Republic Managers Confer

On Monday and Tuesday five Republic exchange managers were in New York conferring with James R. Grainger, president. Those at the meetings were: M. E. Morey, Boston; Sam Seletsky, New Haven; Arthur Newman, Albany; Jack Bellman, Buffalo, and Sam Seplowing, Detroit. Mr. Grainger left Wednesday for Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Lesser at White House

Sol Lesser and James Roosevelt were guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House, in Washington, on Tuesday night. After dining with the Roosevelts, Mr. Lesser screened his latest production, "Our Town."

Share Production Credit

Jack L. Warner, head of Warner production, announces that Hal B. Wallis and Jesse Lasky will share production credit on "The Amazing Story of Sergeant York." Pat O'Brien is being tested for the leading role.

Color Newsreels

Fox Midwest is sending its own cameraman, Cooper Jenkins, into the circuit's situations to shoot local newsreels in color. The color shots in 16 mm. film are without commercial tieups.

Two Leave Monogram

Jane Dailey and Lyle Frost, of the Monogram studio publicity department, have resigned. No replacements are planned. William Peirce continues in charge of studio advertising and publicity.

Smedley on Censor Board

Joshua Smedley, of Philadelphia, has been appointed a member of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors. He will be assistant censor under Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, board chairman.

To Vote on Reelection of Paramount Board

Paramount stockholders will meet June 18th at the New York home offices, according to notice sent out this week. Reporting on the year's activities, the notice said Barney Balaban, president, received $236,635 from the company and its subsidiary, Balaban & Katz, in 1939, one of the three highest aggregate amounts of remuneration paid by the company. The statement also listed the amounts of stock owned by the various directors.

Holdings Listed

Mr. Balaban owns 2,000 shares of Paramount common stock, according to the proxy statement. Other directors and the amounts of stock owned by each are as follows: Y. Frank Freeman owns beneficially 500 shares of second preferred and has a beneficial interest in 600 shares of second preferred; Stephen Callaghan, a board representative for Allied Owners Corp., which owns beneficially 9,900 shares of first preferred and $250,000 principal amount of 3¼ per cent convertible debentures; Harvey D. Gibson, chairman of the board and president of Manufacturers Trust Co., which owns beneficially 5,710 shares of first preferred and $3,000,000 principal amount of debentures.

Harris, 200 shares of second preferred and 200 shares of common; John D. Hertz, owns beneficially 1,000 shares of common and has a beneficial interest in an additional 100 shares of common; Austin Keough, owns beneficially 423 shares of second preferred and 559 of common; Earl I. McClintock, 100 shares of second preferred; Maurice Newton, 2,813 1/5 shares of second preferred and 8,118 of common, and has an interest in an estate which owns beneficially 900 shares of first preferred and $125,000 principal amount of debentures; E. V. Richards has a beneficial interest in 7,500 shares of second preferred; Edwin L. Weisl owns beneficially 3,200 shares of second preferred and 100 of common, and Adolph Zukor owns beneficially 200 shares of second preferred and 200 shares of common.

$853,514 to Directors

The statement said that company and its subsidiaries paid a total of $853,514 to directors and officers as remuneration for services during 1939. The amount includes the $145,705 paid Mr. Balaban by B. & K., and $3,516 to Mr. Weisl in fees for legal services to Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, of which he is a partner. Not included is $40,434 in expense allowances, of which $20,800 was paid to Mr. Balaban.

Conference Names Four

Named to the National Conference of Christians and Jews were the following members of the motion picture industry, this week: J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of Loew's.; David O. Selznick, independent producer; Frances Harmon, of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; and Lowell Thomas, newsreel commentator.

FORTY TELEVISION STATIONS AND APPLICANTS WAIT COMMERCIALIZING

Seventeen Regular Stations and Three Portables Now Operating; More Than Twenty Additional Have Filed for Licenses

Though the Federal Communication Commission still is making up its mind when television will be allowed to make its way, television activity continues all over the country. There are now 17 television stations operating; two of these broadcast regular programs and the others are conducting experimental broadcasts. Also there are three portable stations operating in conjunction with regular stations.

Applications for more than 20 additional regular stations are on file with the FCC and authorization for two more portable television transmitters is requested. Three stations have obtained construction permits and are getting ready to begin work.

Two on Regular Schedules

W2XBS, the NBC station in New York, and W6XOA, Los Angeles station of the Don Lee network, are the only stations operating on regular program schedules.

The RCA station in Camden, W3XEP, has the highest power assigned to it among the stations, 30,000 watts for both the visual and aural signal. W2XBS (NBC) is next with 12,000 watts. Philco Radio & Television, W3XE, Philadelphia, is third with 10,000, and W2XAB, New York (CBS) is fourth with 7,500.

Additional facilities to existing licensed stations are being sought by Don Lee for the erection of a 1,000 watt station in San Francisco; by the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories for 1,000 watt stations in New York and Washington; by General Electric for the re-instatement of W2XD, in Schenectady with 40 watts, and CBS and NBC are seeking additional licenses for portable units in New York.

The Applicants

The list of applicants with station locations and power requested follows:

Don Lee, San Francisco, 1,000 watts: Milwaukee Journal, Milwaukee, 1,000 watts; Crosley Corp., Cincinnati, 1,000 watts; Kansas State College of Agriculture and Applied Science, Manhattan, Kansas, 100 watts; Earle C. Anthony, Inc., Los Angeles, 1,000 watts; May Department Stores, Los Angeles, 1,000 watts; Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, New York and Washington, 1,000 watts each; Television Productions, Inc., Los Angeles, 1,000 watts; Leroy's Jewelers, Los Angeles, 1,000 watts; Travelers Broadcasting Service, Avon, Conn., 1,000 watts.

Also, Metropolitan Television, New York, 1,000 watts; Midland Broadcasting, Kansas City, 1,000 watts; Bamberger Broadcasting Service, New York, 1,000 watts; Grant Union High School District, North Sacramento, Cal., 1,000 watts; WDRC, Inc., Meriden, Conn., 1,000 watts; R. B. Eaton, Des Moines, 100 watts; CBS, New York, portable unit, 25 watts; WCAU Broadcasting, Philadelphia, 1,000 watts; Farnsworth Television and Radio Corp., Fort Wayne, Ind., 1,000 watts; Balaban & Katz, Chicago, 1,000 watts; NBC, New York, portable unit, 15 watts, with two channels; General Electric Co., Schenectady (re-instatement of W2XD), 40 watts; and Boston Edison Co., Boston, 10,000 watts.

Existing Stations

Existing stations and their affiliations follow:

W2XAB, New York, CBS, two channels, 7,500 watts; W6XAO, Los Angeles, Don Lee, two channels with a construction permit for a third, 1,000 watts; W6XDU, a Don Lee portable unit; W2XVT, Passaic, N. J., Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, 50 watts, with a construction permit for W10XKT, a portable unit; W9XAL, Kansas City, First National Television, two channels, 300 watts; W1XG, Boston, General Television Corp., with two channels, 500; the following General Electric stations, W2XH, Schenectady, 40 watts; W2XB, Albany, 10,000 watts; W2XI, New Scotland, New York, 10 watts; and a construction permit for W1XA, Bridgeport, 10,000 watts.

Also W2XBS, New York, NBC, with two channels, 12,000 watts and W2XBT, a portable unit; W3XE, Philadelphia, Philco, with two channels, 10,000 watts, and W3XP, 15 watts; W9XG, West Lafayette, Ind., Purdue University, 1,500 watts; W2XDR, New York, Radio Pictures, Inc., an affiliate of WQXR, with two channels, 1,000 watts; W3XEP, Camden, N. J., RCA, with two channels, 30,000 watts, and W3XAD, a portable unit; W9XK, Iowa City, Iowa, University of Iowa, 100 watts and W9XUI, also owned by the University, with two channels, 100 watts; W9XZV, Chicago, Zenith Radio, with two channels, 1,000 watts; and Farnsworth Television Incorporated, W3XVT, 50 watts; two channels.

1,000TH TELEVISION PROGRAM PRESENTED

NBC's television station in New York, W2XBS, celebrated its one thousandth program last week. Lowell Thomas's evening news broadcast which is heard over the NBC-Blue Network and also telecast three times a week was the anniversary program.

Alfred H. Morton, NBC's television chief, presented Mr. Thomas with a bunch of roses in honor of the occasion. Lowell Thomas, in addition to his duties as a radio and television news commentator, is also the voice of Fox Movietonews and thereby is one of the first to combine radio, television and motion picture work.

Telecast from Film Set

Last week the first actual filming of a motion picture was televised directly from the set. The Don Lee television station in Hollywood, W6XAO, televised scenes of "Dreaming Out Loud," Voco Productions and being made for RKO release. The television camera picked up Harold Young, director, giving instructions to the cast and technicians setting up lights and equipment. Jack Votion and Sam Coslow, heads of the company, Lum and Abner, Frances Langford and others in the cast appeared.

Television at Sea

On May 11th the television program of the opening of the World's Fair in New York was picked up on the liner President Roosevelt, which was then on its way to Bermuda. The experiment was conducted by RCA-NBC and the United States Lines, with the cooperation of the American Express Company. It was the first American attempt to transmit a regular program from shore to a ship at sea.

New Summer Schedule

Effective this week NBC's television station serving the New York metropolitan area is on the air from Tuesday through Saturday, instead of Wednesday through Sunday. The change in schedule is due, according to Alfred H. Morton, vice-president in charge of television, to preferences expressed in the recent poll of the television audience. Evening programs now begin at 9 P. M. instead of 8:30 P. M. "to meet conditions imposed by Daylight Time."

To Sell Baird Rights

Isidore Ostrer has been negotiating in New York for the sale of the American rights to Baird large screen television. RCA said discussions had been held with Mr. Ostrer but were terminated unsuccessfully. Allen B. Du-

Washington Hears Commission Will Reaffirm September 1st for Limited Commercial Operation; Members Study Briefs

The immediate future of commercial television in this country will be settled by the Federal Communication Commission's decision on commercialization, which is expected this week. The commission originally set September 1st for the beginning of limited commercial operations and then rescinded the order.

Last week Senator Ernest Lundeen of Minnesota charged that the commission had "delayed" settlement of the issue.

Blames Chairman Fly

Reviving in the Senate the fight against the Commission which the Senator launched last month with introduction of a resolution for an investigation of the FCC's policy, he "protested" the delay and charged it was due to the fact that Chairman James L. Fly was not on the job.

"Thousands of men could be taken into private employment at once and eventually a half million men could be given jobs if a bureau here in Washington would abandon an entirely illegal and arbitrary position," he charged. "So far as legality is concerned, the Federal Trade Commission has the authority to supervise advertising and not the FCC.

"Everyone at all connected with television was here in Washington. They could have prepared their briefs in 48 hours and had intelligent action by the commission immediately. Instead of that, so as to accommodate a few attorneys and perhaps because the chairman of the commission was leaving on a vacation trip, all these jobs in private industry were held up for weeks. I think it was ridiculous, for I believe Chairman Fly should have stayed on the job, ordered the attorneys to get their briefs in by the following Monday morning, and have a decision out of the commission that very day."

Officials Defend FCC Procedure

Officials of the FCC answer Senator Lundeen's attacks by asserting that the procedure of lengthy hearings and two weeks' time for filing of briefs was the only proper way of handling the problem so as to avoid later charges of unfairness.

In Washington it was considered likely that the Commission would reaffirm the original date of September 1st for limited commercial television operations. This also would be a compromise decision, for most of the television companies have asked for immediate full commercial operation.

Members of the Commission are studying the testimony taken at last month's television hearing and the briefs submitted.

Fight Over Standards

Although the principal companies agree on the request for commercialization there is a keen fight over television "standards." RCA-NBC and the Radio Manufacturers Association want 441-line, 30 frame per second images (as compared with the 24 frames in motion picture projection). DuMont and other companies want "flexible" standards. Equipment made by DuMont which is affiliated with Paramount Pictures can receive images at various rates and number of lines. The DuMont company has proposed the advantages of 15-frame pictures with many more than the RCA 441 lines.

DuMont Files Brief Answering Radio's Charges

In a brief filed with the FCC, DuMont charged that the Radio Corporation of America had attempted to stifle research and engineering development of television. It was asserted that RCA officials wished to "freeze" standards to protect its investment in 1,800 sets manufactured at an estimated cost of $200 each. Officials of the RCA denied the charges.

The DuMont brief said, "Control of the situation lies in the Commission, under the law, and regardless of attempted political attacks, well organized publicity campaigns, or any other factor, we assume that it will exercise its powers."

Railbourn Answers RCA

Paul Raibourn, Paramount executive and treasurer of DuMont, issued a statement denying the RCA charge that Paramount had "practical if not theoretical control" over DuMont and was attempting to "sabotage" television. Mr. Raibourn said, in part, "Paramount does not control the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories. The DuMont company's sole request to the FCC has been to maintain flexible standards instead of the rigid ones proposed by RCA and the Radio Manufacturers Association. Affiliates of Paramount Pictures in Chicago and Los Angeles have filed applications for television transmitting stations in their respective cities. We are eagerly awaiting the granting of these licenses so that we can demonstrate once and for all the superiority of flexible television."

Paramount's interest in DuMont was defended also by Mortimer Loewi, vice-president of DuMont, who asserted that the greatest need of television at the moment was a sense of showmanship and that Paramount was in a position to provide it. Mr. Loewi said that within a year theatres would start installing television screens and within five years film producing companies would find their interests "a whole lot less in pictures and more in television." He pointed out that Paramount was primarily in the entertainment business and its interest in television was a normal extension of its desire to be in the forefront of the entertainment world.

Paramount's interest in DuMont was attacked again by Robert Robins, president of the Cath-Ray Electronic Laboratories. Mr. Robins sent a telegram to Mr. Raibourn criticizing his statement on the television situation.

$1,350,000 for CBS Television

According to a brief filed with the FCC, the Columbia Broadcasting Corporation has spent over $1,350,000 in television since 1936. The annual payroll for engineers, program experts and others working on television was put at $1,350,000.

Zanuck Confers on "Chad Hanna"

Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Nunnally Johnson, screen playwright and associate producer, have held their first conference on the script and production of "Chad Hanna," and left, together last Saturday, May 11th, for Hollywood. "Chad Hanna," which will be one of the major offerings for the coming film season, was written by Walter D. Edmonds, and appeared in serial form in the Saturday Evening Post under the title, "Red Wheels Rolling."

Schmidt Named MGM Publicity Manager

Art Schmidt has been appointed publicity manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's New York department. Mr. Schmidt has been associated with Loew's, Inc., for six years as assistant to Oscar Doob. Prior to that he was publicity head of the Publix-Michigan Theatres. Mr. Doob and members of the advertising department of Loew's Theatres tendered a farewell dinner to Mr. Schmidt at Leone's Thursday, May 9th.

Eugene Murphy, New York newspaper contact man, succeeds Mr. Schmidt in handling publicity for out-of-town theatres; Tom Rogers, publicity man for the Valencia, Jamaica, succeeds to Mr. Murphy's post; Teddy Arnow moves from Westchester to the Valencia and is succeeded by Jerry Sager. Al Lippe, Newark, succeeds Mr. Sager in Manhattan, and Arthur Egberts, now in Jersey City, will in addition, handle Newark.

New York Fair Opens; Broadway Grosses Decline

The New York World's Fair began its second year, Saturday, May 11th, with an attendance of 190,196 paid admissions, followed by Sunday's 168,122 to make up a total of 358,318 for the first weekend, according to figures released by Fair officials.

The opening of the Fair, combined with the weather (sunny skies) and the European war, resulted in the lowest weekend gross for Broadway theatres in some time, with the exception of the Radio City Music Hall, where visitors from out of town were in evidence.

Among the highlights of the opening day at the Fair were a parade led by Helen Hayes, Mary Pickford, Amos 'n' Andy, and Wallace Beery with his 20 Mule Team, a giant fireworks display and the awarding of six automobiles in a limerick contest.

Amusement Area features included Billy Rose's "Aquacade"; the Fair's own show, "American Jubilee"; Michael Todd's "Streets of Paris" and three shows in Mr. Todd's "Gay New Orleans" concession, "Cotton Up," "Sazarac" and "Mardi Gras Frolic."

With 40,000,000 paying customers required to liquidate a debt of about $23,000,000 the Fair Corporation hopes that the Amusement Area will erase the deficit. Attendance last year was 25,817,265.

Hundreds of motion pictures are again being used, mostly advertising and educational films, in the scores of auditoriums. Television will be featured at the exhibits of the Radio Corporation of America, General Electric and Westinghouse. Opening day events were televised by the National Broadcasting Company.

Broadway managers, up to this week, had no definite plans for meeting the competition from the Fair. It was generally agreed that the weather would be the determining factor. If the weekends are cloudy or stormy, visitors and New Yorkers will patronize the film theatres, it was said, while the Fair will benefit if the weather is good.

Ostrer Offering Baird Apparatus To U.S. Interests

Mont Laboratories reported that it had not been a party to negotiations for Baird licensing. The Farnsworth Radio and Television Corporation is reported to assert that its licensing agreement with Baird prohibits the latter from entering the American markets with its large screen television. The Baird company denies this claim.

Television in the United States will overtake and pass British development, according to Richard Ford, television representative of the Odeon Theatres circuit of London. Mr. Ford has been in this country for several months, making an investigation. He said American manufacturers were "wise" not to attempt to introduce theatre television at this time, because American audiences are more critical than British where television in theatres commanded high prices before the war.

Zenith in "Wired" Television

The Zenith Radio Corporation is making progress in its experiments with the transmission of television over telephone wires, according to E. F. McDonald, president. The Bell Telephone Company has worked years and spent millions on this form of telephone transmission. Commander McDonald said that the transmission by this means offered an economic solution to the problem of paying for programs. The chief difficulty is that a television signal rapidly loses its strength when sent through a telephone wire. It was also announced by Zenith that production of FM radio receivers would begin as soon as the FCC assigns wave lengths.

John G. Leitch, technical supervisor of WCAU, in Philadelphia, indicated that he might conduct experiments with Frequency Modulation to determine its suitability for television. These tests will be conducted pending the granting of the station's application for a television license. The proposed station would be the first link in a Columbia Broadcasting System television network.

Film Audit Service Formed by Hacker

Samuel Hacker, an accountant formerly with First National, Columbia and Republic, has organized Film Audit Service, to do audit work for independent producers and importers of foreign pictures that distribute nationally. The larger American companies maintain their own field auditing staffs.

DeHaven Resigns

A. Milo DeHaven, for the last three and a half years general supervisor, publicity director and short subject booker for the Sam Brown Enterprises in Detroit, has resigned effective May 18th, due to illness. Previous to his connection with the Sam Brown Enterprises, Mr. De Haven was affiliated with the Chakeres theatres in Ohio as zone supervisor and personal representative of Phil Chakeres.

Czech Film Held Over

"Zborov," a picturization of the Czech fight for independence in the first World War, which opened at the Homan theatre in Chicago, has been held over for a second week, after establishing a new record for that house.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

If the name of the Carnegie Institute hadn't been linked to that offer by Samuel Harden Church, the Institute's president, to give a $1,000,000 reward for the delivery of Hitler, alive, into the custody of the League of Nations, we would have thought it was a figment of the imagination of a most imaginative motion picture press agent with a Hitler film on his hands.

The New York Post's Leonard Lyons is amused by a little incident in the book publishing business which happened after Warner Brothers decided to release their movie adaptation of Somerset Maugham's "The Letter" under the title of "The Sentence." The studio accordingly wrote to Farrar and Rinehart, the New York publishers, to say that inasmuch as the title, "The Sentence," is included in the Farrar & Rinehart book list, Warners would like to clear that title in the proper way. . . . The publishers disclaimed any knowledge of such a book—but when Warner's assured them it was true, a further checkup was made. . . . They discovered that "The Sentence" is a Grammar Pamphlet, written by Professor Barker, for the freshman class at Williams College.

A counterpart of today's anti-amusement agitators is found in the author of the following rules for employees in the original Carson, Pirie & Scott store in Chicago, 80 years ago:

"Store must be opened from 6 A. M. to 9 P. M. the year 'round.

"Store must be swept; counters, base shelves and showcases dusted; lamps trimmed, filled, and chimneys cleaned; pens made; doors and windows opened; a pail of water, also a bucket of coal brought in before breakfast (if there is time to do so), and attend to customers who call.

"The employee who is in the habit of smoking Spanish cigars, being shaved at the barber's, going to dances and other places of amusement will surely give his employer reason to be suspicious of his integrity and honesty.

Joyce Devereaux recalls the story of Negro Fighter Joe Louis, who, when asked whether he saw the motion pictures of his Louis-Schmeling fight, replied, "No, I was at the fight."

IN these modern days of swank cinema houses and the glittering array of super-colossals offered under the general heading of motion pictures, we hear some protests about the excessive footage used to give credits to cast, directors, decorators, and all the crafts that go towards making the modern movie.

This may seem like a waste of time in our present fast moving age, but to old timers, like Florida's Scott Leslie, who remembers the movies when, it won't seem so bad, for they recall how the show was always opened with a barrage of slides. The hour has come; the lights go out, and a slide flashes upon the screen, all dolled up in red, white and blue, and spelling the cheering word:

WELCOME

One slid back into his seat for he knew he had a lot more to read before the picture started, and so he "relaxed" as the slides appeared in an array something like this:

NO SMOKING PLEASE
LADIES, PLEASE REMOVE YOUR HATS
IF YOU LIKE OUR SHOW, TELL OTHERS
IF YOU DON'T—KEEP MUM.
FOR THE BEST IN GROCERIES TRADE AT WILLIAM'S GROCERY
DON'T SPIT ON THE FLOOR. REMEMBER
THE JOHNSTOWN FLOOD

Some theatres had a more subtle way of getting to the users of the eating tobacco. Their slide might read something like this:

IF YOU SPIT ON THE FLOOR AT HOME, DO
IT HERE. WE WANT YOU TO FEEL AT HOME

Such slides usually brought laughs and put the audience in good humor. So the slides continued:

MATINEE EVERY DAY
AFTER THE SHOW GET YOUR SODA WATER
AT THE GEM DRUG STORE
COMPLETE CHANGE OF PROGRAM TOMORROW

Of course everybody knew there was a change of program every day, but it was always good policy to keep telling 'em about it. After a few more advertising slides, of which the one with the picture of a boy and girl in a swell buckboard, with a prancing team of horses, their heads pulled up with check-reins as though looking at the moon, and the suggestion:

TAKE YOUR GIRL RIDING. THE BEST RIGS
IN TOWN AT HAPPY'S LIVERY STABLE

It was always a safe bet that there would be at least one stop in every reel and when a white glare showed on the screen we knew the film had broken. This always called for a loud "BOO" from the younger set. Quickly the operator shifted his lamp to the stereopticon lens again and a slide flashed:

OPERATOR HAVING TROUBLE
PLEASE BE PATIENT

Soon he had the broken ends mended and the reel was running merrily again, until the end of the reel, when the slide bellowed:

ONE MINUTE TO CHANGE REELS

While the operator was changing the reel the rewind boy regaled with another series of advertising slides to keep folks interested until the second reel started. This usually was a Western, greeted with much whistling and stamping of feet. The theatre stood for quite a bit of this, but when it got too strong the film was stopped and the lamp shifted over to a slide which read:

YOU KIDS KEEP QUIET

And so the show continued, and as the light faded out one was greeted with a slide informing him:

THOSE WHO CAME IN LATE MAY REMAIN FOR THE NEXT SHOW

or, if it happened this was the last show of the night, the slide usually appeared with a big Moon coming Over the Mountain—without Kate Smith—and the words:

ALL OUT—GOOD NIGHT

Now that Hollywood is turning to the glorification of war heroes—Jesse Lasky, for one, turning to Sergeant York, for a feature for Warners—they might consider Bert Hall. The Kentuckian, who is the only surviving-member of the original Lafayette Escadrille, has merely served in 14 different armies—both for and against the same countries in several instances, once fighting as "General Chang" for China.

Hollywood movie cameramen don't want to be called cameramen any more.

They want to be known as directors of photography.

Because of the World War. Hollywood must pay more for its wigs. RKO Radio's head makeup man estimates that the toupee's used by stars have jumped from $90 each to around $150.

Ninety percent of the hirsutical adornments used in making crowning glories for Hollywood movie stars used to be supplied by Czecho-Slovakia. Since the start of the war, professional hair growers are scarce.

Of all the talent and personality which has riden the waves of motion picture success in the art's 40-odd years of commercialization, there are but two complete collections of one man's film career in the possession of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, seat of motion picture historical gatherings, sponsored by the Whitneys and Rockefellers and others, in New York. The complete works only of Douglas Fairbanks and David Wark Griffith are in hand. Fairbanks donated 2,700,000 feet of film from the 48 pictures he had made, starting with "The Lamb" in 1915 and ending with "Mr. Robinson Crusoe," in 1932. The gift was made just before Fairbanks died, last December.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Studios Start 10

The production upsurge of the last month continued unabated this week as Hollywood's studios finished 12 pictures, started 10 and had 46 shooting, compared with the 10 completed, 10 started and 48 shooting of the week before. In preparation were 25, and 64 were being edited, against the 29 and 60 in the same categories last week.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wound up work on "Phantom Raiders" and "The Captain is a Lady"; Monogram, "Amateur Detective"; RKO Radio, "Millionaires in Prison" and "Cross Country Romance"; Republic, "Grand 'Ole Opry" and "Carson City Kid"; Twentieth Century-Fox, "Four Sons," "Girl from Avenue A," "Public Deb No. One" and "Pier 13"; and Sig Neufeld, "Frontier Crusader."

Work was started on "The Man from Fleet Street," Warner Brothers; "Junior G-Men," "I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now," "A Modern Monte Cristo" and "Slightly Tempted," Universal; "Stage to Chino," RKO; "Rhythm on the River" and "Victory," Paramount; "Escape," MGM, and "Durango Kid," Columbia.

Three short subjects were completed and the same number started.

Human Loudspeaker

Gilbert Wright's Sonovox was given a Hollywood demonstration this week, shortly before its introductory screen appearance in Paramount's forthcoming "Ghost Breakers" and Alexander Korda's "Thief of Bagdad" and "Jungle Boy."

Consisting of a sound box and two small discs placed on either side of an articulator's throat, the Sonovox is fundamentally similar to a loudspeaker but is designed to push not air but the tissues on the side of the throat, so that sounds of all types may be translated into terms of the articulator's own words, which are merely mouthed.

Demonstrated were such sounds as that of a steel guitar given a "voice" of its own, a three-day-old baby talking, and a novachord singing, with the articulator's help, its own accompaniment to "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," all these coming from phonograph records of the original sound to which had been added a human voice made to speak or sing with the sound of the original. Film sound track using the new principle included rushes of a ship's fog horn and of a buzz saw, both "talking."

A most immediately anticipated motion picture use of the device, in addition to the animated cartoon possibilities to which Walt Disney already has acquired the rights, is in foreign print versions. It is claimed that with the use of the Sonovox, American film players would be able to give the appearance of speaking naturally in any foreign tongue, simply by having someone familiar with the particular foreign language use the Sonovox in conjunction with the player's own voice.

A screen writer and the son of Harold Bell Wright, inventor Gilbert Wright has been working on the device for over a year.

Tests prints were sent to both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System, but Lester Cowan, film producer and Mr. Wright's business partner, believes the best results will be obtained by limiting the use of the Sonovox to one radio program a year for the present, and to only two or three films a year, to afford artistic development and less emphasis on purely comedy results.

Selznick Retires Debentures; Seen Aiding Reorganization

Reorganization of the Selznick-International Pictures company along simplified lines was reported facilitated this week by the retirement of its $2,900,000 issue of six per cent debentures, which constitutes the entire investment in the company, leaving only the common stock outstanding.

The company authorized the debenture retirement, which eliminates such debenture holders as Norma Shearer and C. V. Whitney. Chief possessors of common stock in the company are David O. Selznick, John Hay Whitney, and Mrs. Joan Payson, sister of Mr. Whitney.

The proceedings were said to clear the way for the approval by stockholders of a reorganization plan, when such a plan has been formulated.

RKO Stockholders Meet June 5th

More than 4,000 theatres in the country have signed for Warner Brothers' "Cavalcade of Academy Awards" film, Gradwell A. Sears, the company's vice-president in charge of production, said this week.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Lillian Russell

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

The Gay Era

The life and loves of Lillian Russell, belle of another generation, are brought to the screen by Alice Faye in a motion picture into which Darryl F. Zanuck has incorporated the wealth of elements out of which production experience spells entertainment—glamour, song, costume brilliance, famous names and places, and action.

The adaptation of the autobiographical material for a supporting cast headed by Edward Arnold, Henry Fonda and Don Ameche, gives a basis for able performance of the parts of Diamond Jim Brady, Alexander Moore, Edward Solomon, Tony Pastor and Jesse Lewisohn. Like the story Miss Russell wrote herself, the picture omits mention of two of her four marriages.

The film narrative follows her career from her birth as Helen Leonard in Clinton, Iowa, back in Civil War days.

Tony Pastor makes her a sensational success and she becomes the toast of New York. She marries Edward Solomon and they go to London where his temperament eventually costs her her job. A daughter is born to them and Solomon dies soon after. Lillian stars in London and then returns to New York in a Weber and Fields production. Old courtships are resumed and, after romantic complications, she marries Alexander Moore.

The extended cast names are evidence in themselves of the ammunition given the exhibitor for his paper. Warren William is there as Jesse Lewisohn, and Leo Carrillo is Tony Pastor. Nigel Bruce and Claude Allister portray Gilbert and Sullivan. And these are but samplings from the list.

Previewed at the Alvin Theatre, Pittsburgh, before an audience composed of newspaper critics, visiting and local, and social and civic dignitaries who applauded especially the song hits which Miss Russell had popularized, Weber and Fields, and Eddie Foy as portrayed by his son, and those scenes which particularly brought home the memories of days not so dim in a past not so far away.—THEODORE J. An Angel from Texas

Comedy

Comedy is the hallmark of this picture, which has the show business as a theme. The "angel" of the title is a Texas greenhorn who arrives in New York with $20,000. He plans to enter the hotel business but the money is invested in a Broadway show when two fast-talking shoestring producers get hold on him.

Eddie Albert plays the Texan, Wayne Morris and Ronald Reagan the shoestring producers. Rosemary Lane is a Texas girl, working in the producers' office, who aspires to the stage. Jane Wyman, as the wife of Reagan isn't averse to going to the aid of the greenhorn at the expense of her husband. Ruth Terry plays an actress and John Litel a gangster.

"Mac McClure" and "Marty Allen" have a show all set for rehearsal—except the money. "Valerie," given the lead role, threatens reprisals at the hands of a gangster, if the show isn't ready on schedule. Into this scene walks "Peter Colman," the Texan. His $20,000 goes into the production but he drives a hard bargain. He wants "Lydia Weston" to play the lead.

The play goes into rehearsal as a straight drama and gives every indication of being a flop. "Mac McClure" and "Allen," threatened by "Valerie," offer the entire interest in the show to "Colman," who raises the money. The show is a success as a farce. When a plagiarism suit seems imminent "Colman" sells the show back to the two producers and leaves them holding the well-known bag.

Reviewed at the Palace theatre, New York. The audience chuckled.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Waterloo Bridge

(MGM)

Wartime Drama

This first Vivien Leigh vehicle since "Gone With the Wind" deals, as did the Robert E. Sherwood play from which it derives, with the living and dying of a girl in wartime London who, believing her sweetheart killed in battle, adopts "the world's oldest profession" as a means of livelihood and then, following his return and after preparing to marry him without telling him how she's been earning a living during his absence, commits suicide. Though World War I is the conflict pertained to, an immediacy and timeliness of interest is achieved by opening and closing sequences showing the man in the case, played by Robert Taylor, leaving London for service in World War II.

In common with the Sherwood play, the Mervyn LeRoy film treats of subject matter—emotions, impulses, ethical considerations—traditionally regarded as restricted, for entertainment purposes, to adult uses. Depiction of street-walking, for instance, is literal, and dialogue pointing out that what a principal refers to as "the easiest way" is inaccurately described by that phrase, are materials not frequently seen on the screen in recent years.

The picture is produced with manifest fidelity to time and setting and on a budgetary scale betokening anticipation that Miss Leigh's first performance since "G.W.T.W." will receive sharp attention.

Previewed at Grauman's Chinese theatre, Hollywood, where an audience in which press and profession predominated received the film with much praise and considerable applause.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Distributed by Loew's, Inc. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Producer, Sidney Franklin. Screen play by S. N. Behrman, Hans Rameau and George Froeschel. Play by Robert E. Sherwood. Photographed by Joseph Ruttenberg. Edited by George Boemler. P. C. A. Certificate No. 6169. Release date, May 17, 1940. Running time, 103 minutes. Adult audience classification.

simplest of props to indicate place and a narrator providing the element of time. As designed by William Cameron Menzies, who worked in similar capacity on "Gone With the Wind," the film version makes use of backgrounds but retains the narrator in the person of Frank Craven, again describing time as well as event.

The screen play by Messrs. Wilder and Craven and Harry Chandlee depicts the everyday life of a small New Hampshire town in the years prior to the first World War. The romance of a boy and a girl, the births and marriages and deaths in the families of the town doctor and the town newspaper editor, are presented in cross section. The dramatic impact results from the sense of continuity in such homely daily occurrences as the delivery of the town's newspapers and its morning milk, the countless preparations of breakfasts, lunches, dinners.

The events are described beforehand by the narrator, who is seen on the screen rather than talking from outside the film frame. The picture shows the events in a "This is how it happened" vein, instead of letting them develop in ordinary plot form. The result is that suspense comes from the method under which the events take place, rather than from the events themselves. Judging by preview night audience reaction, the technique succeeded.

The unusual treatment indicates to showmen the advisability of emphasizing the importance of seeing this production from the start.

Sam Wood's direction accentuated the film's mood of understatement.

The picture was produced by Sol Lesser, his first for United Artists release.

Those Were the Days

(At Good Old Siwash)

(Paramount)

Collegiate Reminiscence

Using as its story-telling technique the medium of an anniversary dinner which devolves into flashbacks of the tale recounted there, "Those Were the Days" recounts collegiate romance and high-jinks of the 1904 era.

The screen play by Don Hartman, based on the George Fitch "Siwash" stories, has William Holden in the role of a fresh young freshman whose pranks, including the kidnapping of the town's trolley car, land him before the local judge. Granted a stay for a week, the young man devotes it to courtship of the judge's daughter as a means of getting his sentence remitted, and finds romance in the process.

Seen as the girl in the case is Bonita Granville, with Ezra Stone cast as the class' awkward young man with Judith Barrett its vamp. Vaughan Glase is the judge whose chief offender becomes his son-in-law.

Produced and directed by Ted Reed, the picture's amiable depiction of life at "Siwash" just after the turn of the century seemed, judging by comment and applause, highly satisfactory to a preview crowd apparently more than anxious to forget Europe's wars for an evening.

You Can't Fool Your Wife

(RKO-Radio)

Marital Farce

This Cliff Reid production deals with a marriage nearing the rocks because of mother-in-law trouble and a lack of romance. The principals become involved in plot and counter plot, but rejoin each other happily at the end. After calling his mother-in-law an old goat, a statement which her daughter does not deny and which often is repeated, the man in question, a timid accountant, is tossed out of the home by his wife because she misunderstands his motives in staying out late several nights in a row.

One of the heads of the auditing firm with whom the husband then lives, has the wife impersonate at a masquerade party a famous actress, to lure her mate back, but the plot backfires when the real actress shows up.

Switching back and forth, matters become complicated and the husband, after mistaking the actress for his wife and then his wife for the actress, takes the one he believes to be the actress to his apartment.

His wife, after a lot of maneuvering to "see just how far he has been around" during their separation, undresses and goes to bed. When he demands a goodnight kiss, she slaps him, reveals her identity as his wife and returns home. He follows, telling her he knew it was she all the time, and everything is smooth.

The lines and situations demand adult audiences.

Lucille Ball and James Ellison play the leads, and the mother-in-law is portrayed by Emma Dunn, Robert Coote, Virginia Vale, Elaine Shepard, William Halligan and Oscar O'Shea support.

Hidden Gold

(Paramount)

Western Melodrama

Assaying a higher content of plausibility than most diggings in the Hopalong Cassidy vein, this unfamiliarly routined testimonial to the vigor and rigors of life in the Old West represents producer Harry Sherman at the peak of his ripe experience. There is no breakdown of plot, no advance disclosure of outcome, no stretching of coincidence, and no skimping of riding and gunplay. There is scenic background fit for filming in its own behalf.

"Hopalong" sets out in an original screen play by Gerald Geraghty and Jack Mersereau, directed by Lesley Selander, to learn why a certain gold miner's shipments invariably are stolen from a stagecoach never held up when carrying other freight. Suspicion veers between various members of the cast, and justice is achieved in a hail of lead.

Apart from the melodramatic interest sustained, Britt Wood and Ethel Wales conduct a humorous romance.

La Conga Nights

(Universal)

Hugh Herbert Holiday

Casting Hugh Herbert in six roles, "La Conga Nights" stresses farce aspects in a tale of a boarding house turned into a successful night club.

Mr. Herbert appears not only as the music loving head of a real estate firm but as his own mother and four of his sisters, with results providing a preview night audience with considerable occasion for hilarity. Dennis O'Keefe, Constance Moore, Ferike Boros, Joe Brown, Jr., Eddie Quillan, Armida and Sally Payne round out the cast, the first two supplying the romantic interest.

The original screen play, by Jay Dratler, Harry Clork and Paul Smith, is primarily used as a framework for the Herbert gestures and grimaces. Lew Landers directed and Ken Goldsmith was associate producer. Frank Skinner and Sam Lerner contributed three songs.

Gaucho Serenade

(Republic)

Gene Autry

There is a departure from the western formula in Gene Autry's latest. A motor trip across-country with a horse trailer attached takes most of the footage. The occupants of the car are Autry, "Frog" (Smiley Burnette), June Storey and Mary Lee. The concession to matters western comes at the end and even that is different, the whole amounting to entertainment, with attention to detail in production, for the general audience. The reactions of the socalled Western fans doubtless will be a factor in whether more of this kind are made.

"Gaucho Serenade" also continues the practice of employing a popular song of the day, as did "Rancho Grande" and "South of the Border." In this latest production two songs share attention, "The Singing Hills" and "The Gaucho Serenade," augmented by "Give Out with a Song," "A Song at Sunset," "Wooing of Kitty Macfuty," "Rollin' Home" and "Headin' for the Wide Open Spaces," with Autry, Burnette, Mary Lee, Duncan Renaldo and Smith Ballew participating.

An English school boy arrives in America to visit his father, who is in San Quentin on embezzlers' trumped up charges but has led his son to believe him the owner of a vast property in the west known as "Rancho San Quentin. At the dock he meets "Gene" and "Frog." On the way west the three pick up "Joyce," who has left a would be bridegroom at the altar, and her young sister "Patsy." The embezzlers catch up with the caravan but are routed by "Gene" and "Frog." "Joyce's" ranch has been renamed "Rancho San Quentin" for the occasion. "Ronnie's" father escapes from prison, turns up at the ranch and, when he learns the boy is in good hands, returns to prison. In the meantime "Gene" and his crew are making sure the embezzlers get theirs.

Men without Souls

(Columbia)

Prison Melodrama

Following the trend of prison pictures, Columbia presents in "Men without Souls" a gang of the most ruthless convicts that ever attempted an escape. Barton MacLane, ofttimes seen in the "Torchy Blane" series as the crusading detective, returns to a role of gang leader.

Under the direction of Nick Grinde, John Litel plays the prison chaplain, and Glenn Ford, a comparative newcomer, the young man who has himself sent to the prison to avenge his father's death at the instigation of a prison guard.

Dramatic sequences include "Reverend Storm's" solo march across the prison yard in the face of gunfire to send the prisoners back to their cells. There are a boiler room explosion, gun fights and an eleventh hour reprieve.

Rochelle Hudson is the feminine lead, but appears in only one scene. Others in supporting roles are Eddie Laughton, Cy Kendall and Dick Curtis.

Unusual Occupations, No. L9-5

(Paramount)

Autry's and Others'

Gene Autry, adjudged by exhibitors the number one film cowboy of the last two years, has a hobby and it's horses, despite his recordings and radio programs in addition to his motion pictures. Here in color the star appears to advantage as he puts his horses, including Champ, through their paces. He sings, too, at the start and the end. Other matters gone into in this subject are landscape "painting" with nature's materials, stamp collecting, sarong making and the rebuilding, piece by piece, of Java's oldest temple. Running time, 10 minutes.

Unusual Occupations, L9-4

(Paramount)

Interesting

This array from the Unusual Occupations series offers some examples of distinguished economic livelihoods that have the appearance of hobbies. There is a young woman from New Jersey who has trained herself to the world championship of her sex in bag punching, and on the other side of the Hudson river there resides a New York City dentist who as a pastime shifts his talents from dental bridge building to constructing miniature models of bridges, merry-go-rounds and ferris wheels from an abundant supply of toothpicks. Away out on the West Coast a wealthy gentleman collects to the valued worth of half a million dollars an exhibition of relics from the romantic era of the wild west. A mid-western woman paints pictures on cobwebs, and an English craftsman fashions those tall fur toppers that grace the high head of the Coldstream Guard regiment. Whether hobby or work, the display is entertaining and, perhaps, inspiring.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Ted Husing is the narrator.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Clever Looney Tune

Glamor boys and girls of the screen are not the only subjects of temperament and ambition. The traits are common to cartoon characters as well. Porky is induced by the glib talk of Daffy Duck to have his pen and ink creator, Leon Schlesinger, release him from his contract in order to allow him to go in for more serious work as an actor. Of course, the barnyard Booth meets with lamentable failure, the while Daffy is attempting to succeed the porcine personality as star in the Looney Tunes roster. The old "Out of the Inkwell" technique of having drawn characters mingle with real persons is used to novel and amusing effects.—Running time, seven minutes.

Playmates from the Wild

Trained otters, something different, are the faithful and friendly playmates of their trainer, Emil Liers. They are shown sliding and gliding on their tummies down the sand dunes of Daytona Beach, swimming in the surf and following their master at the toot of his whistle. They chase snakes, crabs and whatnot, and come under the heading of cute. Narrated by Ted Husing.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Granite Hotel

Stone Age Cartoon

The Stone Age cartoon series continues with a number set in a prehistoric hotel. The hotel has telephones and a cash register but the rest of the hotel's accommodations are scarcely accommodations. Stone age or not, the Fleischer touch, the devices of a fertile imagination, are in evidence. The fire department, which arrives by dinosaur in response to a call from a patron who wanted a partner for checkers, razes the hotel but doesn't dampen the spirits of the hotel's telephone operator, who still insists that nothing ever happens at the Granite.—Running time, 7 minutes.

A Kick in Time

(Paramount)

Color Cartoon

Another in the Max Fleischer color cartoon series on the adventures of Hunky and Spunky, this has Spunky straying from his mother's side and into the hands of a mule auctioneer. Spunky is sold to a junk dealer under whose none too gentle guidance the donkey suffers extensively. The mother, however, meets up with the young donkey in the nick of time, saving him from sure destruction under the wheels of a trolley car. The junk dealer also is taken care of, to the mother's satisfaction.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Gun Dog's Life

(Vitaphone)

Canine Color Parade

The audience appeal of this canine diary study from the Color Parade lineup is practically universal. There is material for the sporting element of any community and, in the attractiveness of the dog subjects, for the countless lovers of man's best friend. Opening on a family scene with a young pup being told about his father's career as a sporting dog, the miniature reviews the different hunting techniques of springer spaniels, pointers and Labrador Retriever. The scene of a trio of pointers with the two outside dogs pointing to the middle hound freezing on the scent was noted particularly. Color and an amusing commentary contribute to an outstanding screen subject.

COOPERATE AND GAIN CONCESSIONS, IS WAR POLICY OF BRITISH LABOR

Studio and Theatre Employees Look to Employers for More Favorable Contracts in Return for Legislative Support

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Inspired no doubt by the belief that he who pays the piper has a right to call the tune, labor organizations within the British industry are currently allowing a certain note of cockahoop confidence to creep into their deliberations and statements. Studio employees, through their Association, theatre workers throught theirs, have each in its place performed services of note to their employers. Now they look for reciprocity and return.

Aid in Parliament Cited

With the British Quota Act as yet saved from the scrapheap, the Association of Cine Technicians have not hesitated to claim credit for the discovery within three days of the declaration of War that the Board of Trade had intended to cast it on the legislative junk heap. In their turn the National Association of Kine and Theatrical Employees, who lent valuable Parliamentary aid to the industry in the process of legislative midwifery, have backed the new exhibitor appeal for a rebatement of the theatre tax. Both parties, with these services a valuable arguing point, are pressing for wage increases and for other concessions. Both parties as a result are likely to get them, if they are not in fact so doing already.

A significant and potent factor in this situation is that the Labor unions, through their direct association with the Trades Union Congress, have a manifold parliamentary mouthpiece, can secure lobbying, Commons questions, and a voice in debate, as an automatic process. Other industry branches must rely upon the interest of individual and scattered Members of Parliament.

United on Quota

The tendency to trade marriage—labor spokesmen recently admitted the War had found them strange bedfellows—does not trace back only to September last. A certain conciliation and mood of arbitration had begun to seep into employer and employee relations some time before. Labor and Capital launched a solid and united front over the Quota Act, and so far as fighting for protection for British production is concerned, it has been maintained. The intervention of a more friendly spirit achieved positive results in the London and Home Counties area in the form of wage and hour agreements between exhibitors and theatre workers. The process is being repeated all over the country. The CEA has, in fact, in many areas, found Labor Councillors and local legislators frequently not only ready to listen to pleas and suggestions but ready and enthusiastic to collaborate on trade matters.

There is no doubt that the CEA case to Sir John Simon for a cut in the theatre tax must have sounded more convincing to him in that it had not only the weight of exhibitor pleading but the logical and whole hearted support not only of the theatre union, the NATKE, but the blessing of the Trades Union Congress. The concessions made over the reservation of projectionists came as a direct result of joint exhibitor and labor persuasion. To many trade branches it seems a pity that a like unity of front had not been possible over the Quota problem. It is to the credit of the Labor unions that their case has remained fixed and not in the fluid and chemical condition of the producers' policies.

GEORGE ELVIN, secretary of the Association of Cine Technicians, "our private sleuth hound" as President Anthony Asquith called him, whose work in the interest of Labour is claimed to have saved the Films Act from the scrap heap, and who is currently leading the studio employees in the industry's Ligne Maginot.

So far as the Association of Cine Technicians is concerned their total demands are not likely to find much backing outside their own exclusive circles. Whilst with one hand they ask for wage increases and war bonuses, work hard and assiduously for a wages and hours agreement with the Production Association, chide the newsreels and the laboratories for not falling into line, the one refusing even to negotiate and the other for having backsliders in their midst who do not clear up outstanding matters on overtime, victimization and so forth, they go the whole hog on general politics and demand the nationalization of the entire industry.

Nationalization Demand Made

A demand for nationalization was made at the recent Annual Conference of the ACT, moved and passed with but six dissentients. Fears of Fascism voiced by the minority did not deter the Marxist stalwarts from lamenting the inability of private enterprise to produce a satisfactory number of films, and invoking the Government to take over the business lock, stock and barrel, compensating stockholders on a basis of past profits earned.

This wholehearted subscription to the doctrines of Socialism, however, is carried on under the fluttering and proudly flaunted Union Jack, for the ACT, welcoming "any new measures to help the industry," including the Credit Bank, insists that those employed in any films aided by the Bank shall be exclusively British.

Whilst too, the Association welcomes State intervention in the industry in the Ministry of Information's activities, it watches with a jealous eye any tendency to allow the Ministry's films to count as Quota, has even had its work cut out securing approved wages and working conditions for the employees of the Government controlled Post Office Film Unit.

Demands Are Reasonable

All in all, the policies and programmes of the main Labor groups carry little—with the obvious exception of the nationalization plea, this probably a concession to political window dressing—which strikes at the foundations of the industry. Probing the ACT program as made evident in its Conference resolutions there appear demands for better Air Raid Protection provisions for studio staffs, protection for members now working in National Service, the revision of the regulations governing the admission of foreign technicians and so forth. The demands for wage bonuses and increases—dependent greatly on the Simon attitude to the theatre tax in the case of the theatre workers union—will not be dismissed out of hand. A united front on general trade policy, with the employees' organizations pulling their weight, is likely to bring equivalent recognition in the most welcome material form.

While they have been lending the weight of their approval to the plea for projectionists to be placed on the list of reserved occupations the theatre workers group have not opposed the training of women as projectionists. Already some 300 odd are being coached in the highly skilled work, and when ready will be employed as third and fourth grades in the box. Already 33⅓ per cent of projectionists have been called to the colors. Conceding to their exhibitor confreres the principle of women in the box the NATKE have managed to obtain safeguards on wages and hours which will not allow the system to be exploited to the detriment of the males. In Bristol, for instance, they have refused any collaboration until such safeguards have been agreed to by local exhibitors.

MAJORS SETTLE N. J. TRUST CASE; U. S. STARTS PROBE OF CONTRACTS

Mori-Landis Action Against Warners at Philadelphia Is Dropped; Blumberg Defends Pooling of Theatres

Principal motion picture trust suit attention was turned this week to the Philadelphia territory, scene of many a trade practice battle, where the majors quite unexpectedly effected a settlement, last Friday, of the independent Mori-Ladis New Jersey action being prosecuted in Philadelphia Federal Court, and where the Department of Justice started, Monday, inspecting Philadelphia territory film contracts and records for information intended in the Government's "key" New York anti-trust action—the opening trial date of which is still June 3rd.

Continuing its pre-trial examination of witnesses in the New York action. the Department of Justice this week called to the stand Nate Blumberg, president of the non-circuit owning Universal Pictures, who defended theatre pools; Charles Moscowitz, Loew circuit executive, who said that his circuit acted independently of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in product buying, and Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew president, who was to take the stand on Thursday.

The Government's working staff for the New York anti-trust trial, under Thurman Arnold, are shown above after they had set up headquarters in New York. Seated: John F. Clagett, Paul Williams, William P. Farnsworth. Standing: J. Stephen Doyle, Jr.; James M. Malloy, J. Frank Cunningham, and H. G. Robinson.

The Mori-Landis Settlement

The Mori-Landis theatre anti-trust suit against Warner Brothers theatres in Philadelphia and the large distributors, which promised to be a sort of preview of the Government's New York anti-trust action since the court called for all master contracts to be produced, was settled out of court last Friday, May 10, on which date it was scheduled for a final hearing later before Judge William H. Kirkpatrick in the United States district court in Philadelphia.

The settlement was reached by State Senator Harry Shapiro and William B. Rudenko, attorneys for the Landis, a Vineland, N. J., house, and Morris Wolf, counsel for the Warner theatre circuit. After a long series of postponements, during which time both sides vigorously denied that an out of court settlement was being considered, it became apparent the day of the trial that the case would never come to court when Judge Kirkpatrick, less than an hour before court opened, advised the clerk that the case had been "continued indefinitely."

The terms of settlement were not disclosed, both sides jointly stating that "a settlement has been reached satisfactory to both parties." However, it is understood that the terms give the Landis priority in first-runs over the Warner house in Vineland, which was the basis of the suit.

The case, which had resolved itself as one of the most important court tests involving the picture industry, was also the first in which an independent had registered a partial victory against the majors. Judge Kirkpatrick last November 6 ruled that the defendants were guilty of violating the Federal anti-trust laws and granted a temporary injunction against the defendants, but on February 9, the injunction was vacated by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals on the grounds that the hearings had not been completed.

It also marks the second settlement made by the same defendants in local anti-trust action, a similar arrangement having been made with Harry Fried, suburban operator. Of the remaining suits filed, only one is scheduled to be tried during this court session. May 28 is set as the date for the Admiral Theatre, Philadelphia, action against Warners et al. The Admiral, as the others pending, also seeks triple damages allowed under the anti-trust laws, asking $225,000 on the grounds that the theatre's product was cut off when it tried to cut the price of admission to compete with chain theatres in its vicinity. Again, denials of any expectant settlement are registered by Irvin A. Winegrad, attorney for Rubin Shapiro, operating the Admiral, and Warners' Morris Wolf.

"This case is entirely different and we are preparing to fight it," said Wolf. "We are not discussing settlement and don't intend to."

Government Inspects Philadelphia Files

The United States Department of Justice this week started to inspect the licensing contracts and other records of the large film companies for the Philadelphia area, preliminary to its "key" New York anti-trust case, scheduled to begin on June 3d, in Federal Courthouse, Foley Square, New York, before trial judge Henry Goddard.

The inspection of the Philadelphia area records is the result of a compromise reached last week between attorneys for it and the defense. This compromise, it was said by the defense lawyers, forestalled a Government motion for an order to compel them to allow the Government examination of such records.

The Justice Department was to examine Loew's records first; then Warners; then Paramount's. The scope of the records available to the Government attorneys not proving wide enough, another conference would be held with the majors' attorneys, it was said.

Court Considers Fox Petition

Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard Tuesday told Fox attorneys he was "inclined" to deny an application of Twentieth Century-Fox to dismiss the Government's anti-trust suit against 19 of its officers and directors after reserving decision on the motion.

Assurance by the court was given John F. Caskey, attorney for Twentieth Century-Fox, that a "careful consideration" would be given the merits of the move before a decision is rendered.

Mr. Caskey argued a dismissal was warranted because, he said, the Government had failed to produce evidence that any of the defendants had committed acts of conspiracy. The Government's complaint, its bill of particulars and its answers to interrogatories had in no way implicated these defendants, he said.

The Government never has claimed that the 133 individuals listed as defendants were guilty of personal violations of the anti-trust laws, Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, answered. The Department of Justice does not question the good faith of these defendants, Mr. Williams continued, but had included them because "a corporation can only act through its officers and agents."

The U. S. attorney said the normal functions of the distributors were violative of the law because of "vertical integration of production, distribution and exhibition."

Mr. Caskey was supported by Daniel O. Hastings, former U. S. Senator, and a Twentieth Century-Fox director, in his appeal for a dismissal. Mr. Hastings claimed it was unfair for the Government to require him and others in his position to attend a trial "which may take months or even years."

Furthermore, he said, in the event of the granting of a decree to the Government, officers of the various companies might be subjected to a number of suits by exhibitors.

Earlier in the hearing, Mr. Caskey contended the Government had brought in the individual defendants in the hope that an "admission" by one would bind the others. He argued that the inclusion of all the officers avoided the necessity on the part of the Government of proving authority by a defendant to make an "admission."

Mr. Caskey said he had carefully read 219 out of the 229 anti-trust suits which the Government had filed since the Sherman Law had been enacted. He contended that in none of these suits had there been so flimsy an excuse to name officers of companies charged with violations.

Blumberg Defends Theatre Pooling

Theatre pooling "enables a company to put the right pictures in the right houses" and his company, Universal, has no trouble securing preferred playing time in theatres though it does not own theatres, Nate Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures, testified in pre-trial examination, Thursday, May 9th, in the Government's "key" New York anti-trust prosecution of the majors.

Mr. Blumberg noted that in several Minnesota cities both RKO and Paramount had found too many theatres for the product available, and had combined the theatres, reducing the number of first runs and turning losses into profits, Mr. Blumberg asserted.

Universal executives have not discussed acquisition of theatres, during his presidency, Mr. Blumberg said. Then, on the advice of his counsel, Edward C. Raftery, he refused to say whether it would be to Universal's advantage to own theatres.

Other major executives, of companies controlling affiliated circuits, have said in other pre-trial testimony that it was advantageous for a film company to have a constant destination for its product, and an advantage to the circuit to have at least one constant source of product.

When he was head of the RKO circuit, it used considerable numbers of independent films, Mr. Blumberg testified. He cited the product of Republic, Monogram and Gaumont British.

He added that, while at RKO, he had noted considerable "friction" between the theatre department and the distribution department; that "they wouldn't even let me in the studio"; and that he had found it difficult to obtain rental reductions from the distribution department.

Moskowitz Claims No Loew's Discrimination

The theatre department of Loew's makes no distinction between MGM product and that of other companies, Charles C. Moskowitz, head of the New York metropolitan district for the circuit, told Government attorneys, in pre-trial examination, Friday, May 10th.

In negotiating for the circuit, with MGM, he found the going as "tough" as that which might be found by any other circuit, he asserted, and added that he was motivated by a determination "not to let these people upstairs in MGM make a sucker out of me." Whatever preference is given to MGM product is given "because it has better product than any other company," and the treatment given each picture by the Loew circuit depended upon the picture's merits, Mr. Moskowitz claimed.

The examination by Justice Department attorney John F. Clagett brought in complaints made against Loew's by exhibitors, for alleged unreasonable clearance. Mr. Moskowitz averred that few complaints had been made. Questioned on the Century circuit situation, he replied that, for many years, that circuit had not raised the clearance issue.

He noted that his circuit never played a picture for less time than the contract called for; and so, the circuit had not had to discuss adjustments.

Additionally, Mr. Moskowitz explained, the Loew circuit had no fixed policy on theatre acquisition; it bought theatres where it felt their operation would be profitable.

MARX BROTHERS MAKE 16MM. FILM OF SHOW

The Marx Brothers with a company of 30 are giving the story material for their next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Marx Brothers Go West", a tryout in the Midwest.

Previously the comedians have experimented with a series of personal appearances before making a picture. The idea has been to determine which gags are the best laugh getters. This year, however, they are doing their checking of laughs and action in a new way. They are making 16mm. films of the show and recording the audience reaction simultaneously.

This filming of the act shows what action takes place while the dialogue is being read.

Nicholas M. Schenck Testimony Scheduled

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., was to take the witness stand on Thursday, May 16th, in the Government's series of pre-trial examinations.

Government Calls Jesse Goldburg

Federal Judge Edward A. Conger on Tuesday granted permission to the Government to subpoena Jessie J. Goldburg, independent producer in Los Angeles, to testify at the trial of the "key" anti-trust suits. Goldburg was described as a "material" witness in an affidavit of Mr. Williams annexed to the order.

Prepare for Schine Case in Buffalo

Attorneys for the Government were busy this week, and will be for some time, preparing their bills of particulars, to serve against the Schine brothers and their circuit, and the majors, in the Buffalo territory, in one of the Government's "field" cases, to affect large independent circuits as well as the majors. However, terms of an order for the Government to serve the bills, filed last Wednesday, make certain that the case will be delayed at least three months.

Federal Judge John Knight in Buffalo federal court, last Wednesday, directed the Justice Department to serve the defendants with bills of particulars within 60 days; and he also allowed the latter 40 days after receiving the bills, to answer.

Other defendants, apart from the Schines, are Warner Brothers, Loew's, Inc., Vitagraph, Paramount Pictures, and Paramount Film Distributing Corporation.

Majors' Oklahoma Lawyer Confers in New York

Following the Department of Justices' motion, last week, to have dismissed its case against the Griffith Amusement Company and the majors, in Oklahoma City Federal Court, Judge C. B. Cochrane, chief counsel for the majors in that suit, conferred briefly with other major company counsel in New York, late last week, to determine future procedure.

The Government's move for dismissal, seen as a maneuver to reintroduce the case at another time, elsewhere, or to pave the way for an appeal against serving of bills of particulars, to obtain a precedent ruling—was to be heard before Federal Judge Edgar Vaight, in Oklahoma City, on Thursday.

The defendants this week filed replies waiving their rights to require the Government to file additional information. They said they did not wish a dismissal.

UA Loses Dismissal Plea in Folley Suit

Ruling the United Artists was properly included as a defendant even if the contention that it was not engaged in interstate commerce was corrected, Federal Judge Vincent T. Leibell denied the application of that company to dismiss the anti-trust suit of the Folley Amusement Holding Corporation.

The suit seeks $750,000 in triple damages from the eight majors, the Randforce Amusement Corporation, Republic and Monogram on the grounds that inability to obtain product forced it to close the Folley theatre, Brooklyn.

The judge decided that the court had jurisdicton and United Artists was properly a defendant because it was charged with conspiring to restrict interstate commerce by preventing other companies from dealing with the plaintiff.

Plan Three in Georgia

Construction will start soon on three new Georgia community theatres as the result of leases signed by Mion & Murray, Inc., Atlanta theatre operators. The three leases are for 15 years and call for rentals aggregating $218,500, while cost of the projects will approximate more than $100,000. The theatres will be in the Little Five Points section, another in East Point and the third in Decatur.

New Documentary Film

Joris Ivens, documentary film director who directed "Spanish Earth" and "The 400 Million," is making a new picture for the Educational Film Institute of New York University. The film will deal with new economic frontiers in America.

Spanish Language Picture

Columbia's Spanish language release, "Melodias de Antano," produced in Mexico City, has broken house records at the Teatro Alameda, in that city. The American distributor has rights to the picture in all countries outside of Mexico.

Wins Magazine Award

Barbara Luddy, leading woman of "Campana's First Nighter" radio program, a Columbia Broadcasting System presentation, has been named the "best radio" actress in Movie and Radio Guide's 1940 poll.

Hyman Succeeds Gardner

Edgar Hyman has been named head of Paramount's Detroit neighborhood theatres succeeding Leo Gardner, who recently resigned.

RE IS A GREAT PRODUCER...

Today—even in the face of difficult times and restricted markets—United Artists holds its 21 year leadership firmly, with the largest number of distinguished producers in its history. These producers realize that today, more than ever, outstanding productions are needed and will continue to back their judgment with their own personal fortunes and resources in the creation of the finest product our organization has ever been privileged to handle. With complete freedom for individuality, their plans for the 1940-41 season will give an impetus to the box office of theatres everywhere.

RELEASED THRU UNITED ARTISTS

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

[The notes on this page concerning British production were mailed from London April 25th.]

On Time

Consolidating his reputation for working to schedule, George King, director, has now completed final sequences of British Lion's "The Frightened Lady" and the picture is in the cutting room. Some 200 artists were used in a scene depicting a village dance. Leslie Norman is now editing the film. The story is said to contain comedy, thrills and melodrama, and the cast includes John Warwick, Helen Haye, Marius Goring, George Merritt and Ronald Shiner.

27 Speaking Roles

With more than half of "Busman's Holiday" completed, Arthur Woods, director, took his cameras into the somber cellars of Talboys, old Devonshire farmhouse where Robert Montgomery, Constance Cummings and Leslie Banks are seeking to solve the mystery.

Exteriors are yet to be taken in a village street and thatched Devonshire inn. Sequences have been shot depicting a search on the moors and a car crash. Twenty-seven speaking roles are held in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British film, which is an adaptation of one of the Lord Peter Wimsey stories.

Torpedoes and Bombs

The wartime role of Britain's navy again is depicted in "Convoy," Ealing Studios' production now drawing to a conclusion. Pen Tennyson is directing the picture, which dramatizes the work of Britain's warships in providing a free passage for her merchant fleet and in safeguarding neutral vessels from enemy torpedoes and bombs.

The Admiralty have collaborated, naval battles have been reconstructed and players have worked in an atmosphere of smoke, shells and bursting bombs.

As soon as "Convoy" is concluded Michael Balcon will send Walter Forde to work on the new Tommy Trinder comedy, "Sailors Three," which, as it title suggests, also will have a naval background.

Preparations also are advanced for the next George Formby film, tentatively known as "Formby Number Ten."

To Ealing Studios now has come Albert Cavalcanti, documentary producer-director, who has earned local fame as producer for the G.P.O. Unit. Cavalcanti as director will collaborate with Balcon as producer on a subject tentatively entitled "John and Marianne," a dramatization of the ancient feud between Breton and Cornish fishing fleets. The theme shows how, when danger threatens the two countries, old quarrels are forgotten. It will not, however, be a documentary.

The story is being written by Hugh Gray, with Pat Kirwan, author of "Convoy," collaborating. Gray previously was associated with Alexander Korda.

PHYLLIS CALVERT, Britain's first wartime star discovery. She has been placed under long term contract by Gaumont British-Gainsborough. After stage experience as a dancer and actress she played in the Gainsborough productions "They Came by Night" and "Charley's Aunt."

GN's Third Studio

Grand National now has taken over Worton Hall Studios, the third studio under its control, and acquired the product of Leslie Howard Productions.

Howard is to make, for Grand National release, a film version of De Vere Stacpoole's "The Man Who Lost Himself," in which he himself will star. It probably will be made at Worton Hall.

Currently in production at Worton Hall is Jack Raymond's "You Will Remember," based on the life of the composer Leslie Stuart, who wrote "Lily of Laguna," "Little Dolly Day Dreams" and "Soldiers of the Queen."

In the cast are Robert Morley and Emlyn Williams, with Dorothy Hyson also in an important role.

That music will play a dominant role is evidenced by the engagement of the London Symphony Orchestra and the massed bands of the Grenadier Guards.

Also due for early production at Worton Hall is "Under Your Hat," in which London stage and film stars Jack Hulbert and Cicely Courtneidge will be directed by Thornton Freeland.

At Twickenham, another Grand National studio, Frances Day and Vic Oliver still are working on "Room for Two."

"Alibi," in which Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood are to play, is due for production under the Grand National banner.

Shaw Film

Work has been launched on Gabriel Pascal's new Shaw film, "Major Barbara." The unit is in Devon on location. Studio sequences are to start at once. Pascal has been six months on intensive preparation for the film and has assembled a cast which includes Wendy Hiller, Robert Morley, Andrew Osborn, Marie Lohr, Penelope Dudley Ward, Walter Hudd, David Tree, Robert Newton, Emlyn Williams and many more well-known players.

Harold French is dialogue director, and Osmond Borradaile will be responsible for exteriors.

Gangster Story

After a "holiday" for a few weeks, Teddington again has burst into production with a gangster story, "Fingers," which is being directed by Herbert Mason with "Doc" Salomon in charge of production. "Fingers" is about an East End gang leader who becomes involved with a London society girl. In the cast are Leonora Corbett, Clifford Evans and Esmond Knight.

War Theme

War, particularly its naval aspects, continues to inspire contemporary British films. It has inspired "Neutral Port," which Gainsborough is making at Shepherds Bush Studios for release by General Film Distributors. Will Fyffe again stars, in the role of a merchant skipper, with a cast which includes Leslie Banks, Yvonne Arnaud, Phyllis Calvert and Wally Patch.

"Neutral Port" is from an original story by J. B. Williams and is being directed by Marcel Varnel.

Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black are again in charge.

Itemized

The invasion of Norway complicated the last Formby film, "Let George Do It," as the locale of much of the story was Bergen, a neutral center of Nazi espionage. A subtitle has been inserted reading "Scandinavia, 1939—before Hitler came."

Now in Canada with the objective of making a film under the Ortus Productions banner is Michael Powell, who has with him as associate producer Roland Gillett, loaned for that purpose from British National, for whom he is production manager.

Emeric Pressburger, who wrote "Spy in Black" and "Contraband," is writing it.

Impressed by a rough cut version of "Gentlemen of Venture," made by British Eagle Productions at Elstree, Ralph Hanbury, managing director of RKO Radio, ordered sufficient copies of the film printed for distribution to international exchanges of RKO Radio.

'Trash' in Films Only when Public Wants It: Selznick

"Trashy" motion pictures are wanted by the public, not by the producer, "but even trash has increased our effectiveness by building an audience for production of books that very few people would read," David O. Selznick, president of Selznick International Pictures, told the "New Frontiers in the United States" clinic of the University of Rochester, on Thursday, May 9th, at the last of the three day session, at the Eastman Theatre.

David Sarnoff, president of The Radio Corporation of America, another guest speaker, emphasized the value of man as a unit in the world's progress, saying: "Civilized progress is made, not by machines but by men and women; not by populations or regiments of human beings but by individuals," and that the present world status called for "the old-fashioned virtues of faith and courage, as well as for the new fashioned education."

In the round-table discussions, the radio and screen executives exchanged sallies on the virtues of their respective industries.

The motion picture industry offers youth a new frontier, Mr. Selznick said, and though Hollywood's gates virtually had slammed in the face of newcomers, he felt that those who had "talent, irrepressible desire, and plain guts" would break in.

Whatever trash appeared in motion pictures was merely an extension of the public's taste for cheap stage shows and cheap magazines, he said and the producers would not, without the support of the public, have the finances to produce more of the better pictures.

Mr. Sarnoff claimed that radio had raised the cultural level of the American people because it reached masses not touched by any other entertainment medium.

On the advantages of television, the screen producer and radio leader agreed. Mr. Sarnoff said the motion picture industry should use television as an outlet. Mr. Selznick thought the industry should "take advantage" of television, and noted that those in the film industry most opposed to television were theatre owners. People will always congregate in motion picture theatres, he asserted.

Mr. Sarnoff predicted that pocket radios, with individual wave lengths, were "on the scientific horizon."

Mr. Selznick, in an interview, declared against block booking, and said better films were the only answer to losses in the foreign market.

Buxbaums Honored

Harry H. Buxbaum, New York manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Mrs. Buxbaum were honored at a luncheon Friday, May 10th, at Dinty Moore's, on their 25th anniversary. Attending were J. J. Lee, Morris Sanders, Elliott McManus, Moe Kurtz, Abe Blumstein, William Schuster, Seymour Florin, Joseph St. Clair, George Blenderman, Al Mendelson, J. J. Wolff, Herman Rieper, Robert Yentes, John Wienberg, Tom Gibbons, John Benas, Harry H. Buxbaum, Jr., and Louis Pincus.

Summer Course in Films At Columbia University

A course in the History and Art of the Motion Picture (English s49) will be given this summer at Columbia University. The course is offered during the regular academic year to a limited number of students but enrollment in the Summer Session is open to all interested in films. The course in films will be under the direction of Dr. Duncan B. M. Emrich of the Department of English and Comparative Literature.

Columbia University announced that visiting lecturers will include representative members of the motion picture industry, directors, publicity men, representatives of the story departments, actors and actresses. Students will attend previews and theatre showings as a regular part of the class work.

New Nickel-Slot Device Announced

A nickel-in-the-slot motion picture machine has been developed by Emil Hollander and Phil Shaftel, it was announced this week. The machine, which has been named Movietrola, has been building two and a half years and is owned by the Movietrola Corporation of America, located in the Strand Theatre Building, New York.

The machine will permit choice of film subjects to patrons according to Mr. Hollander, who says: "It is really a multiple film projector. That is, a single projector having a number of individual film mounts—each of which is composed of an endless mechanism and a complete film subject of approximately 100 feet of 16 mm. film, having a playing time of three minutes which is the playing time of a phonograph record.

Demonstrate Phonovision

Sam Sax and Frank Orsatti demonstrated the Phonovision machine at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel, New York, Thursday, May 10th. The machine, a coin-operated projection device, designed for use in hotels, restaurants, clubs and similar locations, is manufactured by the Phonovision Corporation of America, a Hollywood company. It is encased in a cabinet six feet high by three feet wide. It is self-winding and requires no operator. Inside is a 16 mm. rear projection machine which throws pictures on a screen 21 inches high by 28 inches wide. The cabinet holds 10 three-minute subjects or three 10 minute subjects.

Allied Wants Machines Taxed

Allied States' directors, following a weekend meeting in Washington, on Monday announced that they will seek to have applied to nickel-in-the-slot machines all of the "laws, ordinances, regulations and taxes" to which motion picture theatres are subjected.

A Columbus, Ohio, city ordinance just adopted gives the city jurisdiction over any place where motion pictures or television pictures are shown.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association, New York, in its house organ, The Independent, calls the coin-operated machine "a definite threat to our business" and says "the sad part of it is that many of the companies are being sponsored by men who are active in the production end of pictures today."

Fred Mills, president of Mills Novelty Company, Chicago, and his brother, Hayden, are in Hollywood to discuss with Henry Henigson, general manager of Globe Productions, plans for the production of three minute short subjects to be shown in coin-operated automatic projectors.

RKO Increases Working Capital Over 9 Millions

RKO has increased its working capital by $9,618,330 through its emergence from reorganization, which occurred early this year, according to information filed by the company with the New York Stock Exchange in connection with the new RKO stock listing application, which has been given tentative approval by the Exchange. The application involves 2,753,053 shares of new RKO common stock and 128,170 shares of new preferred. The tentative approval is subject to later action by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The Exchange's conditional approval includes RKO's listing application on notice of issuing an additional 6,338,133 shares of common stock, which are provided for future conversions of preferred into common and the exercise of subscription warrants. Listing of the new stock is not expected before June.

The pro-forma consolidated balance sheet giving effect to the RKO plan of reorganization shows current assets of the new company as $20,976,613, of which $8,398,844 is cash. Current liabilities as of Jan. 1 are $5,845,234, leaving working capital of $15,131,379.

Interest in 113 Theatres

Just prior to the reorganization, RKO had current assets of $19,649,469 and current liabilities of $14,136,420, leaving working capital of $5,513,049.

RKO has a 50 per cent or greater interest in 113 theatres. Of these, 49 are wholly owned, 10 are constructed on leased land and 54 are leased from others, according to the company's report. Rent paid for theatres by RKO in 1939 amounted to $2,127,354, exclusive of taxes. The company's average theatre lease has 19¾ years to run.

The company's three largest stockholders are listed as Atlas Corp., which has 29,216 shares of new RKO preferred stock, or 22.79 per cent of the total issue, 719,518 shares of common, or 26.14 per cent, and 327,811 stock option warrants, or 12.81 per cent of the total; RCA, owning 44,757 shares of new preferred, or 34.92 per cent of the total, 316,327 shares of common, or 11.49 per cent of the total, and 555,253 option warrants, or 21.69 per cent; and Rockefeller Center, which has 563,629 shares of new common, or 20.47 per cent of the issue outstanding.

RKO's normal foreign gross was 32 per cent of its total revenue. Since the war, a special inventory reduction of $392,777 was made as a result of the company's revision of film amortization tables.

Atlas Merger Off

The proposed merger of the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan of reorganization adopted for RKO and a large stockholder of that company, and Curtiss Wright corporation will not take place, it was revealed in statements issued Friday, May 10th, by Floyd B. Odlum, president of Atlas, and Guy W. Vaughan, president of Curtiss Wright.

SEND-OFF FOR 'EDISON' AND 'LILLIAN RUSSELL'

Pittsburgh and Clinton, Ia., Introduce "Lillian Russell"; "Edison" Premieres in Oranges

Twentieth Century-Fox this week conducted another fanfare field premiere, this time for its new "Lillian Russell" and in two cities, Pittsburgh and Clinton, Iowa, while Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer opened "Edison, the Man," with civic celebrations in New Jersey's Oranges, on the scene where the inventor spent his life.

Governor, Mayor at "Lillian Russell" Gala

Visitors for the "Lillian Russell" openings were greeted in Iowa by Governor George H. Wilson and May Pape of Clinton and in Pittsburgh by Mayor Scully. Herman Wobber, general sales manager and William Sussman, Eastern sales manager, attended the Pittsburgh opening, and William C. Gehring, Central sales manager, was at Clinton, Iowa.

Political officials, motorcycle police, and several bands paraded through Homestead, East Liberty and downtown Pittsburgh Tuesday to begin the two-day buildup for the co-premiere Wednesday night at the Harris Alvin and Senator theatres.

Headed by Alice Faye and Edward Arnold, who flew in by special plane with Mr. and Mrs. John Harris, and 69 newspapermen from 13 eastern cities who arrived at Union Station by train an hour before the Hollywood players, the trek from the airport wound up in front of City Hall, where Mayor Cornelius D. Scully presented keys to the city.

Scribes and stars officially met at a cocktail party-luncheon at the Variety Club, after which they toured the Heinz plant, the Buhl Planetarium, and the Mellon Institute.

Attention also centered on the $100-per-plate charity dinner held at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night in the William Penn Urban Room, catered by Jacques Bustanoby from a menu for a similar dinner given years ago by "Diamond Jim" Brady to Miss Russell. Proceeds go to Variety Club's Camp O'Connell for Boys. A fireworks display on a specially-built barge in the Allegheny River, open to the public, and a visit by the newsmen to the Roller Derby at The Gardens, and to a nearby brewery was scheduled to follow the dinner.

Miss Faye Honorary Mayor

Proclaimed "Lillian Russell Day" by Mayor Scully, Wednesday began with Miss Faye being named honorary mayor for the day and Mr. Arnold honorary director of public works.

Miss Faye, Arnold, and other visiting film folk were introduced from the Alvin stage prior to an 8:30 broadcast. Air coverage before and after the premiere included comments from first-night dignitaries and reviews.

Arrangements were handled by Rodney Bush and Christy Wilburt of the Twentieth Century-Fox New York office, in collaboration with George Tyson and Ken Hoel of the Harris Co.

Tickets for the opening night were $1.10. The regular run opened Thursday morning at the usual prices of 25, 35 and 50 cents.

Gay Nineties at Clinton

In Clinton, Iowa, the "Lillian Russell" premiere marked the climax of a three day "Gay Nineties" celebration. Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Mary Healy and Arleen Whelan and newspapermen attended the opening which was held in the Capitol and Rialto theatres. Earl Wingart, assisted by Eddie Solomon, handled publicity for the Clinton showing.

"Lillian Russell" opened Friday, May 17th, at the Roxy theatre, in New York. That night Alice Faye and Edward Arnold appeared in a radio preview of the picture over the Kate Smith Hour.

Second "Edison" Film Opens in Six Theatres

"Edison, the Man," MGM's sequel to "Young Tom Edison," opened Thursday night in six theatres in the Oranges, N. J., the section of the country in which the inventor spent much of his life.

The opening originally was scheduled for the following four theatres: Hollywood, East Orange; Cameo, South Orange; Palace, Orange, and Windsor, West Orange. Two additional houses, the Colonial, Orange and the State, West Orange, were added to the list.

High Point of "Pageant"

The premiere was the high point of the "Pageant of Progress," honoring Thomas A. Edison. Governor A. Harry Moore had declared Thursday a state holiday. Spencer Tracy, star of "Edison, the Man," Rita Johnson, featured in the cast, and Ann Rutherford, attended the ceremonies and the premiere. A parade was held through the Oranges and a white oak was planted at the Edison home in West Orange.

On Tuesday a late photograph of Edison, measuring 22 by 28 feet, was put on display in front of the West Orange Municipal Building. After the photograph was unveiled by Mrs. Edison-Hughes, wife of the late inventor, it was illuminated by what was called the brightest spotlight in the world.

One 30,000 watt electric light and 25 smaller lamps were used. It was said that 11,522 of Edison's original electric lamps would have been required to produce the same amount of illumination

"Frozen" Light Flask Opened

A flask of "frozen" light, with a temperature of 320 degrees below zero, was opened for the first time in public as part of the "Edison Pageant of Progress" Parade. The "frozen" light has been developed in the General Electric laboratories in Schenectady.

Also featured in the parade were New Jersey's mechanized military units, some 45 floats and a number of bands.

Clarence Brown, the director, flew East for the opening. Charles Edison, Secretary of the Navy, and other political and civic leaders were scheduled to attend.

Scenes from the parade and the premiere were telecast by NBC. At 8:30 P. M. the program was carried from the Hollywood Theatre in Orange and the parade was covered at 3:15. Ray Forrest, television announcer, gave the descriptions.

Other Premiere Developments

The opening of Paramount's "Those Were the Days" will be held May 21st in Galesburg, Illinois. Newspaper men from Illinois and Iowa, stars from Hollywood and winners of the All-American college queen contest will be special guests. Also present will be Mrs. George Fitch, widow of the author of "At Good Old Siwash," on which the film is based.

For the opening of producer Sol Lesser's "Our Town" in Boston, on May 23d, with simultaneous showings at the Loew's State and Orpheum theatres, United Artists and Loew's officials were conferring last week, in the New England city.

FROM READERS

EXHIBITOR PROTESTS FILM REVIVALS

To the Editor of the Herald:

Attached you will find an editorial which I clipped from the New Orleans Item.

It is not often that we find someone not in our business who sympathizes with our problems, and it is noteworthy to all exhibitors when such a one does show interest enough to write an editorial.

The condition the editorial describes is a fast growing nucleus which if not checked would soon do us out of tonight's film rental as well as next month's rent. However, I do not agree with the editor that it is a new worry to the movie moguls. The movie moguls (producers and distributors) are the very ones who are allowing this to happen. It is we, small exhibitors, who are going to suffer.—I. M. Gauthier, Fairyland Theatre, White Castle, La.

Following is the text of the editorial, under the heading "Repeaters":

"Movie moguls have a new worry. It is still a little worry, but it may grow. Schools, culture clubs and other groups have taken to screening over again the better produce of the studios of other years. Thus the Vassar Club of Louisiana this week has revived 'The Little Minister,' starring Katharine Hepburn.

"Folks who have just bought a 'Five-foot Shelf' of the literary classics won't be buying new fiction for at least a few weeks. Those who are intent on radio programs and those who are turning back to 'The Little Minister' or 'The Patriot' or 'The Informer' won't be contributing their usual quota to Hollywood's revenues. It's a sad world in which your own best past performances return to do you out of next month's rent."

Announce 16mm. Program

Bald Eagle Film Productions, New Haven, a 16mm. producer of educational and commercial short subjects, reports early Fall release of "Geometry Brought to Life," first of a series of nine educational subjects. Other subjects in production are film versions of Robert Frost's "Mending Wall" and Edwin Markham's "Man with the Hoe."

Powell in Liberty Post

Herman Rifkin, president of the Liberty Theatre Corporation, Springfield, Mass., has appointed William T. Powell general manager of his theatre interests, which includes five theatres in Springfield, as well as theatres in Holyoke and Northampton. In the past 14 years Mr. Powell has been associated with Paramount Theatre subsidiaries.

Award to Gertrude Lawrence

Gertrude Lawrence for her work in "Skylark" has received the annual award for the "best" Broadway performance at the annual luncheon of the Comoedia Theatre Club, held last week in New York. Raymond Massey won the award last year.

Prepare Disney Group

RKO is preparing to release three Walt Disney short subjects as a unit to be known as the "Walt Disney Academy Award Special." The subjects are "The Ugly Duckling," "The Old Mill" and "Ferdinand the Bull."

44 LEGISLATIVE ATTACKS ON FILMS IN CONGRESS IN PAST 16 YEARS

Made by Fifteen Legislators, Two of Them in Senate; Culkin Sponsored Seven; All Bills Died in Committee

When the organized industry's legal and legislative forces went to Washington, Monday, led by Charles Clyde Pettijohn, Hays organization general counsel, to oppose passage of the Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely-sponsored anti-block booking bill (S.280), they took with them evidence that the industry has been singled out for 44 different legislative attacks since 1934.

The 44 attempts were made to regulate either production, distribution or exhibition, or, all three, or to conduct sweeping investigation of the industry. Many of them sought to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission to censor and control the industry.

By 15 Legislators

Fifteen Federal legislators have conducted the 44 attacks, only two of them having been made in the Senate, by Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart, sponsoring five different attacks, and Senator Matthew Neely, with four.

The high was established by Congressman Culkin, in the House, where he sponsored seven attacks. Congressmen Cannon and Celler each sponsored five, Congressman Patman three, Congressmen Upshaw, Hudson, Lankford, Sirovich, Pettengill and Edmiston, two each, and Congressmen Swope, Hobbs and Dies, one each.

All died in committee, and most of them never even reached public discussion or hearings. Senator Neely's anti-block booking bill of one year ago, which was re-introduced this session, were both passed by the Senate, but not by the House.

Description of Bills

Following is a description of the 44 bills and resolutions introduced in Washington between 1924 and 1940 having to do with the regulation of production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures, or investigation of the industry.

UPSHAW H.R. 6821 February 9, 1924

To create a commission to be known as the Federal Motion Picture Commission.

UPSHAW H.R. 6233 December 21, 1925

Similar bill.

SWOOPE H.R. 4094 December 8, 1925

Similar bill.

BROOKHART S. 1667 December 13, 1927

To prevent obstruction and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted motion pictures, and to prevent the restraint upon the free competition in production, distribution, and exhibition of, and to prevent further monopolization of the business of, by prohibiting blind booking and block booking and by prohibiting arbitrary allocation of such films by distributors to theatres in which they or other distributors have an interest, and by prohibiting arbitrary refusal to book or sell such films to exhibitors in which they have no such interest.

CANNON H.R. 9298 January 13, 1928

Similar bill.

CELLER H.R. 10087 January 26, 1928

Similar bill.

HUDSON H.R. 13686 May 11, 1928

To protect the industry against unfair trade practices and monopoly, to provide settlement of complaints of unfair dealings, to provide for the manufacture of wholesome pictures at the sources of production, and to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission.

CANNON H.R. 45 April 15, 1929

To prohibit the importation and interstate transportation of films of certain crimes.

BROOKHART S. 1944 September 30, 1929 (Calendar day October 24)

To create an Industrial Art Commission .

BROOKHART S. 1003 May 7, 1929

To prevent the obstruction of and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in motion pictures, and prevent restraint upon free competition in production, distribution and exhibition, and prevent further monopolization of the business (a) by prohibiting blind booking and block booking; (b) by prohibiting arbitrary allocation of such films by producers and distributors to theatres in which they or other producers and distributors have an interest; (c) by making unlawful the arbitrary refusal by producers or distributors to furnish such films to theatres in which they have no interest; (d) and by making unlawful any system for the arbitration of disputes arising out of the lease or license of such films which is imposed on the exhibitor against his will and/or which is enforced by the coercive action of producers or distributors not parties to the dispute.

LANKFORD H.R. 8767 January 17, 1930

To prohibit the showing on Sunday of films transported in interstate commerce and to prohibit Sunday shows, performances, and exhibitions by theatrical troupes travelling in interstate commerce.

HUDSON H.R. 9986 February 17, 1930

To protect the industry against unfair trade practices and monopoly; to provide settlement of complaints of unfair dealings; to provide for the manufacture of wholesome pictures, at the source of production, and to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission.

CANNON H.R. 4530 December 8, 1931

To prohibit the importation and interstate transportation of films of certain crimes.

LANKFORD H.R. 215 December 8, 1931

To create a Department of General Welfare to include among other things the control of radio and motion pictures. To provide radio and screen service as may be desired and approved for all schools, colleges, churches, missions, lodges, unions, hospitals, patriotic organizations, etc., provided, however, that no such motion picture service shall be "antagonistic to the United States government or the welfare of the people" and provided "that the expense of producing and furnishing such films, motion picture apparatus and radio service shall be without cost to the people of the United States as patrons or users and that no admission charge shall be made."

BROOKHART S. 3770 February 23, 1932

To prevent the obstruction of and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted films, and to prevent restraint upon free competition in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films (a) by prohibiting the compulsory block-booking; (b) by making unlawful unreasonable and discriminatory protection in favor of certain theatres over others; (c) to compel the furnishing of accurate synopses of all pictures offered to theatre operators before the same have been released and reviewed; and (d) to amend section two of the Clayton Act to make it apply to license agreements and leases as well as sales in interstate commerce.

BROOKHART S. Res. 170 February 23, 1932

To authorize the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce to investigate the motion picture industry and MPPDA; to inquire into the diligence shown by the Department of Justice and Federal Trade Commission in prosecuting violations of the antitrust laws by picture companies; to investigate efforts of theatre owning producers to regulate admission prices of independent theatres; to investigate the capitalization of the larger companies in the industry and methods by which they are financed; to investigate relations, corporate, contractual and otherwise between producers and distributors and the manufacturers of electrical equipment for reproducing sound in theatres, the principal music publishing houses and the manufacturers of screen trailers; to investigate the Copyright Protection Bureau, the "motion picture code," etc.

CANNON H.R. 15 March 9, 1933

To prohibit the importation and interstate transportation of films or pictorial representation of certain crimes.

CELLER H.R. 3654 March 16, 1933

To prevent obstruction and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted motion pictures. and to prevent the restraint upon the free competition in production, distribution, and exhibition, and to prevent the further monopolization of the business by prohibiting blind booking and block booking and by prohibiting arbitrary allocation of such films by distributors to theatres in which they or other distributors have an interest, direct or indirect, and by prohibiting the arbitrary refusal to book or sell such films to exhibitors in which they have no such interest.

SIROVICH H. Res. 80 March 29, 1933

To create a committee composed of seven members of the House to sit and act at hearings to conduct an investigation and study of all matters relating to production, licensing, sale, distribution, financing, incorporation, commercial operations, banking, theatre leasing or ownership, realty, sound production, and all other related and interrelated combinations, affiliations, and organizations of production, distribution, license, lease or sale and presentation or exhibition of the product of and by organizations of all character engaged in and/or associated or affiliated or financially or commercially interested in the industry and of all matters and acts relating to or concerned with the issuance and/or sales or hypothecation of industry securities of all forms by such organizations directly or through agents or other means, or by banking or security-selling organizations or their associates or affiliates, etc.

SIROVICH H. Res. 95 April 3, 1933

Similar bill.

PATMAN H.R. 6097 June 12, 1933

To provide for inspecting, classifying, and cataloguing motion pictures, both before they enter interstate or foreign commerce and to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission.

PATMAN H.R. 8686 March 16, 1934

To prevent the obstruction of and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted motion pictures and to prevent restraint upon free competition in production, distribution and exhibition (a) by prohibiting the compulsory block booking of films; (b) to compel the furnishing of accurate synopses of all pictures offered to theatre operators before the same have been released and reviewed and (c) to amend section two of the Clayton Act to make it apply to license agreements and leases as well as sales in interstate commerce.

CANNON H.R. 9901 June 11, 1934

Prohibiting the transportation in interstate commerce of any questionable film.

CULKIN H.R. 9912 June 12, 1934

To protect the industry against unfair trade practices and monnopoly; to provide just settlement of complaints of unfair dealings; to provide for the manufacture of wholesome pictures, at the sources of production, and to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission.

PATMAN H. Res. 144 1934

To investimate the motion picture industry. Referred to the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

CELLER H.R. 142 January 3, 1935

To prevent obstruction and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in motion pictures, and to prevent the restraint upon the free competition of films, and to prevent the further monopolization of the business by prohibiting blind booking and block booking and by prohibiting the arbitrary allocation of such films by distributors to theatres in which they or other distributors have an interest, direct or indirect, and by prohibiting the arbitrary refusal to book or sell such films to exhibitors in which they have no such interest.

CELLER H.R. 8877 July 16, 1935

Similar bill.

CULKIN H.R. 4757 January 25, 1935

To prevent the obstruction of and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted films and to prevent restraint upon free competition in the production, distribution, and exhibition of films; (a) by prohibiting compulsory block booking; (b) to compel the furnishing of accurate synopses of all pictures offered to theatre operators before the same have been released and reviewed; and (c) to amend section two of the Clayton Act to make it apply to license agreements and leases as well as sales in interstate commerce.

CULKIN H.R. 2999 January 3, 1935 (Calendar day January 7)

To protect the industry against unfair trade practices and monopoly; to provide just settlement of complaints of unfair dealings; to provide for the manufacture of wholesome motion pictures, at the sources of production and to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission.

PETTENGILL H.R. 6472 March 6, 1935

To prohibit and to prevent "compulsory block booking" and "blind selling."

NEELY S. 3012 May 13, 1935 (Calendar day June 6)

Similar bill.

THE LEGISLATIVE SCORE

CULKIN H.R. 22 January 5, 1937

To protect the industry against unfair trade practices and monopoly; to provide just settlement of complaints of unfair dealings; to provide for the manufacture of wholesome pictures, both silent and talking, at the sources of production; to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission, to define its powers; and for other purposes.

CULKIN H.R. 23 January 5, 1937

To prevent the obstruction of and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted motion pictures and to prevent restraint upon free competition in production, distribution, and exhibition; (a) by prohibiting compulsory block booking; (b) to compel the furnishing of accurate synopses of all pictures offered to theatre operators before the same have been released and reviewed; and (c) to amend section two of the Clayton Act to make it apply to license agreements and leases as well as sales in interstate commerce.

PETTENGILL H.R. 1669 January 5, 1937

To prohibit and to prevent "compulsory block-booking" and "blind buying."

NEELY S. 153 January 6, 1937

Similar bill.

HOBBS H. Res. 160 March 19, 1937

To authorize the Committee on the Judiciary of the House to make a sweeping investigation of the organization, financing, and practices of the industry; to investigate the MPPDA; to investigate the members of said MPPDA in relation to exhibition contracts, zoning and protection, compulsory block booking and blind selling, and other unfair practices; to investigate theatre-owning producers regulating admission prices; to investigate the relations—corporate, contractual, and otherwise—between producers and distributors of motion pictures and the manufacturers of electrical equipment for reproducing sound in theatres, the principal music publishing houses and so-called screen trailers; to investigate percentage playing, compulsory designation of play dates, etc.

DIES H. Res. 217 May 20, 1937

To authorize a committee of seven members of the House, appointed by the Speaker, not more than five of whom to be of same political party, to investigate the industry in the United States; to ascertain whether monopoly exists; whether unfair trade practices exist; whether "cutthroat" competition exists; whether the employees of the motion picture industry are receiving fair wages for reasonable hours of work; activities of members of organizations and associations of exhibitors, distributors or producers to monopolize business, prevent competition and to ascertain total membership of such organizations, amount of money raised, amount of salary paid officers, amount of money expended; whether ownership of stock by producer in exhibiting corporations tends to create monopoly and unfair competition, whether producers should be divorced from exhibition or distribution; whether uniform exhibition contracts, allocation of product, unfair zoning and protection, block booking, etc., result in unfair trade practices; efforts of theatre-owning producers to regulate admission prices and what legislation is needed to correct the abuses in the motion picture industry.

EDMISTON H.R. 10077 March 29, 1938

To prohibit and to prevent "compulsory block-booking" and "blind selling."

EDMISTON H.R. 145 January 3, 1939

To prohibit and to prevent "compulsory block booking" and "blind selling."

CULKIN H.R. 244 January 3, 1939

To prevent the obstruction of and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in copyrighted motion pictures and to prevent restraint upon free competition in production, distribution, and exhibition; (a) by prohibiting compulsory block booking; (b) to compel the furnishing of accurate synopses of all pictures offered to theatre operators before the same have been released and reviewed; and (c) to amend section two of the Clayton Act to make it apply to license agreements and leases as well as sales in interstate commerce.

CULKIN H.R. 250 January 3, 1939

To protect the motion picture industry against unfair trade practices and monopoly; to provide just settlement of complaints of unfair dealings; to provide for the manufacture of wholesome pictures, at the sources of production; to create a Federal Motion Picture Commission.

CELLER H.R. 1810 January 5, 1939

To prevent obstruction and burdens upon interstate trade and commerce in films, and to prevent the restraint upon the free competition in the production, distribution, and exhibition, and to prevent the further monopolization of the business by prohibiting blind booking and block booking and by prohibiting the arbitrary allocation of such films by distributors to theatres in which they or other distributors have an interest, direct or indirect, and by prohibiting the arbitrary refusal to book or sell such films to exhibitors in which they have no such interest.

NEELY S. 280 January 4, 1939

To prohibit and to prevent "compulsory block booking" and "blind selling."

NEELY S. 3735 April 9, 1940
(legislative day April 8)

To prohibit producers and distributors of films engaged in interstate commerce from owning, controlling, managing, operating, or having any interest in motion picture theatres in the United States.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 9

Bluebook School Question No. 9 was: "(A) Name the various functions of a wiring diagram. (B) Name six methods by which grid voltage supply may be provided in an amplifier. (C) What plate voltage do amplifiers require?"

J. R. Prater replies to Section A and B as follows: "To enable projectionists to identify every circuit and every part, which he should label with a symbol corresponding to the same symbol used in the schematic diagram of the amplifier, or whatever it may be. Some manufacturers mark the actual parts of the apparatus with the proper symbols, through this is not the common practice. Moreover, such markings are not too reliable, since they may and often do fade, or become obscured by dirt; also replacement parts may have the same markings or none at all. Secondly, diagrams clearly indicate every part of an apparatus, some of which are not visible as one examines the apparatus, unless covers, panels or other parts be first removed.

"Thirdly, and highly important, to enable projectionists to trace rapidly and with comparative ease all wires and their connections. In the apparatus itself it often is very difficult to trace the actual wiring, since color coding may, due in part to heat, have almost wholly faded; also several wires not infrequently may be bound together in the form of a cable; also, wires may run back of, or under, parts where they cannot be seen.

"Fourth, the diagram provides a more rapid, more easy way of locating individual parts without referring from the schematic to the actual parts. This is especially valuable when apparatus with which the individual is unfamiliar is installed. While the wiring dagram is not so indispensable as the schematic, it nevertheless usually makes it possible to save precious minutes when clearing up trouble while a shutdown is impending.

"(B) Six methods by which grid voltage supply may be provided in an amplifier are:

(1) By a small dry battery, usually referred to as a 'C' battery, connected negative to grid, positive to cathode; (2) By a voltage drop in the d.c. filament supply. This is accomplished by wiring a resistor in series between the negative side of the filament and the negative side of the filament supply circuit. When the grid is wired to the negative end of the resistor, the grid is negative with respect to the filament by as many volts as the voltage drop across the resistor;

(3) By a similar voltage-drop resistor in the plate or 'B' circuit. This method is used with large tubes requiring a higher grid bias than the full filament supply voltage; also, with heater types using a.c. filament supply. Here the resistor is connected in series between the cathode and the negative side of the 'B' or plate supply.

"The grid, when connected to the negative side of this resistor, is negative with respect to the cathode by the extent of the voltage drop across the resistor. However, since plate current flows through this resistor, the voltage drop across it will vary with relation to the fluctuations in plate current caused by input signals. By choosing a resistor of proper value and by using a by-pass condenser to filter out as much as possible of the irregularities in the plate current, this method works satisfactorily for Class A amplifiers. However, it is not satisfactory for Class B, where variations in plate current are more severe.

"(4) By 'bias cells,' which are really batteries but of different shape and having considerably longer life than ordinary dry batteries. These cells are enclosed in a shell of zinc about the size and shape of an acorn. The anode is at the top of the 'acorn.' It is insulated from the shell by a small ring of insulating material. Several of these cells may be connected in series to supply sufficient voltage, and are usually mounted in a single line along a special mounting strip. Any current drain will quickly ruin these small cells, so they cannot be used in Class B circuits, and must not even be tested with a voltmeter unless absolutely necessary—then only with a high resistance meter applied for as short a time as possible.

"(5) By a separate rectifier and filter, such as is used in any amplifier to provide plate voltage. However, the bias rectified is not connected to the plate circuit, and the grid bias therefore is not affected by changes in plate current. This method provides what is called fixed bias. It is widely used, especially in Class AB or Class B amplifiers.

"(6) By a method similar to the plate circuit voltage-drop resistor already described. However, instead of using the plate current of only one tube, it is possible to connect the cathodes of all the tubes to a single resistor, the other end of which is then connected to the negative side of the 'B' supply. This one resistor then carries the total plate current of all the amplifier tubes, which is somewhat more steady than the current from any one tube. This resistor is tapped at suitable intervals to supply the different voltages required by the grids of various tubes. Such a method of supplying grid voltage is usually called semi-fixed bias."

Section C is answered by W. E. Limmroth thus: "Amplifier plate voltages vary from approximately 90 for small tubes to about 1,000 for the large ones. According to size, the current volume ranges from close to one milliampere to 100 milliamperes, which must be without any ripple or unevenness at all. If there is this fault the loudspeakers will announce the fact."

Question No. 13

(A) What are some of the more commonly used methods of coupling employed in amplifiers?

(C) What is push-pull amplification; how does it work, and why is it used?

Popcorn Machines Go Modern

Modernism in design with streamlining, chrome, porcelain and color has overtaken the popcorn machine in a new line announced this week by the Advance Manufacturing Company at St. Louis. The popcorn vending device with its illuminated signs and abundant flash has caught step with the gay lobbies and marquees. The popcorn statistics claim a possibility of a profit of 70 cents on each dollar of sales, assuming volume, and it is asserted that there is no seasonal variation in the popcorn trade under modern methods.

COMPARISON FINDS NEW NEELY BILL SHOWING MORE TEETH THAN ARNOLD

Senator Would Bar Any Independent Producer Releasing Through Major from Having Interest in Exhibition

The appearance recently of Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general, before a special Senate subcommittee called by anti-filmite Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely (Dem., W. Va.), to hear him explain reasons for the long delay in getting the Government's anti-trust suit to trial (now set for June 3rd, in New York), has created new interest in the basic subject of Government attack, namely, theatre divorcement. Mr. Arnold declared to the Senate subcommittee that he favored Senator Neely's divorcement bill now pending in Congress, as introduced on April 8th.

Neely Bill More Sweeping

For one thing, the Neely divorcement bill is far more sweeping than the application of divestiture demanded by the Government in its New York trust suit, "key" of a series pending against the majors and large independent circuits in the field. Not only would the bill force a divestiture of producer-distributor ownership of theatres, both direct and indirect, as would the anti-trust complaint, but it also would prohibit any producer or distributor from managing, buying or booking films for theatres, even without any ownership interest. Some of the "big five" distributor-circuits now manage or book or buy film for theatres of other companies without having any stock or other owner's interests in the houses.

Bars Buying, Booking

The New York trust suit complaint set out to force theatre divorcement specifically by Paramount Pictures, Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, Loew's and Radio-Keith-Orpheum. Senator Neely's bill would prohibit any producer or any distributor from owning, managing, or booking or buying films for any theatre. A producer is defined in the bill as any person who engages or contracts to engage in the production of motion picture films for distribution in commerce either directly or through a controlled or affiliated corporation, or by another person under contract or any other arrangement whatsoever. Thus, it appears, an independent producer releasing through a major could not at the same time have interests in exhibition, or even buy or book films for a theatre.

Indorses Neely Bill

Mr. Arnold, as chief prosecutor of the New York film trust case, appeared before the Senate special subcommittee at the instance of Senator Neely (see MOTION PICTURE HERALD, April 28th, pages 14-16). He declared that while it was not the policy of the Department of Justice to approve or condemn individual legislative measures, he nevertheless was wholeheartedly in favor of the legislation which, he said, "is declaratory of the common law," adding: "This type of legislation is particularly necessary in the New York case because of the interminable delays which have attended the case ever since it started," and because of the delays expected as the trust case goes through the long and intricate machinery of appeal, and so on.

Underway this week are Congressional hearings on Senator Neely's anti-block booking bill (see page 14). Divorcement bill hearings are to follow.

The basic reasons given for the necessity of divorcing the 2,400 circuit houses from production-distribution are practically the same in both the New York trust complaint and Senator Neely's divorcement bill: the operations are said to be contrary to public policy; have resulted in granting to affiliated theatres undue preferences; caused unfair discrimination against independent theatres; enabled producer-circuits to acquire a "virtual monopoly" of the first-run houses in principal cities and the same in subsequents in certain places; interfered with opportunity and freedom of independent exhibitors to select and obtain an adequate supply of quality films for their theatres; prevent the public from influencing selection of films in its best interests; tends to create a monopoly in production, distribution and exhibition.

Foreign Operations Not Affected

Neither the proposed legislation nor the trust complaint would, of course, prevent any of the distributors from operating theatres abroad. Some of the companies are extensively engaged in exhibition in foreign markets.

The Neely divorcement bill says: It shall be unlawful for any producer or distributor of motion picture films engaged in commerce (interstate commerce) to own, control, manage, buy, or book films for, or operate, in whole or in part motion picture theatre or theatres in any state, territory or the District of Columbia, or to have any interest, direct or indirect, legal or equitable, through stock ownership or otherwise in any such motion picture theatre or theatres. (italics ours). Again, the Government's trust suit specifies divorcement only by the five distributor-circuit defendants and persons and affiliates related thereto.

However, the Government, through separate actions pending (versus Schines, Griffiths, and other non-affiliated independent circuits in the field, seeks to break monopolistic holds charged to them in their respective territories.

Other Differences

The Neely divorcement bill would require every producer or distributor to file with the U. S. Attorney General within 30 days of the date the Act becomes effective, and annually thereafter on or before the 15th of January, an affidavit stating whether such producer or distributor owns, controls, manages, buys or books films for, or operates in whole or in part, any motion picture theatre in the United States. The Neely bill would give the producers only 18 months to effect divorcement. The trust suit mentions no time limit and, again in a fashion seemingly more lenient in application than the proposed legislation, would accomplish divorcement over a longer period, to be determined, and upon such terms and conditions as the courts may deem proper, and that pending such divestiture the operation and management of the involved theatres and theatre holdings be placed in the hands of trustees to be selected by the court.

The proposed Neely bill provides that any producer or distributor violating the act, or who fails to file the prescribed affidavit, or who knowingly makes any false statement in such affidavit shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment for a period up to one year, or by both. Subject to prosecution for the aforementioned reasons and on the same penalties, in the case of a corporation, are its individual directors, officers, or agents, who either authorized, ordered, done or who had knowledge of any of the acts or omissions.

BAR U. S. NEWSREELS IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Press dispatches to New York last week indicated that theatres in the German protectorate which formerly was Czechoslovakia may no longer show American newsreels.

Nazi authorities permit the showing of only German reels and "Actualitat," a Czech newsreel produced under Nazi supervision, it is reported.

National Film Carriers Reelect All Officers

At the closing session of the annual convention of the National Film Carriers Association at the Park Central Hotel in New York Tuesday all officers were reelected.

The Association's officers include: James P. Clark, Philadelphia, president; Thomas Gilboy, San Francisco, vice-president; Clint Weyer, New York, secretary. Members of the executive committee are Mr. Clark, George Callahan, Philadelphia; E. E. Jameson, Kansas City; Harold Robinson, Detroit; John Vickers, Charlotte. The board of managers includes A. E. Amsler, Columbus; M. H. Brandon, Memphis; Charles McCarthy, Minneapolis, H. E. McKinney, Des Moines; L. N. Miller, New Orleans; M. G. Rogers, Omaha; N. A. Slater, Seattle; F. E. Smith, Syracuse; Charles Trampe, Milwaukee.

Rates, methods of handling film shipments, safety measures and other subjects were discussed at the three-day meeting. The luncheon Tuesday was addressed by A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of Warner exchanges, and Harry Mersay, in charge of prints for Twentieth Century-Fox.

National Decency Legion Classifies Eight Films

Of eight pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage and three were listed as unobjectionable for adults. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Covered Wagon Days," "Cowboy from Sundown," "Land of Six Guns," "Ski Patrol." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Saint Takes Over," "Song of the Road," "Way of All Flesh."

Reimer Leaves Warners

Frank Reimer, salesman for the Warner Brothers branch in Indianapolis, has resigned to become manager of the Quimby theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind. He had been with Warners for 11 years.

COLUMBIA SETS 1940 CONVENTIONS; MGM HOLDS TWO MORE REGIONALS

Columbia's First Regional in Chicago June 4 to 6, Second in Atlantic City June 11 to 14; MGM to Finish on May 22

Columbia Pictures, last of the large companies to arrive at 1940 sales convention plans, this week announced two regionals, one for the west and midwest divisions, on June 4th to 6th, in Chicago, and one for the east and Canadian districts, June 11th to 14th, in Atlantic City.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer held the second and third of its regionals in Chicago and New York, respectively.

Product announcements were made in the week at the annual sales convention of Universal Pictures, in Atlantic City (see page 35), and at the meeting of United Artists in New York (see page 37). UA holds a second meeting Friday through Sunday, May 17-19, in Chicago, likewise Universal, Saturday through Monday, May 18-20, in Chicago.

Next week, Metro-Goldwyn will hold its fourth and final regional, in Washington, Monday and Tuesday, May 21st and 22nd; Paramount will hold a single national meeting, Friday through Sunday, May 24-26, in Los Angeles. RKO then follows with a national convention, May 27-30, in New York, and Warners, two regionals: June 10-12, in Pittsburgh, and June 17-19, Chicago.

The first of Republic's four regional conventions will open in San Francisco May 27th.

Two Columbia Meetings

A. Montague, general sales manager, announced that Columbia Pictures would hold its annual sales convention in two sessions this season, with meetings in Chicago June 4-7 and Atlantic City June 11-14.

Both meetings will be presided over by Mr. Montague. Jack Cohn also will attend both sessions, as will the following sales executives: Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; Louis Astor, circuit sales; Louis Weinberg, circuit sales and Max Weisfeldt, short subjects sales supervisor.

Phil Dunas, Midwest division manager; Carl Shalit, central division manager, and Jerome Safron, Western division manager, will head the delegates. Nat Cohn, New York division manager; Sam Galanty, Mideast division manager, and Sam Moscow, Southern division manager, will head them in Atlantic City.

The grouping of branches to attend each meeting follows:

In Chicago: Chicago, Des Moines, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Denver, Portland, Salt Lake City, Seattle and San Francisco.

In Atlantic City: Albany, Boston, Buffalo, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington, Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Memphis, Oklahoma City and New Orleans.

MGM in Chicago and New York

Last Sunday, Monday and Tuesday MGM held its second regional meeting, at the Drake Hotel in Chicago. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager presided with Edward M. Saunders, western sales head. The third MGM meeting was held Friday and Saturday May 17-18 at the Hotel Astor in New York.

Those attending the Chicago meeting were:

From the home office: Mr. Rodgers; Mr. Saunders; Howard Dietz, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation; Edwin W. Aaron, assistant to Mr. Rodgers; Joel Bezahler, assistant to Mr. Saunders.

The fourth and final conference will be held May 20-21, at the Hotel Shoreham, Washington, D. C.

MGM Ad Budget Raised

The MGM advertising budget will be raised above $2,500,000, according to Mr. Dietz. This step is in line with the policy of more "preselling." He also said that the field force of 40 men may be increased.

Art Schmidt, for the past six years assistant to Oscar A. Doob, advertising and publicity director for Loew's Theatres, has been made publicity manager of MGM.

Paramount on the Coast

The annual convention of Paramount Pictures, to be held this year starting May 24th at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles, will be attended by all branch and district managers in addition to home office and studio executives.

Neil Agnew, general sales manager, announced last week that 40 members of the sales forces from New York, New England, Philadelphia and Washington territories and home office officials would leave Monday for the Coast. Others from Albany, Buffalo, Chicago and Kansas City will join the party en route.

Those leaving from New York are: Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Adolph Zukor, Neil Agnew, J. J. Unger, C. M. Reagan, O. A. Morgan, G. B. J. Frawley, H. J. Lorber, A. J. Dunne, M. R. Goodman, F. A. LeRoy, J. Roper, Knox Haddow, L. Flynn, J. Barry, S. Palmer, M. H. Lewis, E. Ruff, M. S. Kusell, M. Sattler, H. Randel, E. H. Bell, E. W. Sweigert, U. F. Smith, George Beattie, J. E. Fontaine, R. M. Gillham, A. Moss, Al Wilkie, Austin Keough, A. J. Richard, John W. Hicks, Jr., George Weltner, Albert Deane, G. Fraser, A. Reyes, A. O. Dillenbeck, Don Gibbs, P. Scollard.

G. B. J. Frawley, manager of exchange accounting, is handling transportation and hotel arrangements.

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the Paramount executive committee, has cancelled his plans to return from the Coast and will remain there until after the sales convention.

New Republic Plans

Quarterly production plans for Republic will be set on the Coast when Herbert J. Yates arrives from New York. James R. Grainger, president of the company, announced Wednesday that four regional sales conventions would be held starting in San Francisco May 27th. Others will follow in Memphis, Chicago and New York.

"Hit Parade" or "Lady from New Orleans" is expected to be the next top budget production. Mr. Yates will also select a new title for

PARAMOUNT TO USE "OUTSIDE" PUBLICITY

Paramount has retained Tom Fizdale, Inc., to augment the company's regular publicity and exploitation department in handling promotion work on a limited group of pictures, R. M. Gillham, director of publicity and advertising, announced Monday. The Fizdale company recently handled a special campaign on "Dr. Cyclops."

Mr. Gillham said, "It is not always possible to give certain unusual pictures the publicity impetus which these individual pictures deserve." Special attention will be given certain films "without disturbing the carefully geared machinery of our company organization in the handling of the bulk of our product."

Advertising budget will be increased to support the work of the company's own department which will not be affected in any of its activities or personnel by the new set up and the publicity done by the Fizdale company. The Paramount publicity and advertising department and the Fizdale group are to work in cooperation on the pictures which Fizdale will handle.

"Doctors Don't Tell," a story of the American Dust Bowl and European refugees. John Wayne, Charles Coburn and Sigrid Gurie are starred in the film. "Scatterbrain," one of the more important Republic pictures, and the first of the Judy Canova films, has gone into production.

Leo Films Formed

Leo Cohen of Paris announced the formation Monday of Leo Films, Inc., to handle the U. S. distribution of outstanding French films. The officers are Nat Sanders, president; Leo Cohen, vice-president and Sylvia Sanders, secretary.

The Paris home office of Leo Films, Inc., will be supervised by Mr. Cohen. The French companies were established in 1918. Mr. Sanders who will be in charge of the New York office is a former general manager of Film Alliance of the United States, Inc. It was said that Sylvia Sanders brought "The Baker's Wife," "Port of Shadows" and "Moonlight Sonata" to this country.

In explaining the activities of the new firm Mr. Cohen said, "The aim of Leo Films is to carefully screen and choose in Paris, only those pictures which we believe are adaptable to the American public and which are sufficiently different from the usual Hollywood product, to warrant importation." He explained that Sylvia Sanders has gone to Paris to close deals for the firm's fall product.

Film Alliance 1940 Plans

Norman Elson, sales manager of Film Alliance of the U. S., is making a coast to coast survey of franchise holders. The 1940 Film Alliance schedule includes 26 pictures, with a possibility of an additional ten. Mr. Elson will bring details of the program to exhibitors and franchise holders. The general sales drive, said to be the most elaborate in the company's history, will be inaugurated after his return to New York.

RKO Heads Due for Convention

George J. Schaefer, president; Ned Depinet, distribution head and S. Barret McCormick in charge of advertising and publicity of RKO have arrived from the Coast and several foreign department executives are in New York in preparation for the annual convention which opens May 27th at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Reginald Armour, RKO European manager, arrived Monday on the Manhattan and Ben Y. Cammack, Latin American manager, arrived Saturday from Rio de Janeiro. Others expected within the next few days are Gus Schaefer, F. S. Gulbransen and Pedro Saenz from Central America and the West Indies.

Mr. Schaefer signed a deal last week arranging for RKO release of a picture based on Scattergood Baines, Clarence Budington Kelland character, to be produced by Jerry Brandt and Charles Ford who have purchased the film rights for a reported $100,000.

Vogue Productions, headed by Lou Ostrow, who formerly produced the "Hardy Family" series for MGM, has signed a deal for RKO release of four pictures during the 1940-41 season.

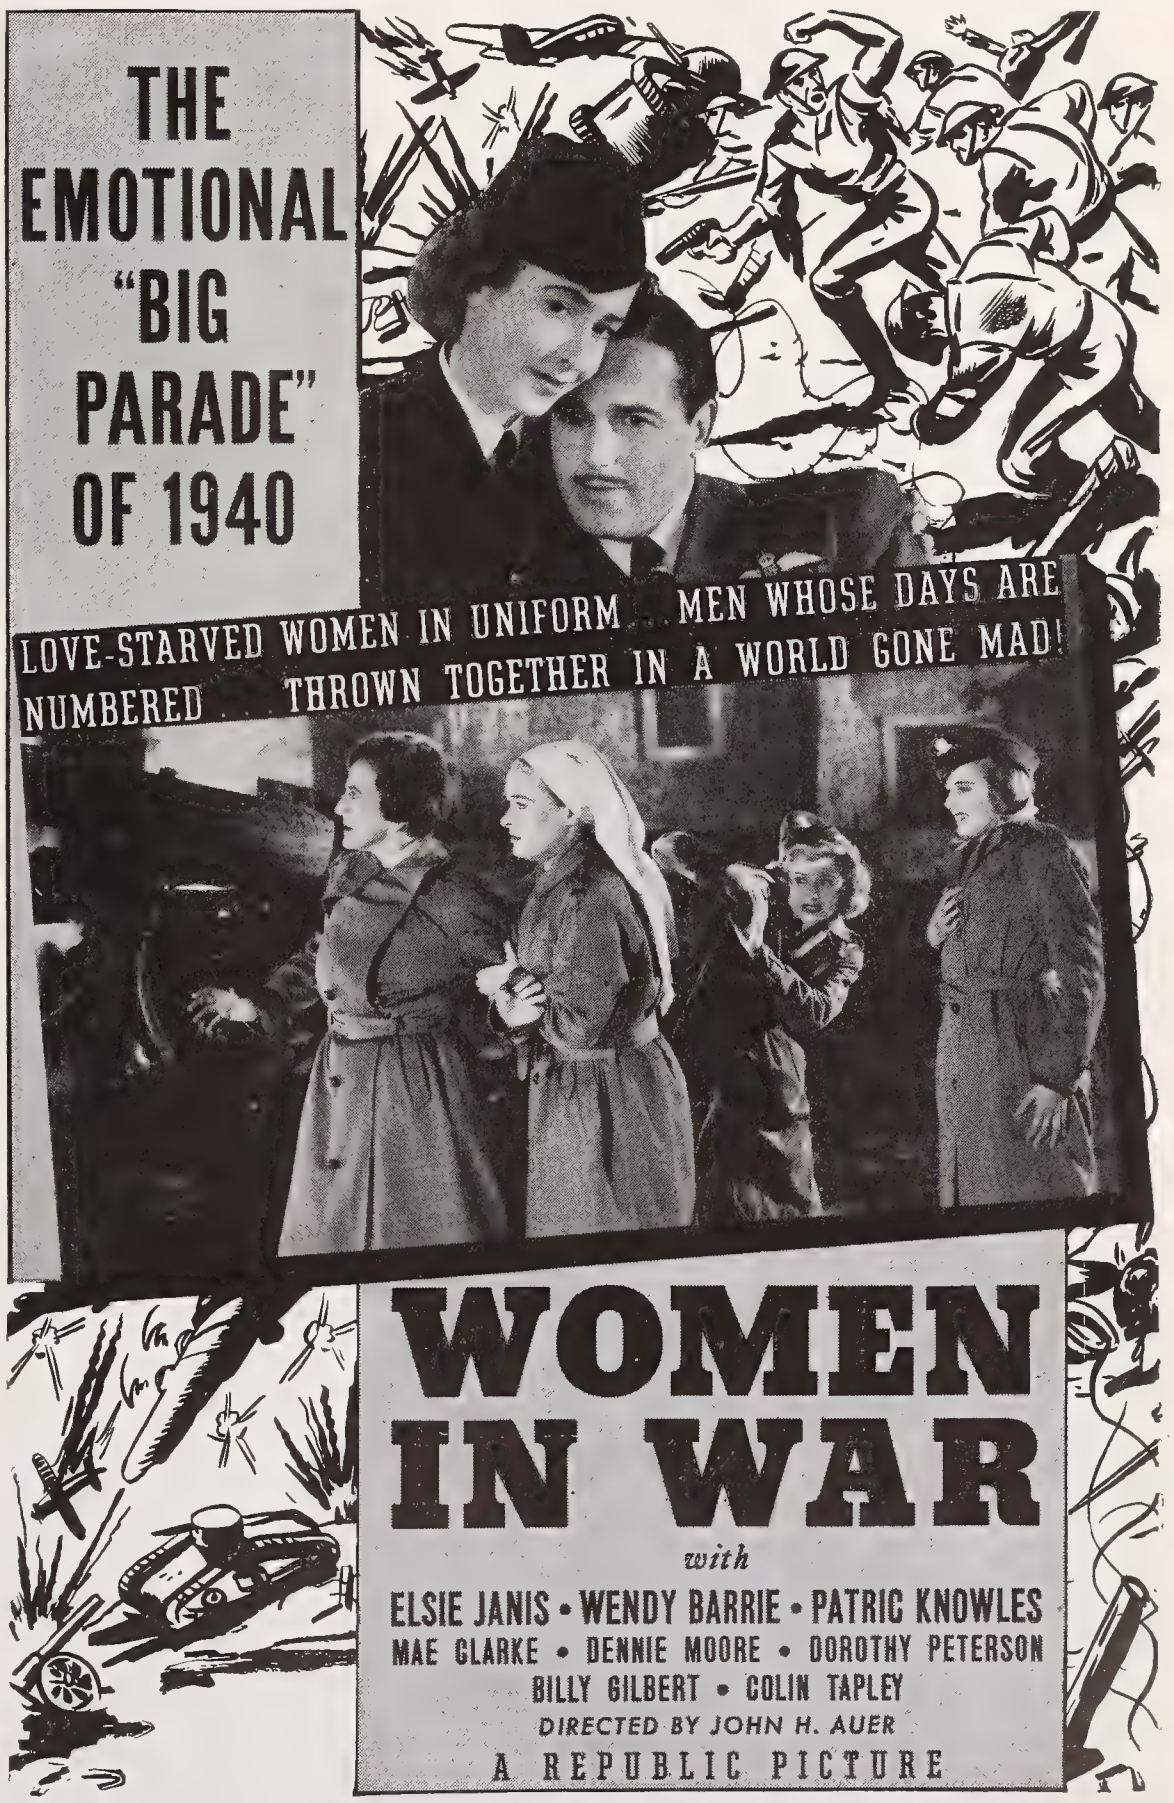
Two for Fox from Hughes

Darryl F. Zanuck announced that Howard Hughes will produce two films for Twentieth Century-Fox release during the new season. Details of the films have not been arranged yet.

Radio Group Tries Film Test Story

The National Radio Film Commentators Circle, formed in March to clear the work of the appellation of "gossip," has been conducting a test case to gain recognition from large motion picture companies.

The publicity department of Twentieth Century-Fox cooperated by preparing a special story exclusive to radio commentators in their local areas on the company's forthcoming film "Lillian Russell," which has a national release date of May 24th. Sent out from the national headquarters of the Circle in New York, the story was accompanied by a stamped post card addressed to David Lowe, president of the Circle, on which the commentators were asked what use they had made of the material.



Of the replies received by Mr. Lowe to date, 70 per cent reported they had used the material in full, 15 per cent part of it and 15 per cent said they didn't have available the time to use the material or that the material was found unusable.

Mr. Lowe said similar motion picture material would be sent to members of the Circle when the material warrants the expense. A weekly bulletin will be sent to the members which is intended as far as possible to supply news that hasn't been "broken" by network commentators, columnists, etc.

The organization in its short existence has grown rapidly and now has a membership of 122 air commentators in 34 states, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska.

Members have been queried on suggestions for a code of ethics and plans are afoot to draw a tentative code.

On Thursday, May 9, members in the New York area were guests of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at that organization's luncheon meeting. Mr. Lowe said film air commentators felt they were ignored by the film promotion departments.

GUILD ORGANIZING PRESS AGENTS, U.S. PROBING COAST LABOR STATUS

New York Group Studies Proposal for New Joint Organization with Coast Screen Publicists Unit

Formation of a union which may become one of the strongest in the motion picture industry, depended this week on acceptance by members of the Screen Publicists Guild of the proposed revision in the organization's by-laws and constitution, making it a national association embracing all persons handling publicity for producers, distributors, and exhibitors, or for firms, persons or corporations hired by these categories for the dissemination of publicity, advertising and exploitation.

International Proposed

On Tuesday evening, in New York, members of the Screen Publicists and Advertisers Guild, listened to two proposals from George Bodle, attorney for the Hollywood Screen Publicists Guild, first, that an international union be formed, with locals in key cities; second, that separate guilds be maintained, as heretofore, but with joint committees acting on national problems.

The New York unit was organized several months ago, and plans to negotiate contracts with the distributing companies' home offices in New York.

The Hollywood organization recently negotiated a contract with the major studios, improving working conditions and maintaining a $100 per week minimum for senior workers.

Neither organization is affiliated with either the CIO or the AFL; nor did they anticipate affiliation, Mr. Bodle said.

The proposed changes in the Hollywood organization's by-laws and constitution probably will be voted upon by the membership shortly. Some of these changes are reported to provide for the payment of an initiation fee of $100; payment by each local or non-affiliated local, to the national treasurer of a per capita tax of $1 per quarter for each member in good standing and employed; payment by locals of 50 per cent of the initiation fee; payment, by the locals, of 30 cents per quarter on associate members.

Local units could be formed in any city by "a group of three or more members" in one organization. Unemployed members would belong to an associate unit. There would be National Council, elected by membership, and with authority to issue charters and suspend them, to supervise collective bargaining for locals and approve agreements.

IATSE Politics in New York Election

George E. Browne, president of the IATSE, won a majority of delegates to the International's convention, to be held in Louisville June 3rd, at the annual election last Sunday night in New York of the Stagehands Union, Local 1.

Vincent Jacobi, business agent, who had announced he would run against Mr. Browne at the convention, and who had then retracted his decision, was elected a delegate, and also reelected business agent but he received the least votes.

Elected delegates were Mr. Jacobi, Robert Anstett, John C. McDowell, Joseph Dwyer, Edward P. Gately, Sol Pernick, Harry L. Abbott, John F. Casey, Lewis Yaeger, and George Fitzgerald.

Reelected officers were Mr. Anstett, president; Mr. Yaeger, vice-president; Mr. McDowell, secretary, and John Garvey, treasurer.

Elected were Edward J. Mortimer, sergeant-at-arms; James J. Brennan, chairman of the board of trustees; John W. Brouseau and Mr. Casey, trustees; Thomas Burke and Patrick Harvey, relief committeemen.

Meanwhile plans were completed at a meeting of the IATSE executive board in Chicago for the June convention. After a meeting of the film exchange employees and ushers unions, John Amberly, St. Louis; George Busch, Chicago, and Irene Sharp, of Kansas City, were elected delegates to the convention.

BRITISH PRODUCER PLANS "MEIN KAMPF"

Another aspirant to the ranks of international producers of "Mein Kampf" is Max Faber, who says he will make a British film of Adolph Hitler's book at a cost of £60,000-£80,000 ($210,000 to $280,000). The company for which Faber operates is Pyramid Amalgamated Pictures. It was formed in June, 1938, but this will be its first film. Production will be at the Rock Studios, Elstree.

Variety Guild Fights Philadelphia Union

In Philadelphia, the Entertainment Managers Association refused to be absorbed by the newly organized Artists Representatives Association and announced it would fight any move by the American Guild of Variety Artists to franchise the individual agents and bookers.

Booking agents were attacked on another front in Pennsylvania when Anthony C. Sharkey, in charge of licensing for the Pennsylvania State Department of Labor and Industry, notified the Music Corp. of America, last Saturday, that he would stop all its shows in the State unless the office procured a State license.

The Philadelphia musicians' union, still unable to settle its six-month old strike against Warner Theatres, settled the five-month strike against WPEN, radio station, the musicians returning to the studio last Monday under a contract extending to September, 1941. The station will spend $15,000 a year for music. It spent $31,000 a year previously.

St. Louis Operators' Settlement Delayed

Final settlement of the tangled affairs of the St. Louis Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 143, which seemed accomplished last week through stipulations filed in the Circuit Court there, may be delayed by a subsequent move of seven intervenors in the union's receivership suit.

The stipulation filed in court provided that John P. Nick, ousted head of the union, and Clyde A. Weston, former business agent, would drop their appeal to the State Supreme Court from the decree of Judge Ernest F. Oakley, making their ouster permanent.

In return, the union agreed to waive collection of the $48,399 judgment entered by the court against Nick and Weston. Also, Judge Oakley was to continue full control over the receivers, their final report and the fixing of attorney's fees.

Wage - Hour Division Sends Personnel Director to Studios to Study New Classification of Workers

Moving to settle serious problems of the motion picture producers with respect to the classification of workers in some 615 different types of jobs, the wage-hour division of the Department of Labor this week instituted a survey of the Hollywood situation with a view to making a clear-cut determination of the jobs which can be considered exempt from the hour provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act as executive or professional.

Ends 18-Month Effort

Announcement by Philip B. Fleming, Administrator, that Eldred M. Cocking, assistant director of personnel of the Department of Labor, had been "borrowed" and sent to Hollywood to make the study was hailed in film circles as a highly desirable culmination of 18 months of efforts to secure a Government pronouncement on a problem which has cost the studios large sums of money in overtime payments.

It was announced that Mr. Cocking would contact the producers' organizations and the unions and guilds, giving them ample opportunity to submit information and comment on the classifications as his studies go on, and that his report would be in the nature of a stipulation to which both employers and employees agreed. A hearing will be held by the Administrator, however, before the recommendations are put into effect.

Immediately following adoption of the wage-hour act in 1938, representatives of the producers visited Washington to place before Elmer B. Andrews, then the Administrator, the question of the classification of employees whose work, while contended to be of an executive or professional nature, was not so clearly defined as to permit such classification without Government order.

The producers received little satisfaction from Mr. Andrews, who said he could not undertake to make an interpretation of the law and suggested that the studios and the unions work out a mutually satisfactory classification, which he indicated would be acceptable to Washington.

On Tuesday, Mr. Cocking had already begun his study, in Hollywood, cooperating with Fred Pelton, labor contact of the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

Mr. Pelton had conferred in Washington, in recent months, with the wage-hour division of the Department of Labor.

Writers Resume Negotiations

After a membership meeting last Wednesday night, the Screen Writers Guild, of Hollywood, notified attorneys for the producers of 17 points to be the bases for resumed talks on a contract, and of the guild's desire for resumption of contract talks.

The 17 point program was decided upon at the Wednesday night meeting. Among the points are: 100 per cent guild shop; basic agreement of one year length; conciliation and arbitration of all disputes; no speculative writing; no flat deals, unless the writer is paid $5,000 or more; vacations with pay of one week for every 26 weeks employment, for week-to-week writers; advance notices for layoffs and dismissals.

The producers having been notified of these demands, their attorneys and those of the guild are to meet; and then the negotiators from each side will begin.

British Production Goes On: Freeman

Despite "total war" begun last week by the Germans against the Low Countries, France, and especially against Britain, Gerald Freeman, managing director of Anglo-American Film Company, Ltd., now at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York, for an indefinite stay, thinks production will "proceed as usual" at the Elstree studios of British National Productions, which his company represents.

"Of course, you cannot say for certainty what the situation is now, and I may even have to eliminate my trip to the coast," said Mr. Freeman, "but we have produced 15 to 20 pictures a year in our two years of existence, and we will probably produce that number in 1940."

Mr. Freeman is in America to arrange the release, through a large distributor, of two of the latest British National productions, "Contraband" and "Gaslight," and to negotiate the release in England of several pictures from Hollywood independents.

Mr. Freeman is accompanied by Conrad Veidt, star of "Contraband."

This will be the first American release of British National. The second, "Gaslight," is from the play of the same name, by Patrick Hamilton, and stars Diana Wynyard and Anton Walbrook.

Another which may be distributed here is "Love on the Dole," about to go into production.

Mr. Freeman said that, when the war began, "we did not stop production; rather, we increased it."

Oklahoma University To Hold Exhibitor Course

The University of Oklahoma is instituting a short course for exhibitors and projectionists, which this year will consist of a two-day session, May 20-21, at Norman, Okla., where the college is located. Among the topics scheduled for discussion are "Non-Irritating Theatre Management," "Theatre Liability," "16mm. Possibilities in the Theatre," "Air Conditioning Principles," "Discussion of Air Conditioning Problems," "Technicolor Carbons," "Theatre Lighting," "Auditorium Acoustics," "Television Demonstration," "Modern Projection Practice," "Problems of Modern Projection," "Coated Lenses," "Maintaining Good Sound," "Care of Sound Equipment," "Tailor Made Sound," "Fire Prevention and Control" and "Stereophonic Sound Demonstration." Among those invited to address the course was F. H. Richardson of Quigley Publications.

Dave Gould Leaves MGM; Succeeded by Schoham

David Gould, for the last fourteen years with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and until recently representative in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and San Domingo, has resigned and returned to New York. He is engaged in a motion picture project now in formulation, and has taken an apartment in Brooklyn.

O. R. Schoham, former manager in Finland, has succeeded Mr. Gould, with headquarters in Puerto Rico.

Mr. Gould considers that the American domination of the Latin American market is likely to continue without much change in status, holding that it has long held a position of maximum development in that particular field.

"There is," he observes, "practically only the competition of some native production, mostly in Mexico and the Argentine, with a little coming out of Venezuela. This native product does for Latin America generally maybe about 25 percent of the gross, and fills say from 15 to 18 percent of the playing time. This is not evidence of a preference for the product from the entertainment point of view, but is rather an expression of patriotism."

Academy Has Two More Test Reels

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences this week announced the availability of two additional test reels for use in adjusting and maintaintheatre sound reproducing equipment to current quality standards; a Standard Flutter Test Negative for measuring the amount of flutter in a theatre sound-head, and a Standard Continuous Scanning Illumination Test Track "for rapidly and accurately measuring the uniformity of illumination across the scanning slit in the sound system."

The Council, in a note attached to the announcement, said that the test reels are made available to the industry at prices based upon the cost.

IN COURTS

Sues Walt Disney For $10,000,000

Vincent L. Whitman, New York inventor, has filed a patent infringement suit in federal court in Angeles for more than $10,000,000 from Walt Disney Productions, Inc. The plaintiff charges that Walt Disney infringed his patents which he said made it possible to "create third dimension effects necessary in making full length animated cartoons." He seeks an injunction to prevent further showings of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio," an accounting of profits and the giving of profits "admittedly in excess of $10,000,000" to him.

Mr. Whitman, said his patents, obtained in March 1937, are termed "composite system of photography wherein portion of still background scene pictorially recorded is photographed in superimposed relation on visual action which occurs in foreground."

Two Million Dollars Asked on "Wrath"

Twentieth Century-Fox, John Steinbeck, Viking Press and Pascal Covici were named defendants Monday in five suits filed in the New York supreme court by Taylor Gordon, who asks $2,150,000 damages and an accounting.

The actions are predicated on a contention that Mr. Seinbeck's novel "The Grapes of Wrath" is a plagiarism, attorneys said. No complaint was filed.

"Lynton" Litigation Is Finally Ended

The eight year litigation in the "Letty Lynton" plagiarism suit came to an end Monday when a satisfaction of a judgment of $167,528 against Loew's, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation and Culver Export Corporation in favor of Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes was filed in federal court in New York.

The plaintiffs had charged plagiarism of their play "Dishonored Lady" in the film "Letty Lynton." A judgment of $532,000 was reduced to one-fifth that sum by the circuit court and the reduction was upheld by the United States supreme court.

Elman Sues on "Hobby"

A suit for damages and an accounting was filed Monday in the New York supreme court by Dave Elman, producer of the "Hobby Lobby" radio program, against Warner Brothers and National Screen Service. Mr. Elman contends that the film "Everybody's Hobby" had been exploited and presented in a manner which "unfairly competed" with the radio show.

Suit Dismissal Denied

The application by RKO to dismiss the suit of Caron Corporation, perfume manufacturer, has been denied by Bernard L. Shientag, New York supreme court justice, with leave to renew. RKO is charged with "disparaging" plaintiff's perfume in the film, "Primrose Path." The application for the denial was based on the fact that the Caron company had amended its complaint since the application was brought.

Settle LaVarre Case

The suit for $50,000 damages brought by William LaVarre against Warner Brothers in the New York supreme court has been marked settled on the trial calendar call. The terms of the settlement were not disclosed. Mr. LaVerne contended that Warners had not paid for two of his stories claimed used for the films, "The Bedside Manner" and "Gambling Lady."

Alexander Black Dies in New York

Alexander Black, author, newspaper editor and "the father of the photoplay," died at his home in New York May 8th after a brief illness. He was 81. Mr. Black was a newspaperman for 60 years and the author of several books, but he was best known as the writer, director, producer and camerman of the picture-plays that were the forerunner of the modern motion picture.

His was the original idea of projecting a series of still pictures on a screen, accompanied by spoken lines delivered from a stage. He presented his first full-length drama at the Carbon Studio, at 5 West 16th Street in New York, on the night of Oct. 9, 1894. It was titled "Miss Jerry" and was presented with elaborate musical accompaniment by John Hyatt Brewer, composer.

The picture-play was a success and Mr. Black set out to make an even more pretentious effort for his second season. The new picture-play was entitled "A Capital Courtship," with scenes laid in Washington. The story included President Grover Cleveland, William McKinley, afterwards President, Thomas B. Reed, speaker of the House of Representatives, and Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador.

Mr. Black had retrospectively named his process "the slow movie." Terry Ramsaye, in "A Million and One Nights" says of the process: "It was in fact a motion picture in which the eye received the minimum of cues to keep the mind in the desired emotion path. Imagination had to fill the long gaps in the visual record. The film drama of today presents four times as many images a second as Black gave in a minute."

Mr. Black, who published a neighborhood newspaper at the age of 11, began his career as a reporter on the Brooklyn Daily Times at 16. He served four years as official stenographer of the Brooklyn magistrates' courts, became literary editor of The Brooklyn Times in 1885 and in 1905 was appointed Sunday editor of the New York World. He left The World in 1910 to become managing editor for Frank Seaman, Inc. In 1913 he became editor of the Newspaper Feature Syndicate, a Hearst enterprise, and later art editor of King Features Syndicate. He held the latter post until 1935.

Mr. Black's books included "The Great Desire," "American Husbands" and "Time and Chance." He was president of the Department of Photography of the Brooklyn Institute and editor of "Ostrander's History of the City of Brooklyn and Kings County."

Grant New Haven Motion

A superior court judge in New Haven has granted the Plaza Theatre Company's motion to intervene as defendant in the case of Lampert Theatre of Windsor, Inc., against Warners. The suit was brought by Lampert to restrain Warners from performance of its second-run contract with the Plaza.

Sue on Agency Contract

Manfred B. Lee and Frederic Dannay, authors of the radio program "The Adventures of Ellery Queen" filed suit Friday, May 10th, in New York supreme court for cancellation of an agency representation contract with Walter L. Rosemont. The contract, made in June, 1939, gave the defendant 10 per cent of proceeds from the program, the complaint states.

Herbert Daly

Herbert Gerard Daly, 38, who used the name William Daly when he appeared on the screen from 1932 to 1937, was killed by a subway train in New York May 12th when he fell from the station platform. He appeared in several Universal films, including "Air Mail."

Postpone Morrilton Trial

The trial of Malco Theatres, Inc., action to enjoin the city of Morrilton, Ark., from enforcing provisions of two ordinances, which seek to regulate the number of theatres one person, firm or corporation may operate in the city, has been postponed indefinitely. The ordinances would also impose a chair tax in addition to a regular license fee on theatres with more than 300 chairs.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger—Hit this one with everything and it came through like a million. Contests, window tie-ups, school tie-ups, special screening for the Civic Groups helped me put this one over in grand style. Play up Robinson's performance. He proves his ability as one of the best actors in the cinema world. Business away over par. Running time, 103 minutes. Played March 30-April 5.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—War stories are no good here. Cagney did not even draw in this one. Played May 2.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—A swell show that did fairly well. George Murphy tops. Played April 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS (reissue): Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy, Lionel Barrymore, Melvyn Douglas—We played this in place of "Idiot's Delight," which has been so badly panned by you fellow exhibitors. We did not do much business on the return booking but feel it was better than "Idiot's Delight."—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EARLE OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold—Failed to please here. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 31.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Olivia de Havilland, Leslie Howard, Hattie McDaniel—A wonderful picture that we played only because we felt that it should have been played in our situation. The picture had all the cream taken in the key cities; all we got was water. We feel that a production such as this should be run but do not look for a handsome profit at the prices you must charge. Perhaps, if it were run next season at popular prices, it would make your situation more money. Running time, 228 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Very good. Drew well and pleased all. Played April 27.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—They even came from the rural district through deep mud to see this one. Everybody seemed to enjoy it. Good box office gross. Splendid for rank and file small town audience. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 26.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Great picture. Good crowd. Good box office. Patrons all smiling when leaving theatre. We were not afraid to stand in the lobby with smiling greetings, too. Running time, 127 minutes. Played April 19.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—This series has generally pleased our patrons. Attendance average for Saturday-Sunday. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 13-14.—W. B. Roberts, Cave City Theatre, Caves Junction, Ore. Rural patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—It's an A-1 picture but no drawing power at box office. In a situation like ours where children and adults attend the same show, you'll be a nervous wreck keeping the kids quiet because the picture lacks action. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 3.—J. L. Thayer, Raymond Theatre, Raymond, N. H. Small town patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—Pleased and business good. What more can we ask.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—Very good picture and good business. This is one of Rooney's best performances. Not heavy, as title would indicate, but reminds one of the Huckleberry Finn pictures. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Monogram

GENTLEMAN FROM ARIZONA: Craig Reynolds, John King—This is a very fine picture, especially for week-ends. The horse is a wonder and color good. Running time, 76 minutes.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

Paramount

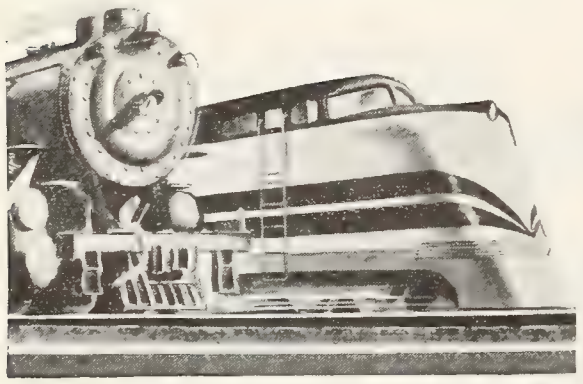
ALL WOMEN HAVE SECRETS: Jean Cagney, Joseph Allen, Virginia Dale—Here is a program picture that the audience thoroughly enjoyed. Played it late but was tickled to death with the comments on it. Jimmy's sister won the plaudits of the patrons. She has an appealing personality and a nice voice. Hope she gets bigger and better parts in fhe future. She can carry them. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 20-24.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—This seemed to us like a whole lot more interesting cartoon feature than either its predecessor or the other more recently released. Songs good, color okay, business okay. Played April 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Leslie Banks, Emlyn Williams—Very interesting melodrama that drew moderately. Played April 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Russell Hayden, Jean Parker—Good picture; fair business. Will please the western fans. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PAROLE FIXER: William Henry, Virginia Dale, Robert Paige—Satisfactory action play but draw is light. Played April 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.



Republic

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Gene Autry a total washout with my patrons. They go the other way when he is on. Played May 3-4.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Here is one exhibitor who is thanking the Almighty that Republic discovered Gene Autry and "South of the Border" is the answer to our prayer. We played it three days to sell out business. Never saw the like of it. Don't know where they came from. Wish we had played it a week. Any exhibitor that hasn't played this one has missed the boat. Did more business than "Snow White" by $175 in three days against four days. More than "Boys Town," "Jesse James" and "Kentucky," and that's something. We're going to try and book it for a return showing in a couple of months. I didn't think it possible to do the business on this picture as we did. Were the creditors tickled! We gave it a big campaign in advance, and it paid; yes, sir! If any of our good friends out West haven't played this, do so.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Biggest crowd I have had for months and absolutely everyone satisfied, even college students. Running time, 71 minutes.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—A natural for small town theatres with country patrons. Good picture; good business. Played April 7-8.—Leo T. Mary, Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La. Rural patronage.

New contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" department this week include the following:

JACK EAVES, Overton Theatre, Overton, Tex.

KENNETH M. GORHAM, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt.

LEO T. MARY, Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La.

W. B. ROBERTS, Cave City Theatre, Caves Junction, Ore.

GEORGE J. BIEHLER, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y.; last report: January 2, 1935.

Mr. Biehler returns to the fold after an absence of more than five years.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—This is a good action picture which drew average attendance. Claire Trevor and John Wayne are nevertheless handicapped by the standard which was set by their performances in "Stagecoach," as they do not have the opportunity for outstanding characterizations in this offering. Running time, 81 minutes. Played April 20-21.—W. B. Roberts, Cave City Theatre, Caves Junction, Ore. Rural patronage.

FLYING DEUCES, THE: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Good comedy. Poor business. Played April 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—In our opinion one of the best parts Ginger Rogers has had for a long time and the picture as a whole should be well up among the tops for 1940. Don't be fooled by the title and the catch line "the play that shocked Broadway," for if such is the case, then it merely confirms our suspicion that Broadway is the most provincial part of the country. However, there is plenty of realism, pathos, drama, comedy and romance interwoven throughout the production and there is certainly less sex displayed than in "GWTW." Give it your best playing time. Running time, 93 minutes.—W. B. Roberts, Cave City Theatre, Caves Junction, Ore. Rural patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—Ginger Rogers getting better and better and a star of the first magnitude and, of course, Joel McCrea, as was expected, was seen at his very best. The primrose path was primrose in every detail and faithfully portrayed some of the events that might have been seen in "The Grapes of Wrath." The supporting cast all very good and the "Primrose Path" is a picture that everybody should see, both old and young. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 25-May 2.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

RENO: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Anita Louise—Pleased all who saw it but failed to draw. Played April 30.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

RENO: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Anita Louise—Okay but no draw. Could have been lots better made. Played April 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—One of the best RKO has given me this year. They all liked it but business was only fair.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—This is another very good show from RKO but my customers don't seem to like Carole Lombard, as it reflected only fair at the box office.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CISCO KID AND THE LADY, THE: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver—Very good. This series proving very popular with my customers. Does about 30 per cent more than any other company's action releases.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

BLUE BIRD: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—A beautiful fairy tale that should be seen by both adults and children. Did about 90 per cent of my Temple business. Played April 4-6.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—A good picture to average intake. Played April 2-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Played a return engagement to pretty near the same amount of people I played to on my first showing.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, John Carradine, Doris Bowdon, Charley Grapewin—If you are interested in paying off a good share of the mortgage, play this one. It gave me my biggest gross since October 1939. Henry Fonda does a grand job.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Mary Boland—A very enjoyable domestic farce, well played by a big cast. Fair business. Played April 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JESSE JAMES: Tyrone Power, Henry Fonda, Nancy Kelly—We brought this picture back at a reduced admission and everyone came to see it again. If you can buy it right, bring it back. You can't go wrong. Played April 26-27.—Leo T. Mary, Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La. Rural patronage.

JOHNNY APOLLO: Tyrone Power, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Lloyd Nolan—Just finished playing this one of three days of real business. Pleased 100 per cent. They have at last found a role that Dorothy Lamour really can go to town in. Tyrone Power does a grand job. Played April 28-30.—George Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—A very good picture that did very badly at our box office. Difficult to see how the picture could have been better but don't believe the blah-blah of a trailer that features an Ed Sullivan or a Ripley is any help. Folks don't want big shots telling them what to see. Just show 'em what the picture's all about, then they'll make their own decisions as to whether they want to see it or not. If trailers would keep simple, we think they'd be better advertisements. Adjectives are so ineffectual nowadays. We've all worn them out time on time till they're no longer a stimulant. Played April 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STAR DUST: Linda Darnell, Roland Young, John Payne, Charlotte Greenwood—Played this one "hot" and did exceptionally well with it. Linda is more natural and believable than she was in "Day-time Wife." In the latter picture she seemed to speak her lines too mechanically. Beauty? She has. Speaking voice? Yup. Pulchritude? Just take another squint at her scenes in Elsa Maxwell's "Hotel for Women." Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 6-12.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Well, boys, this one is tops. Just put out a one sheet and tighten your chairs, as you are going to fill them.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

YOUNG AS YOU FEEL: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—The usual Jones Family series. Plenty of comedy in this one. Pleased the audience very well. Running time, 59 minutes. Played April 25.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CHUMP AT OXFORD: Laurel and Hardy—Ideal comedy for Friday-Saturday. One of Laurel and Hardy's best. Gave my customers plenty of laughs.—George J. Biehler, Palace Theatre, Hamburg, N. Y. Small town patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith, Ralph Richardson—An excellent show. Good color and appreciated, especially by college students. Running time, 100 minutes.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

LION HAS WINGS: Merle Oberon, Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, Flora Robson—As a member of the Air Force in the last war, I feel sorry for the wonderful air men that took part in this production, if this is the best that they can do to bring their exploits before the public. Let's be truthful to our readers of this section of this magazine. The company that released this feature played it up to the skies at a big price and what a terrible letdown for a small town. Our patrons have seen most of the picture in old newsreels and March of Time productions and some company has gotten these together and tried to make a feature out of it. Some of my patrons who did come to see it, and this is a 100 per cent British community, remarked that the Government should show some of the factory scenes free to all the country school children. A propaganda film and a very poor one in my judgment. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, David Niven, Andrea Leeds—Strictly a picture for the action fans but it shows that a good picture, even though played late, will do business. Just another action drama that drew average business, although played very late. Running time, 96 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—This picture broke all house records and pleased all and, more especially, those who had read the book. Had bad weather to buck all three days and prevue but that didn't seem to hurt. Had "The Grapes of Wrath" as opposition. Running time, 127 minutes. Played April 27-30.—Jack Eaves, Overton Theatre, Overton, Texas. Small town and oil field patronage.

Universal

BIG GUY, THE: Victor McLaglen, Jackie Cooper—Okay for what it is.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—Rather entertaining and well made. "McCarthy" fans not as plentiful as they used to be. Business fair. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 14-15.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—A good mystery with comedy dashes. Not much drawing strength, however. Played April 5-6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—This is a high class and most entertaining picture of the west. Will please all sorts and good box office, indeed. Running time, 94 minutes.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—Good western picture but too long for regular program. Running time, 94 minutes. Played April 25.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

GREEN HELL: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Bennett, John Howard, Alan Hale, George Sanders, George Bancroft, Vincent Price—One of the best pictures of the year. Theatre full of town's people and college students the second night as they just returned from vacation. All liked it 100 per cent. Play it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

HOUSE OF SEVEN GABLES, THE: George Sanders, Vincent Price, Margaret Lindsay, Nan Grey, Dick Foran—A very strong drama with a setting so well known that box office benefits beautifully. Should do well on any dates at any theatre. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon—A marvelous picture indeed and will appeal to all classes. Played to capacity house. Running time, 100 minutes.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—A swell little picture with comedy appeal. Will please any audience. Not box office but will do for an average program. Played this on a Bargain Nite. Running time, 65 minutes. Played May 2.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

MY LITTLE CHICKADEE: W. C. Fields, Mae West, Joseph Calleia, Dick Foran—Our inhabitants like Fields very much and in the picture he was some good draw. A grand business on a Sunday and Monday. Running time, 84 minutes.—Kenneth M. Gorham, Town Hall Theatre, Middlebury, Vt. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

IT ALL CAME TRUE: Ann Sheridan, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, Zasu Pitts—Good picture; fair business. Ann Sheridan very good. The musical show in the latter part will please all. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IT ALL CAME TRUE: Ann Sheridan, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, Zasu Pitts—Don't gauge this picture by comments in a screening room. The patrons loved it and were very voluble in expressing their delight. La Sheridan "oomphs" all over the screen and Bogart, in his sequences with the old ladies, slays the audience with belly laughs galore. Humphrey has an intangible something that appeals to the audience in general. I sum it up as his flair for being natural and not overplaying his part. Play up the Harvard-Princeton controversy over Sheridan, and play up Bogart! Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 20-24.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett—A fast moving action fight melodrama, which is very short. Failed to draw but pleased all who saw it. Running time, 57 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Pa. Small town patronage.

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman, Walter Catlett—O. K. for bank night. Story improbable. Cast OK. Direction fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Humphrey Bogart, Alan Hale—Very good picture and business in accordance. Will please all, especially the action fans. Running time, 120 minutes. Played April 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

DEATH RIDES THE RANGE: Ken Maynard—Pretty good for western fans. Fair action and not much music. Running time, 60 minutes. Played April 26.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ALL AMERICAN BLONDES: Broadway Comedies—Make no mistake about this one. You'll enjoy this one, fellow exhibitors.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BOWS AND ARROWS: Sport Thrills—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHARLES GOODYEAR: Fools Who Made History, No. 2—Great balance for comedy feature.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ELIAS HOWE: Fools Who Made History, No. 1—Good dramatic short on the manufacturer.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

JITTERBUG KNIGHTS: Color Rhapsodies—Just so-so.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE LOST SHEEP: Fables Cartoons—Just gets by. That's all.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MILLIONAIRE HOBO: Phantasies Cartoon—A very good cartoon with "Lazy Bones" as musical background.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MOTHER GOOSE IN SWINGTIME: Color Rhapsodies—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEW HAMPSHIRE: Columbia Tours—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OH, YOU NAZTY SPY: Three Stooges—Stooge comedies always please. Running time, two reels.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 6—As good as they usually are. Very interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEACHER'S PEST: Charley Chase—Good comedy. Running time, two reels.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S AUNT: Our Gang—O. K. Running time, one reel.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

DOOR WILL OPEN, A: MGM Miniatures—O. K. Liked by some and others no. But play it.—C. L.

Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FAILURE AT 50, A: MGM Miniatures—Very interesting. About the life of Abraham Lincoln. Running time, one reel.—John Warner, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

HOME MOVIES: Robert Benchley—One of the best of the Benchleys. A riot for those that like him. Others continue their visiting.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MENDELSSOHN'S WEDDING MARCH: MGM Miniatures—A very good single in color.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OLD SOUTH: MGM Miniatures—Fairly entertaining. Sounds like a plug for "Gone with the Wind," which I didn't play and don't want to. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This is just fair compared to the others.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PUSS GETS THE BOOT: MGM Cartoons—Good color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SITKA AND JUNEAU: Fitz-Patrick Traveltalks—Another grand colored travel from Metro.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith is a perennial favorite, of course, but this particular reel was enjoyed thoroughly by all. The audience emits squeaks of pleasure when it guesses right and the last question brings down the house. Darn good showmanship and psychology used for the finale. When your house is packed, you will get what I mean. Running time, eight minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

Paramount

PUBLIC HOBBY NO. 1: Paragraphics—Good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ACT YOUR AGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Swell comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ACT YOUR AGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Not much to this one. Running time, two reels.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

BABY DAZE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—An average two reel subject which pleased all Kennedy fans. Is good for a lot of laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

CUPID RIDES THE RANGE: Ray Whitley Comedies—Nice music in this one. Running time, two reels.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 8: Canada at War—This drew loud applause at the finish and that is what exhibitors like.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

OLD MILL: Walt Disney Cartoons—About the third time we have played this but still one of the good ones and stands repeating.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SKY GAME: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—Fine.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALLS WELL THAT ENDS WELL: Terry-Toons—Okay—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FIRST ROBIN, THE: Terry-Toons—Quite clever. It's a good one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FLYING STEWARDESS: Magic Carpet—A good study of the gals who fly.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LABOR SAVERS: Lew Lehr—A Lew Lehr short with plenty of laughs. This reel pleased and entertained. Running time, nine minutes.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

LABOR SAVERS: Lew Lehr—Good Lehr subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: Movietone News very good. Very nicely made up. Running time, one reel.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

Universal

RHYTHM JAMBOREE: Judy Starr—An all-musical short with dancing, singing, harmonica playing novelty group, etc. The entertainment value of this subject is very good.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Merrie Melodies—This is tops for colored houses. Running time, one reel.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

BUSY BAKERS: Merrie Melodies—Very good, and nice color. Running time, one reel.—John Warner, Plaza Theatre, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

CONFEDERATE HONEY: Merrie Melodies—Another one of those never ending entertaining cartoons with more belly laughs to the foot than most of your feature length comedies. Some day the Academy group will realize the entertainment value of these cartoons in place of the "Blah Arty" stuff that doesn't twitch a muscle. Running time, seven minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

CROSS-COUNTRY DETOURS: Merrie Melodies—This cartoon lacks child appeal. Over their heads. Should not be in this series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Fair band short. Running time, one reel.—John Warner, Greenville, N. C. Colored patronage.

EARLY WORM GETS THE BIRD: Merrie Melodies—The dialogue in this one will slay you. The voice of the little worm and his antics are convulsive (and I didn't say repulsive). The part where the little worm angers the bee and then wiggles his fanny as an invitation to sting him tears down the house. By the way, how about some more "Timmmmmm-Brrrrrrrr"! Running time, seven minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

ELMER'S CANDID CAMERA: Merrie Melodies—Just another cartoon set to color. Nothing outstanding. Running time, seven minutes.—A .J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MECHANIX ILLUSTRATED, NO. 3: Color Parade—Very interesting and diversified. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NO PARKING: Vitaphone Varieties—Good one reel comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PILGRIM PORKY: Looney Tunes—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Broadway Brevities—One of the best two reel shorts of the year. A minstrel show with dancing, singing, jokes and great end men comedians.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROLLIN' IN RHYTHM: Broadway Brevities—Good reel with roller skating artists doing their stuff. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

SINGING DUDE: Dennis Morgan—A very good color production of the out-door western type. The commentator at the rodeo enlivened the events in the rodeo scenes, which were few but good. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. P. Semyan, Liberty Theatre, Lilly, Penna. Small town patronage.

TABLE MANNERS: Vitaphone Varieties—Very poor. No entertainment value. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

TEDDY THE ROUGH RIDER: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—A grand colored two reel subject. Every theatre should play this. Drew applause. Very patriotic and entertaining. Play it on bank night.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Argentine Attacks Nazi Intervention

German intervention of film censorship in Latin American countries received an indirect rebuke from the Peruvian Senate which recently approved a communication to the Minister of Justice calling for "immediate cessation of all diplomatic intervention in the decisions of the Film Censorship Board," according to the Christian Science Monitor.

The rebuke, which took the form of a formal and unanimous vote, followed a debate generally critical of German diplomatic activity in Peru, according to the publication. The story said that among the pictures which either have been cut or held up by the Peruvian censorship board as a result of intervention by the German Minister are "Hero of the Marne," "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," "The Lion Has Wings," "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "The Road Back."

Cycle of 16 Fairbanks Films at Art Museum

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE ONLY ANSWER

There may be a hundred and one reasons, and there probably are, why business is not as it should be. A quick look at some of the campaigns heaped all over these premises would reveal that few of these reasons may be laid at the feet of contributors to this department.

For our immediate purposes, a longer look is suggested at two campaigns, in particular, both detailed elsewhere in this section.

The first, on "Million B.C." at Warners Stanton, Philadelphia, is colorful, arresting, comprehensive. The date was sold with animated fronts, decorated floats, unique newsworthy screenings and a host of other circus-type exploitations.

Result: A holdover, the first at that theatre in two years, according to Ev Callow, zone ad head, and main force behind the drive.

The second campaign to be noted, from Jack Fink, has to do with "Zanzibar" at Wometco's Capitol, Miami, a "B" house limited in advertising expenditures. Here was another wide-open effort that took in jungle lobbies, wild animals, native villages, smoking volcanoes.

Result: The exploitation is credited with tripling the business that Fink ordinarily could have expected.

What distinguishes both campaigns? The theatremen concerned knew what they had to sell and were willing to work in selling it. Or, as Callow writes:

"There is double pleasure in being able to submit this campaign because our efforts prove the point you have been making editorially for years—that the proper efforts can bring results. Our receipts for the first week were considerably over normal. So exploitation is still the answer."

Yes, exploitation is the answer as further affirmed in the establishment of a permanent exploitation force by United Artists, under the capable Monroe Greenthal. Exploitation is the answer recognized by the progressive G. Ralph Branton in the successful circuit-wide drive of Tri-States theatres for more intensive promotion. Exploitation has always been the answer to the splendid job done by the M-G-M Fergusonians and witnessed currently on "20 Mule Team."

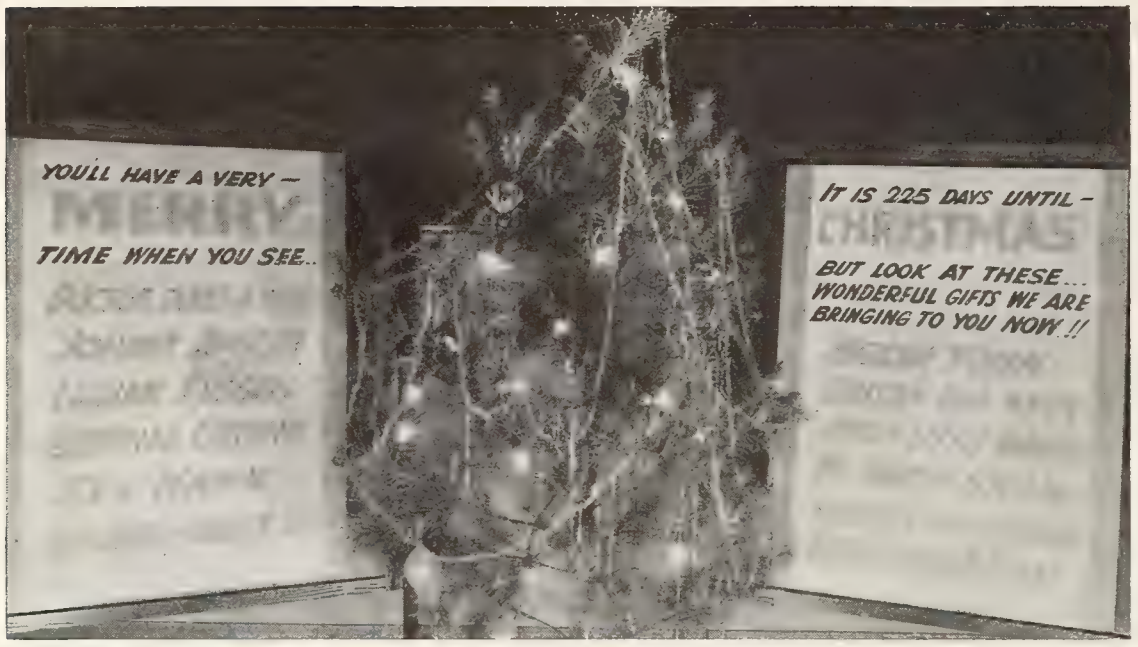
As it always has been, as it always will be, exploitation is the answer to better business. The patent lack of it may be offered as a most important of the hundred-and-one reasons referred to above.

The twinges of conscience disturb another long-silent brother in the following quoted from his letter accompanying the campaign to which the Round Tabler refers:

"Although this is my first 'stuff' ever sent to you, it is by no means the first time I have thought of sending in a resume of exploitation stunts used to ballyhoo various attractions. Like many of my manager-brothers, I have perhaps felt that my job is complete after a picture is open. But having read an article pertaining to those who profit by ideas of others in the Round Table and do nothing to reciprocate, I am forced to admit the target found its mark."

FOR THE BOXOFFICE, TOO

In the April issue of Printers' Ink Monthly, an article on Norwalk, Ohio, dwells upon the part played by Bill Selman, Schine city manager, in furthering communal progress. A quick check reveals that other Schine-men pointed in the same direction include Ed Evans, also mayor of Milford, Delaware; Frank Boucher, who bends an important shoulder on behalf of the nationally-famous Winchester, Va., Apple Blossom Festival; George Bannan, publicity head of the colorful Van Wert, Ohio, Peony Show.



The theatremen projecting themselves so forcefully into the foreground of community activities are bearing out the contention of J. Myer and Louis Schine that the value of such participation in gaining added theatre prestige is definitely translatable into boxoffice terms.

A keen showman and a swell person gains further recognition in the announcement of Art Schmidt's promotion to M-G-M publicity manager under Howard Dietz. Art takes over his new post to the accompaniment of lusty cheers from all floors at 1540 Broadway, plus a couple of extra huzzahs from this department and those who frequent it.

Voting Contest in Small City Draws One Million Votes

That the usual sponsorship of newspaper and merchants was not necessary in putting over a successful voting contest was demonstrated in the seven-week baby popularity promotion executed by Manager Francis Gooch, at the Uptown, in Bath, Me. Over one million votes were cast to win the $50 in prizes offered by the theatre. The only outside tiein was made with a local photographer to take pictures of the entrants free of charge, in exchange for the opportunity of obtaining reorders.

To make up for the lack of newspaper sponsorship, Gooch carried vote blanks in his ads which he reports as one of the campaign's features, since it guaranteed that those clipping the blanks would read all the theatre's copy. Each newspaper blank was good for five votes, in addition to an extra 10 given with each admission the first four weeks, increased to 50 in the last three weeks of the contest. Cooperating ads by the photographer also were good for five votes on purchases in 25-cent units. Entry blanks were secured at the boxoffice. When filled in, half the blanks were retained by the theatre for record, the other half presented to the photographer. Appointments for sittings were made by the cashier, the studio informed in advance of the number and time. Over 160 photos were taken in a three-week period of children under four, the contest limited to those up to that age.

Contest Triples Grosses

Generally increased business was noted by Gooch during the contest, who reports over three times normal business on the night prizes were awarded. The photographer also profited through sales of copies of contest photos and also standard photographic material. The local paper benefited in increased circulation during the contest.

Gooch decided against the usual sponsorship of merchants for prizes, on the basis that the more money spent in the stores for votes would mean less at the boxoffice. The prize money given instead by the theatre was amply covered in the increased admissions. Paid newspaper space was held at a minimum, since the Round Tabler's plans for a big campaign were cancelled when the first three days registrations were found sufficient to fill all studio appointments for a two-week period. The heavy vote from the beginning made further selling unnecessary, the contest publicized from then on in underlines and the standings of votes published by the paper four times during the contest. Cut expense was confined to pictures of the winners.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hosts Longest Married Couple

Newspaper contest featured by Gene Curtis on "Three Cheers for the Irish" at the Paramount, Syracuse, sought out local Irish couple married longest time. Winners were guests of theatre on opening night. Much radio publicity was obtained on the date through Bill Lundigan, in the picture, a local boy and former announcer.

500 HAPPY FAMILIES

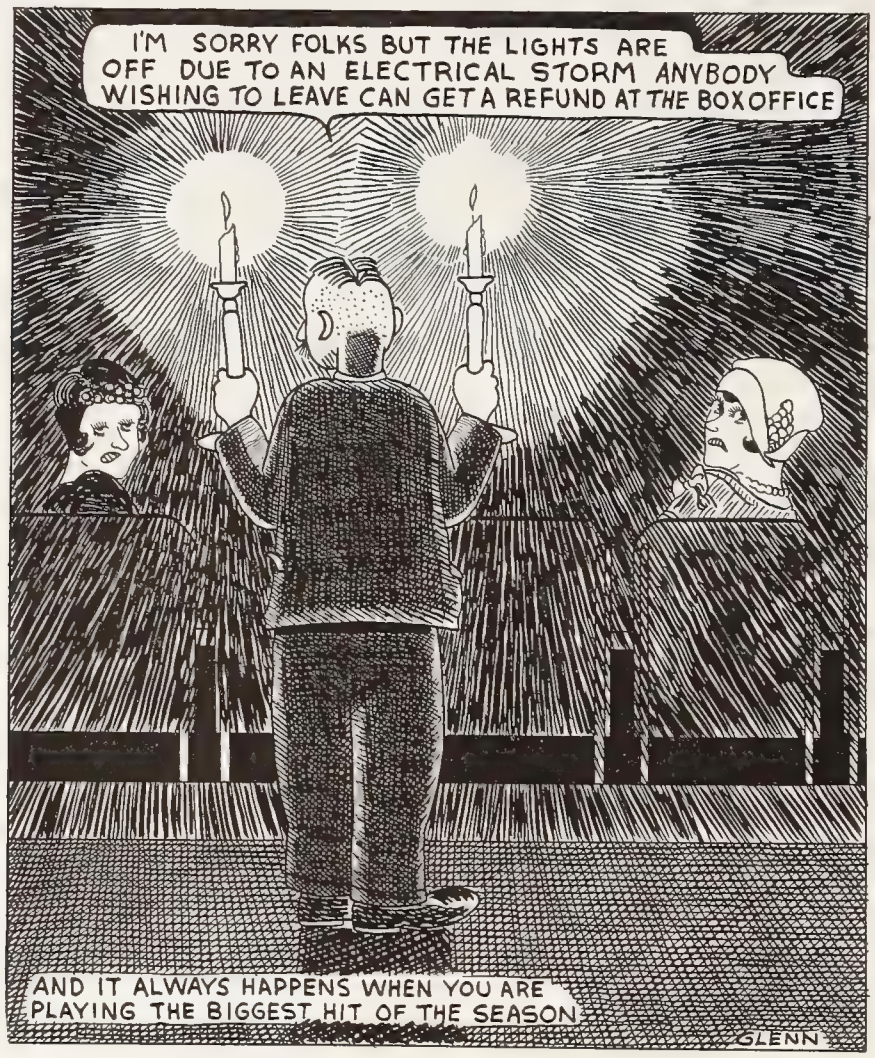
Basing his idea on the fact that the children in "Blue Bird" came from a happy family, Manager Robert Ungerfeld, RKO Proctor's, Newark, N. J., sold the local Star-Ledger on sponsoring a contest to find New Jersey's happiest family, as a tiein for the date. Families, resident in the state for at least five years, of father, mother and three or more children were eligible. In addition to information on names, ages, length of residence, entrants were asked to write in no more than 25 words on "The Secret of Our Family's Happiness."

Winning family was presented with check for $50, acted as hosts at a dinner for 25 of their friends, promoted from local restaurant. Following dinner, the party attended the opening night of the picture as guests of the management. Contest ran week ahead with daily three and four-column breaks of picture art and photos of winner. Over 500 letters were received, the runners-up soothed by Ungerfeld with written invitations to come over and enjoy the show on the house.

Empty Store Window Sells "Gulliver" Date

Through arrangement made with local real estate firm, Mel Blieden, at the Lex, in Chicago, promoted empty store window in heart of shopping district to exploit "Gulliver's Travels." Compoboard cutout figures of all the principal characters were made by his art department and spotted in the window, as were large title cutout letters.

For "Mexican Spitfire," Mel's bally consisted of well-known local troubador and guitar player, who, dressed in authentic Mexican Gaucho outfit with chest bannered, covered local high schools and other spots where crows congregated.



"3 Cheers for the Irish" —Spuds, Says Conner

Predominating color scheme around Warners' Avalon, Chicago, in Marlowe Conner's campaign on "3 Cheers for the Irish" was plenty green, as was to be expected. Lucky blarney stones in imprinted bags were distributed by boys dressed in green sweaters, post cards mailed to the members of South Side Irish Club, benefit show arranged with the Holy Name Society, local police captains presented with giant invitation from Priscilla Lane.

Marlowe even covered fruit and vegetable markets with half-sheet cards planted in potato bins. Copy read, "3 Cheers for the Irish"—Spuds.

Arnold Sells Unit Show In Third-Run Situation

What spirited exploitation can do for a third-run house is represented in the unit show campaign reported by a new member, John H. Arnold, of Interstate's Yale, in Houston, Tex. The program was composed of "South of the Border" and the short subjects Drunk Driving, Donald Duck and a Popeye, all of which had already played around the neighborhoods.

Emphasizing the various units of the show was a coloring contest in advance for members of the theatre's Popeye Club, heralds containing the program layout used for the purpose. Along the same lines was another contest offering prizes for the club members who could name from memory the greatest number of items in the lobby display. Cowboy and cowgirl singing contest for the members also helped to build interest in the coming program.

Highlight of the lobby display for the four units was a miniature setting, constructed on a flooring of fine sand. Houses, bridges, colliding cars, duck cutouts and other items were put together and painted by the house staff. Ingeniously executed, the exhibit proved a good attractor.

Cooperation given the junior high school by Arnold to sell subscriptions to the school paper, also helped the theatre, each student subscriber given a ticket paid for by the school. The theatreman spoke before the student body in plugging the subscription drive and also the coming attractions. In exchange, the school praised the showmen's efforts and cooperation in page one stories.

Philly's Perfect Husbands Tied to "Too Many Husbands"

Philadelphia's perfect husbands—if any—were given an opportunity to take the spotlight on a contest rigged up by Ev Callow for "Too Many Husbands" at the Boyd, a tiein with the Record offering prizes for the best letters on the subject from loyal wives. Contest ran two weeks ahead, with daily breaks featuring representative answers.

In addition, writers of the best five letters and their mates were gathered at a banquet, where the five finalists competed on a broadcast over KYW, where the woman most eloquently stating the case for her Perfect Husband received the grand prizes of a weekend trip to Atlantic City. The five couples were also guests at the premiere.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Invisible Man" Missing, Reward Offers $1,000

Ten days ahead of "Invisible Man" at the New Spreckels, San Diego, Cal., M. Gronaw, publicist, planted a lobby stunt with Manager Thornton of a dummy, wrapped in bandages, decked with goggles and planted in a bed. Copy above read: "Sh-h. Quiet, please, The Invisible Man is sleeping after a long night of prowling."

Week in advance the dummy "disappeared" and a teaser campaign launched offering $1,000 reward for his return. Papers were tied with the stunt to run kidding stories and pictures of the dummy, heralds with reward copy distributed widely and street cars posted similarly.

"Key to the City" Greets Whiteman

Syracuse was blanketed in the campaign put on recently by Gus Lampe and Harvey Cocks for the "personal" date on Paul Whiteman and his band at the Strand, the orchestra being met at the station and paraded to the City Hall where Whiteman was presented with the key to the city. Appearances at the city and county schools before 1500 children and parents, and an introduction at the weekly fights were also productive of publicity. The bandsman spoke before the student body at the local university, and decked in regulation uniform was appointed a honorary chief of the fire department. Many radio tieups were made, the outstanding being a broadcast on the life of the bandsman, with Whiteman playing himself.

Music Stores Cooperate

Large size co-ops ads were obtained from music stores where the leader autographed his records. Contest feature was included at one of the stores which held recorded auditions for amateur singers, the winners to appear with Whiteman during the engagement. Over 500 entries were had, the store taking large space daily to plug the tiein. All kinds of imprinted material was used in stores, by hotels, and even a skywriting stunt was set to further publicize the engagement. Soda fountains were covered with a contest offering passes for the attendants selling the most Paul Whiteman sundaes.

Main marquee attractor was a 10-foot caricature head of the bandsman in neon, promoted from local sign shop. The caricature head was used widely in the rest of theatre decorations, in special cards spotted on school bulletins, in theatre and co-op advertising. Stickers on laundry bags, house-to-house distribution of heralds, were found useful, and a large banner across the main street also called attention to the date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Book Review Matinee Inaugurated by Markle

Theatremen seeking about for new slants to build matinees will be interested in the weekly Book Review matinee recently started by Jack Markle at the Coolidge Corner, Brookline, Mass. Featured are literary names who review from the stage the outstanding new books, with such personalities as Charles Lee, book editor of the Boston Herald among those appearing. As a further draw, Markle promotes three books to be given away each week in a lucky drawing. Review takes place before the regular performance.

Buildup for the idea was started ahead with newspaper stories, followed by a series of letters to prominent educators, churchmen and school heads, asking for their reactions to the project. Answers were used on behalf of the campaign. The plan was also plugged in heralds and trailers. At the first session, comment cards were distributed requesting information to guide the theatremen in the continuance of the promotion.

Zoo's Animals See Special Screening

Featured in the campaign for "One Million B. C." at the Stanton, Philadelphia, was a screening in the reptile house of the local zoo, arranged by Ev Callow, Warner zone ad head. Purpose of the screening, the main news angle, was to test the reactions of the various animals to their ancestors in the picture. For this purpose were assembled various of the zoo's animals of different species. On hand were reporters, feature writers, photographers and radio commentators, all of whom spread the word widely in the dailies and over the air.

Features Prehistoric Front

Main attractor of the front was an animation showing two of the prehistoric animals locked in battle, their heads moving from side to side. Above was a volcano from which an illusion of eruption was effected with live steam running through a pipe in rear. Rest of the display was in keeping, with plenty of "see" copy and blowups of action scenes framed in the entrance doors. Float made up two 24-sheets, backed by a six, covering the city.

Radio assistance was given through a prehistoric animal contest over WPEN, a coloring cartoon contest over WIP. For the schools, a screening was held for teachers of ancient history and cooperation was had from women's groups in letters to members stressing the birth of civilization as shown in the picture. Libraries and science museums displayed stills and theatre cards. Small stickers, reading: "Back to the good life" and followed by the title were pasted on windows, doors and windshields throughout the city.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Smoking Volcano Effect Builds "Zanzibar" Date

Floridians who never saw a volcano in action were given the opportunity recently in Miami, where on the marquee of the Capitol a volcano crater effect with smoke rising was created by Wometco's art department on Jack Fink's campaign for "Zanzibar." In keeping was an advance lobby flash of jungle atmosphere plus caged wild animals and a front of the same design. Anticipation was built up ahead with special trailer, copy headed "the picture of 1000 thrills."

For street ballyhoo, Fink had a decorated truck representing a jungle village of thatched huts. Local negroes were painted to take the part of jungle savages. Animal crackers were distributed in small imprinted envelopes, copy reading: "This envelope contains one of the performers in," etc. Newsboys and the theatre staff wore imprinted jungle helmets and lettered arrows pointed in the direction of the theatre were planted prominently on strategic corners.

A unique poster easel was made up of stills from the picture and the title spelled out in animal crackers which were silvered and glued to the background. Travel agencies were tied in for windows and the radio employed for further publicity.

RADIO AMATEUR SHOW BUILDS ATTENDANCE

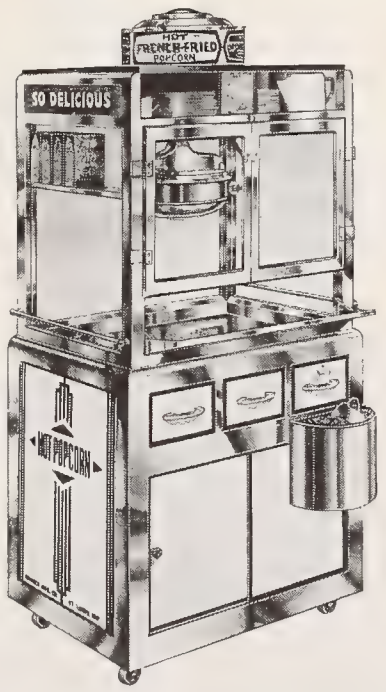
Radio amateur show put on Sunday afternoons from the stage of the Colonial, Pittsburg, Kan., has proved a highlight of the theatre's five weekly air programs, according to Manager G. I. Hunter, who credits Senn Lawler, Fox Midwest publicity head, for the plan.

Commercially sponsored, the program draws from far and near, with entries noted from West Virginia, Arkansas and California, in addition to many towns in Kansas and Missouri. Hunter reports this a favorite program in the rural areas from which the theatre obtains extra patronage during the rest of the week as a result of the broadcast.

Preston's "Gulliver" Tieup

"Gulliver in all his travels never saw such values as these" was the tiein banner line for a day-ahead co-op page on "Gulliver" at the Capitol, St. Thomas, Ontario. Manager Lew Preston promoted local orchestras to plug the picture and songs at dances by offering passes for spot dances, distributed copies of the sheet music to pianists to play at various entertainments. Theatreman also arranged for story of Gulliver to be told at public library story hour.

Athens Proclaims Biscuit Eater Day



Since the picture was filmed in Georgia, Manager P. E. McCoy was able to promote the Mayor of Athens, Ga., to proclaim a "Biscuit Eater Day" on the opening at the Georgia, the event widely publicized in the local press. In addition, the premiere was stressed through a canine contest held in front of the theatre and promoted vigorously for two weeks ahead. Prizes were given for the best bred, prettiest, ugliest dogs, and also the best "plain pooch."

Feature of the judging was a publicity plant carried on the A. P. state wire, wherein Mac arranged for the local dogcatcher to pick up one of the entries on the excuse that the dog had not been vaccinated. Owner of the pooch, a youngster from over the tracks, then broke out in tears, as instructed, at which two university boys, in on the gageroo, passed the hat for funds to inoculate the dog and pay his license. It made a swell human interest yarn with the picture being properly credited.

Kid and Pooch Contest Held

Local radio station was also tied in on a contest, wherein youngsters and their pooches closely resembling the kid star of the picture and his dog competed for prizes promoted from merchants. Winners were carried through the streets in a bannered mule-drawn wagon and presented with the honors from the stage.

Campaign Briefs On Recent Dates

In addition to a special screening for heads of clubs, schools, hospitals, women's organization, etc., addressed by Robert Paskow, Warner Jersey theatres ad head, Manager Louis Stein, Roosevelt, Newark, N. J., made an especial drive to interest the Jewish population in that sector on his date for "Dr. Ehrlich." Leading rabbis and educators urged attendance and benefit was arranged with prominent Jewish lodge. The theatreman made personal contacts with others of the churches and also arranged for student privilege tickets for high school students.

Playing "Flying Deuces" at the time, Chick Tompkins, Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., tied in with the annual civic Easter egg hunt held at two of the city's parks. Among the prizes were passes for eggs decorated with pictures of Laurel and Hardy. Climax of the event, sponsored by civic and business groups, was Tompkins' kiddie matinee, where 10 live bunnies were awarded as extra prizes.

On "It All Came True", at the Opera House, Millinocket, Me., Bill Johnson dug up a cute idea in a special sales slip for grocery stores. Divided in two lengthwise and headed "Speaking of Figures", one-half of the space was devoted to a cut of Ann Sheridan and copy on the picture. The other half was blank, copy at top reading: "Here is how the purchases just made figured up". The filled-in slips were placed in outgoing orders, giving the theatre advertising carried into the homes.

Street broadcast over WCSH was featured by Harry Botwick of the State in Portland, Maine, bystanders being questioned on the "Fighting 69th" and the Rainbow Division as a plug for the picture then playing. Veteran leaders were invited to opening, which brought art and stories in daily papers.

The first boy born in Muncie, Ind., on opening day of "Child Is Born" at the Strand, received an array of gifts promoted by Manager Jim Dooley. Newspaper tiein brought advance stories on the offer and also a three-column cut of mother and baby, in hospital, receiving gift certificates from the theatreman. Added publicity was obtained by radio interview with proud father.

His efforts in cracking an important local shopper's guide finally brought results to Manager Floyd Nutting, Paramount, Grand Forks, N. D., on "Blondie on a Budget," in the form of a co-op page wherein guest tickets were awarded readers finding their home phone numbers listed among four run in each ad. Results were so good, writes Floyd, that the publisher is all set for the next one.

Full co-op page was promoted from local merchants by Carroll T. Wilson of the Campus Theatre in Middlebury, Vt., ahead of opening on "Young Tom Edison." Each ad carried cut of Rooney and Edison appropriately tied to the picture. Wilson is another theatreman to join the ranks of columnist, turning out weekly Hollywood gossip which proves very successful.

Labelling it a "Ballybug" night, John Pival of the Senate Theatre, in Detroit, once a week has a special daffy night during which patrons for cash prizes try to disengage their hands and ankles from rope with which the management has secured them on stage. Various styles of kissing, singing, etc., are some of the other gags worked. Additional publicity for his show was gained by Pival recently when national magazine ran photos taken of shots on his stage.

Outstanding in the campaign for "Tom Edison" at the Lyceum, Duluth, Minn., was a series of ads taken by the local power company and promoted by Manager Geo. D. Irwin. Titled "Sales Editorial," each ad was devoted to the picture, and illustrated by scene cuts. The copy urged attendance, the only commercial tiein being the signature of the sponsor.

Important extra publicity for his date on "Balalaika" at the Strand, Binghamton, N. Y., was secured by Manager Tom Hanifin through the fact a 96-year-old ex-army major, locally resident, had appeared in the picture. Called to the attention of the local paper, cut of the local with the star was used at the head of a two-column story.

For "Geronimo" at the State, Huron, S. D., Manager Lawrence E. Stewart made up a lobby display of Indian head-dresses, bows and arrows, relics, etc. Against colorful background were placed photos of Indian scenes. Small Indian tepee and campfire made up the center of the display, with trees and branches to sell the outdoors.

In addition to the diaper clothes line gag for "Brother Rat" wherein title and playdates were spelled out, Manager R. Anthony, Schine's Piqua, Piqua, Ohio, used a "Faint Check" for "Invisible Man." Copy read that patrons passing out during the picture could use the check for a return.

PAY STATION EVIL REMOVED BY MILTY

That civic defender, Milt Harris, again dashes to the fore to rescue Cleveland this time from wall-writers who mark up public pay stations, to the dismay of hotel and building managers now campaigning to ban the nuisance. Milty contacted the committee, securing an exclusive to supply the stations with imprinted memo pads.

In exchange, the Round Tabler was allowed to imprint the pads with copy for the shows at Loew's State, starting with "House Across the Bay."

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

In his performance of "Edison, The Man," Spencer Tracy clinches his nomination for another Academy Award. M-G-M does itself and the industry proud. —Hollywood Reporter

One of year's finest films, superbly produced, truly memorable. By its strength and appeal, circuits and exhibitors everywhere are certain beneficiaries, as is the public. Spencer Tracy's performance will surely command most serious consideration by those who vote the coveted Oscars of 1940. It's a box-office power-house. —Film Daily

"Edison, The Man" takes its place as one of the superior motion pictures. Spencer Tracy supplies one of his strongest performances. —Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times

By every measure a splendid and memorable production, destined to take its place amongst the important pictures of the year. A truly great performance. A picture of distinction and commercial promise. —Daily Variety

A commanding screen work . . . compellingly impressive. A fine piece of box-office merchandise. Spencer Tracy's portrayal is his best performance. The preview audience was completely captured by the film. —M. P. Daily

THE WAR and NOW

IT has been a week of darkening skies, ill news, foreboding and anxieties, the civilization of the world of democracy under ordeal and with these United States brought up close to peer over into the abyss of debacle. The President is asking for armament in terms of a program that contemplates billions.

In this world of radio, airplane, television, there is no isolation. The motion picture has been experiencing for years, not too consciously, the raising of the walls of nationalism, the preparation for war, in fact.

The screen institution of America has had quite as much of warnings indeed as the Allies, and the world, had when Nazi Germany marched into the Ruhr. Its preparation in response has been considerably of the same order.

First we heard that the Latin-Americas were to save the status quo. It was the great market that was going to make up for what was being lost overseas. This ignored the fact that the American picture industry had been doing a job in the Latin countries for years. It was all just a piece for the papers.

With world markets shrinking, production costs, the expenses of our Lady Hollywood, continued to increase. "Longer runs, higher admissions, higher rentals," Hollywood cried—and got them, here and there. Some of the consequences have not been so good. Some have not been recorded, yet.

"More, more, more" is what the Lady says. If not from the other Americas, then she would have it from the home folks.

ALL other approaches to the spenders' purse have been seeking to increase consumption by offering more for less, even to the New York World's Fair and the New York stage.

Certain demonstrations are held to evidence that the public will pay more and more for a motion picture—but that is manifestly not true for the motion picture, nor for the national amusement budget.

The over-all cost made responsible ultimately at the box offices of the nation's theatres is based precisely on what the public is willing to pay. There is no other yardstick. Interior to that fact there can be, has been, will be, negotiation, finagle, adjustment and bargaining about who gets what share. The public does not care much about the details, but in the average consumer's opinion anyone making over $50 a week is getting into the money, over $100 a week into the blue chips. That's the America that the motion picture exists to serve.

Today's Hollywood cost programs and budgets accept precedent as economic law. It is not.

Miss Mary Pickford once upon a time said to your editor that "it would be a good thing for the motion picture if we all went broke and went to work."

Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, arguing in a somewhat divergent direction, remarked the other day that he had been told that his advice to the producers would be taken "only after they have missed their first payroll."

Such expressions seem to indicate an interior opinion about a collective judgment. The fact seems to be that everyone in Hollywood is smarter than Hollywood is.

Persons of reasonable discretion are able to live on their income and resources. The motion picture has to live on its income, because by the nature of its structure and corporate habits it accumulates little against periods of adversity. What comes in goes out, forthwith.

Happily, these United States are abundantly provided with all that it takes to make and maintain a motion picture industry. It needs no importations of talent, skills or materials. It has vast audience. The American screen can survive and even prosper in the Americas, even if Lady Hollywood has to give up caviar and truffles.

TO this desk today came a letter from Hollywood, from a detached observer of the scene: "Hereabouts they seem to regard the war as something in the nature of a super-special melodrama, mightily interesting in the day-to-day making, but as if it were something to be completed ultimately and shipped off across the mountains to a sales department in New York. What I mean is that nobody here seems to take the long view—or any long views. I realize the market value of artistic detachment on the part of persons whose job is to create entertainment—but it makes me lonesome, because I can remember mobilization, and a world that could not afford to be detached because it was not."

It can be done, by the showmen of America. Those who do it will be the showmen of America.

BASKET OF FISH

WHAT has happened in the sweep of totalitarian powers across neutral countries, especially in view of the methods, would appear now to give those who would minimize the significances of the campaigns of Nazis and Leftists in America occasion to reconsider.

The events of the last few weeks have demonstrated the importance and depth of effect from subversive movements, be they subtle or clumsy, daring or camouflaged. The story is written in blood and disaster from Scandinavia to Belgium.

That is "over there", but over here the boring-from-within process continues.

In the name of art, in the name of liberty, in the name of anything on which they can lay hands for protective coloration, the agents, exponents and vendors of the Sickle & Hammer brand of social order are continuing, in varying degrees of adroitness, to push their cause—and continuing in the world of the motion picture.

Just now there is little indeed of their product reaching the screen.

There is a vast deal of their propagandization, in the name of art, in the name of liberty, in the name of free speech, in the current literature of the screen. The whole lore of the screen is being rewritten, in artistic and historical dissertations, "to the line", being "cultured". A surprising number of these

England Takes

WHEN, on Wednesday, England moved to conscript all national resources, manpower, profits and all manner of wealth to defend the empire, the American motion picture industry, long beset with quotas, restrictions and regulations in the all important British market, found itself faced with problems both new and largely unknown.

Presumptively all that pertains to the motion picture as an industry and business falls into the category of the conscriptions—which mean the ordering of all persons and institutions for the common defense. One flat proviso announced contemplated a 100 per cent profits tax.

The new English regulation makes the question of future cash withdrawals from England by U. S. film companies highly speculative, at least for some time. Up to the present, the seven American major distributors have taken out an estimated $15,000,000 under the monetary War agreement which permitted a total withdrawal of $17,500,000 during the 12 months ending next November. Universal, not maintaining its own distribution office in England, is not included, but likewise may not take out more than 50 per cent of its British revenue.

Industry organizations in England were invited to a conference Thursday with the new customs and excise officials on a new purchase tax which may be applied to the motion picture business.

The French government has called in all American and Canadian dollars and gold held in that country. No agreement has yet been reached on exchange between the French government and representatives of the American film industry. Negotiations were being conducted in Paris but the present situation has postponed them.

operations, appearing in diverse and apparently remote publications, trace back to the copy, counsel and instructions of a single person, Moscow graduate, charmingly ensconced on an institutional payroll supported by proud but practical persons of wealth who appear to fancy they are buying immunity, cheaply. Currently the immunity from attack in print and on soap box seems to be operating, but the durability of the device and the final costs are yet to be measured.

One might have thought that the culminations of that curious expedient of retaining Diego Rivera by the Rockefellers with the mural consequences in Radio City would have been to them and several contemporaries a conclusive sort of demonstration.

What was demonstrated in murals, it would seem, will have to be done all over again in type and other media. There is an order of person who has to eat the whole basket of fish to be sure they are spoiled.

Dictator Scheduled

WHAT with the war and such, the New York office of United Artists Corporation at mid-week discovered "a Hollywood report" that Charles Chaplin's "Production No. 6," alias some such title as "The Dictators," was being withdrawn, postponed or something.

So it seems Murray Silverstone wired Mr. Chaplin and that Alfred Reeves, manager, who intercepts all the Chaplin traffic in LaBrea avenue, wired back: "I have contacted Charlie and he authorized the following statement: 'The report I may withdraw my film is entirely without foundation. I am cutting it and as soon as it is synchronized it will be released. More than ever now the world needs to laugh. . .'"

United Artists' New York office says it is expecting the picture for September release.

The picture is, presumably, that same which back in the pre-Munich days, the British Foreign office was reported to be sharply opposing on the ground that it might irritate Herr Hitler. Now, presumably they hope it will.

WOR Reviews

MOTION picture openings of notable calibre, in the New York area, are to be given news broadcast treatment by New York's Radio Station WOR. The first of such attentions was given last week to the multiple city opening of the biographical subject "Edison the Man," MGM production, in the Oranges of New Jersey. Henry Pringle, biographer and author of many vigorous magazine articles, covered the openings and took to the air with an account of them and a critical discussion of the picture of which he approved. According to Theodore C. Streibert, vice-president, WOR will set itself no schedule of picture reviewing, but will present reviews and reports of openings when provocation offers.

Third Dimension

THREE DIMENSIONAL cinematography using the polaroid filter-and lorgnette system made its commercial appearance in New York this week in a showing at the sportswear shop of the Bloomingdale department store, with three showings a day.

The subject was bathing suits, all occupied. An added attraction was "Miss Jantzen of 1940," in personal appearance.

Three dimensional screen photography appears to be making progress in the advertising and industrial fields where the use of a viewing device is not invasive of the spectators' interest. Thus far experience dating back over more than a dozen years has not found stereoscopic systems contributing to dramatic effect or audience reaction beyond novelty appeal.

"Wind" Armistice

INDICATIONS in London over the week end were that a settlement of the acrid battle over the British release of "Gone with the Wind" was near but the order to cease firing had not yet been given by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association which has used the dispute as the keynote of its battle against what it claims to be excessive film rentals.

The belief that peace was near was engendered chiefly by a cable from Louis B. Mayer, head of MGM production in Hollywood, urging conciliation. His cable was in reply to a direct appeal from Harry Mears, president of the CEA, to order the release of "Wind" at normal rentals and under normal conditions. Sam Eckman, MGM head in England, indicated his willingness to meet the CEA on the matter if he was not confronted with a fait accompli and Mr. Mears, in reply, said, "The door is open. There is no need to knock."

Following a single independent booking of "Wind" in Manchester for next week the CEA launched an intensive propaganda fight against the film, using the local press to reach the theatre going public.

"Wind" grossed nearly $100,000 in its first week at the Empire, Ritz and Palace theatres in London's West End according to a cable to the New York Times from C. A. Lejeune. The receipts, almost $40,000 more than the record set by the first "Broadway Melody," were emphasized by Miss Lejeune as the more remarkable because they came in a week when the Norwegian campaign looked blackest, when a record wartime budget was announced and "with the paper ration and purchase tax in effect and Scotch at $4 a bottle."

U. S. vs ASCAP

THE American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was served on May 15th with a grand jury subpoena obtained by the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice.

ASCAP is seeking to effect a new contract on January 1st with radio broadcasters providing for a 70 per cent increase in ASCAP's music royalty. When a similar effort was made in 1934 to increase music "tax" rates for motion picture exhibitors, the Federal Government filed a suit against ASCAP charging that it was an illegal monopoly, acting to restrain trade in the field of popular music. Exhibitors got some relief, dropped their fight against the Society and the U. S. let its suit rest.

Now the radio industry is protesting against higher ASCAP rates and has organized Broadcast Music, Inc. to compete with the Society with a music catalogue.

ASCAP moved this week to quash the present subpoena which, it is understood, might lead to criminal prosecution. Attorneys for the Society conferred with representatives of the Department of Justice on Wednesday, this being followed by the setting of next Wednesday for a hearing by Henry W. Goddard, federal judge, on the grand jury subpoena.

Slot-Movie Union

THE nickel-in-the-slot movie industry, still in promotion and yet to earn its first dollar, that new enterprise of such entrepreneurs as James Roosevelt, and Sam Sax and Frank Orsatti, is going to be born unionized.

The Screen Actors Guild, Hollywood talent union, has already laid claim to jurisdiction over entertainers appearing in pictures for coin machines on the bar room and cocktail lounge circuits.

"SAG officers know that the slot machine movies will vary from the ordinary production of motion pictures, but it has been tentatively agreed that the Guild, through the offices of the parent stage-screen-radio actors' union, Associated Artists and Artistes of America ("Four A's'), has jurisdiction over the performers," said Guild officers in Hollywood, last week.

No move will be made, according to Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, to attempt to negotiate a complete agreement covering terms and conditions of work and minimum wage scales until the various companies are fully under way.

However, any member of any AAAA branch will be permitted to work for the producers without shifting membership to the Guild, and the Guild film producers' minimum wage scales must be observed.

New Erpi Contracts

LOEW'S and Paramount have signed a revised license agreement with Electrical Research Products, Inc., for recording and print royalties. The terms of the new contracts, which are retroactive to July 1, 1936 are the same as the companies have been paying since that date but certain additional concessions have been granted.

The producing companies will be given a 25 per cent credit for the purchase of new recording equipment on all royalty charges over a set minimum. The new contracts provide for both recording and world-wide distribution. The basic old agreement, which was drawn up in 1928 at the start of sound, had different charges for distribution in different places. The new agreement is also said to give a more liberal and a better outlined patent indemnity clause.

The basic charges remain $54 per reel on high budget productions and $27 per reel on low cost films. The new agreement runs until 1944. Erpi is negotiating with the other producing companies and said Wednesday it hopes that shortly all its producer licensees will sign the new basic agreement.

Tax Interpretation

IN A DECISION of apparently far-reaching importance to motion picture talent resident in other states, who may take film contracts in California, the U. S. Board of Tax Appeals in Washington, Tuesday, held that if a married person domiciled in a noncommunity property state performs a contract in California from which he derives income, the income is not to be regarded as community property simply because it was earned in California.

This rule was laid down in passing on an appeal of Herbert Marshall, English film actor, from deficiencies of $86,938 assessed against his 1933, 1934 and 1935 returns by the U. S. Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Actor Marshall, who went to California in July, 1933, under a contract to make motion pictures, contended that he was domiciled in that state through the remainder of the year and therefore entitled to take advantage of its community property laws. The Appeals Board, however, held that he had not proved definitely that at that time he was determined to make that state his permanent domicile, and affirmed a deficiency of $3,899 imposed by the Commissioner.

The Board did hold that by 1934 he had made up his mind to reside in California and that, accordingly, he was entitled to take advantage of the community property laws, under which he was liable to tax upon only one-half of his net income.

COLUMBIA, ONLY MAJOR BIDDER, GETS DISTRIBUTION OF "FIGHT FOR LIFE"

Release of "Fight for Life", Maternity Study, on Basis of 75 Per Cent of Gross to Columbia Pictures

Columbia Pictures and Uncle Sam this week became partners in motion picture distribution, Columbia agreeing to pay Uncle Sam 25 per cent of the gross, taking 75 per cent for selling "The Fight for Life."

National distribution to "regular" film theatres of the U. S. Film Service's feature, about maternity in the slums, produced by Pare Lorentz, was turned over Monday to Columbia Pictures by the Federal Security Agency, at Washington for five years, when the rights will revert to the Federal Government.

Only Major Bidder

Columbia's bid was the only one submitted from among the ten large distributors, although the Government had sent bid invitations to all. Previously, Loew's circuit management in New York had rejected the film for exhibition in its houses.

The Government also sent invitations to numerous smaller distributors, and although word from Washington several days ago said that 29 of them had responded, the Federal Security Agency, Monday, could furnish the names of but six: Jewel Productions, American Pictures, Astor, World, Film Alliance and one Thomas Brady.

It was reported in Washington that there was considerable dissatisfaction over the contract award, but U. S. officials concerned said Columbia made the most advantageous proposal, offering to pay the Government 25 per cent of its gross receipts from the film, and that it had shown it was in advantageous position to distribute it, having 31 exchanges and making, on the average 8,000 theatre contracts annually for the pictures it handles.

It was said in the Capital that one of the charges lodged was that Columbia would be able to turn the distribution over to an independent, but it was pointed out at the Federal Security Agency that a provision of U. S. law prohibits a contractor from "farming out" his contract, unless specific provision is made in the agreement for such a course.

To Be Leased Separately

"Fight for Life" is to be leased as a single feature on its own specific contract, and may not be blocked, i.e., sold with other films. The company may lease it on a flat rental or percentage basis, in the same way it handles any other picture, but, "because of the inherent difficulty of estimating the value of a picture in advance, the actual prices are left to the discretion of the distributor with only the stipulation that they be reasonable."

In addition to the requirement that the film be booked alone and by separate contract, the FSA has set down other requirements, providing that Columbia may not cancel the special, standard contract or make changes therein without Government approval and that all exploitation material also is to be submitted for approval of the Government before it is issued. The company is also prohibited from extending credit to exhibitors on the picture except with permission from the Government. No other contract or bidding requirements would be divulged.

The contract is to become effective upon receipt by Columbia of the negative, complete, which will be shortly.

Columbia's home office in New York made announcement of the acquisition, late Tuesday, in the following statement to the press, which it termed "important":

"Columbia has been awarded by the Government the contract to distribute nationally the Pare Lorentz film, 'The Fight for Life,' which opened sensationally at the Belmont Theatre, New York, at $1.10, and is now in the 12th week of an apparently indefinite run there.

"The company plans to pre-release the picture in a number of key cities. The contract with the United States Government stipulates that the film must be sold separately, and that the Government will participate in the profits."

Opposed by Audience Groups

When "The Fight for Life," first sound feature to be produced by the Government for regular theatre consumption, made its first public appearance, at New York's Belmont, it immediately became the subject of wide controversy, in medical quarters and elsewhere, because of its treatment of childbirth. There were some "outside" individuals who encouraged its showing, others who did not, among them the Maternity Association Center of New York, which stated that its theatre exhibition would bring "fear and terror."

The film does not carry a Production Code Seal, nor has any application been received by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to grant one. The ommision of a Code number is explained on the grounds that the film, as being sponsored by the government, "does not need a seal." Whether its acquisition by Columbia changes its PCA status, had not been determined.

The production has been shown to the New York State Board of Censors for the purpose of that body's own information and not for obtaining the Board's imprimatur, that had not been required because it is considered an "educational." "Birth of a Baby," a picture similar in theme and treatment to "The Fight for Life," was barred in 1938 from any public place of amusement by the New York State Censor Board.

The National Legion of Decency placed "Fight for Life" in the "separate classification" accorded certain pictures, observing that introduction of this kind of material on the theatrical screen for presentation to unselected audiences is questionable, and concluding that the possibility that the depiction of the dangers attendant upon childbirth may affright some audience members.

T. C. Atkins, production consultant for the U. S. Film Service, as producers of "The Fight for Life," had been in New York for several weeks prior to the making of the award, investigating bidders. He explained before returning to Washington, that the Government not only made certain that the successful bidder could fulfill distribution, but also all stipulations set down in connection therewith.

The type of production which the maternity subject might receive at the hands of some "independent" distributors of clinical subjects, had been a matter of speculation in film quarters in New York, it being felt by some that attempts might be made by a certain type of independent to exploit the film in some "sexsational" manner.

"The Fight for Life" brought out in the open, last March, smouldering resentment in Congress against the New Deal's spendings by the U. S. Film Service on "documentary" films like "Life," "The Plough That Broke the Plains," "The River," etc. It resulted in both houses abolishing the Service after June 30th by not making funds available for 1940-41.

Typical of the attack was that led by Congressman Albert J. Engel (Rep., Mich.), who made the charge that the U. S. Office of Education had supplied $178,000 of WPA public relief money "to make 'The Fight for Life' to show poor people in the slums eating from garbage cans, after seven years of New Deal squandering of public funds." Representative Engel further charged that President Roosevelt had allocated $331,000 of emergency relief money for such "documentary" films.

After preliminary hearings, and while the U. S. Film Service was still hoping for appropriations to continue, it became known in Washington that producer Pare Lorentz' salary had been cut from $10,000 to $7,500 a year to conform with salaries paid in the U. S. Office of Education, and it was said that in all probability he would resign on June 30th.

House Refuses Funds

Adamant in its opposition to continuance of both the motion picture and radio services set up by President Roosevelt without Congressional sanction, the House Appropriations Committee this week, in submitting the 1940-41 relief appropriation legislation, included in the measure two specific prohibitions against the expenditure of relief funds for those activities and emphasized the point in the report.

Outlining, in Section 12, certain restrictions on agencies spending relief funds, the Committee incorporated in the measure a provision that "except as authorized in this joint resolution, no allocation of funds shall be made to any Federal agency. No such allocation shall be made for the exercise of the functions of the Radio Division or the United States Film Service transferred to the Office of Education of the Federal Security Agency."

In the New York offices of the U. S. Film Service, established to maintain contact with the motion picture industry, in its distribution home, feeling was bitter against the Congressmen, who, the employees of the Service felt, did not give the Service a "fair hearing" and who did not fully know of its activities. It was pointed out by one person in the distribution department that the Service had recently catalogued over 300 films made by it and other agencies of the Government; that these films represented a value to the country; that the catalogue was a work in itself; that the Service had tried to correlate information, for distribution on films of various agencies; that its activities, nevertheless, were not fully appreciated by the Congressmen who allowed its demise; that it had opened an exchange in Washington for the distribution of the Government films; and that, in the operation of this exchange, it was hampered by the animosity of the major companies, whose film exchanges in that city were nearby.

MPTOA PLEADS FOR RED CROSS TRAILER

The American Red Cross is appealing to the public for war funds through the newsreels, along with other media, and the MPTOA, through Edward L. Kuykendall, president, on Wednesday appealed to exhibitors to cooperate by not allowing the appeal message to be cut from newsreels when it reaches their theatres.

'GYPSY' SHOWS INVADE HINTERLAND WITH 16mm

And Two Hundred or More Motion Pictures, 40 of Them Produced in 1939, Are Available from Large Companies

Like the gypsies, hundreds of 16mm film exhibitors are now taking to the roads with the spring, to the deep concern of many a "regular" theatre owner whose path will be crossed by the itinerants in competition and who face in addition World Fairs as well as thousands of carnivals, night baseball, softball and other outdoor games, amusement parks and beaches.

A greater number than ever of itinerant showmen, using 16mm motion pictures for the most part, will be on the road, reports show and the parallel increase in the 16mm so-called "non-theatrical" business has been accentuated with hundreds of theatrical features and thousands of shorts available to the users of 16mm projectors.

A survey of the principal regular film companies shows that a large number of features, many of a recent date, are available for 16mm "non-theatrical" distribution. Listed are two hundred or more films, including nearly 40 produced in 1939, made by the 10 large companies, and exhibitors again are charging that many 16mm pictures for theatres are finding their way into "competitive" itinerant situations.

Four Companies in Field

RKO, Paramount, Universal and Monogram are the principal companies that have given attention to the 16mm field, reducing to 16mm from 35mm product. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox have not entered the 16mm business, holding that it is not good policy. The viewpoint of these companies, which neither distribute 16mm film nor have 16mm pictures handled by outsiders for them, is summed up by Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who said, "MGM is interested only in doing business with established theatres."

The 16mm distributors and some majors which handle 16mm films do not wish too much attention give to their activities. The position of the companies which make 16mm prints available is that these films are solely for non-theatrical use.

G. W. Hedwig of Nu-Art Film Company, a 16mm distributor, said, "The less said about 16mm films the better. Exhibitors are always squawking when companies sell 16mm rights to their films."

Louis S. Lifton, director of advertising and publicity for Monogram Pictures said that company made available its films for 16mm purposes after a certain time and then only for non-theatrical purposes.

RKO's general policy is not to make available 16mm prints of its pictures anywhere that there can be any possible competition with theatres.

Paramount Leaving Field

Paramount has decided, because of the detail involved and the very small revenue obtained, to drop all 16mm activity. For some time the company experimented with 16mm films for special non-competitive spots but now plans permanently to drop 16mm prints, according to Jack Barry.

Universal policy is to rent 16mm prints only to "absolutely non-competitive" situations, according to Herman Stern. In each case the distributor must approve the 16mm booking. 16mm prints of Universal pictures as old as eight to ten years are shown in steamships, CCC camps, prisons and to shut-ins.

Last November national Allied States Association issued a bulletin condemning "increased activity in the public exhibition of 16mm film." At that time companies were urged to examine their 16mm contracts to make sure that public exhibitions would be illegal.

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., has warned its members about the threat of illegal 16mm. competition this summer. The Association said that some 16mm showmen were offering complete 90-minute shows, obtained at rental of as low as $7.50. The 16mm exhibitors are expected to be active in Wisconsin and Michigan this summer.

Asks Exhibitors to Report

P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in the organization's current service bulletin asks exhibitors to report any cases where pictures shown in "itinerant theatres" do not carry the Ohio censorship leader. The bulletin said that several hundred such "theatres" were expected in the State this summer. "In most of the spots, 16mm film will be used and the tieups are usually with groups of merchants," Mr. Wood wrote, "These shows are given both indoors and outdoors."

Bookings on 16mm product of the principal companies must be approved by the company. Some exhibitors claim that approval has been given to a situation as "non-competitive" when the business of the theatre is hurt. It also has been pointed out a 16mm print might be booked for a home showing and instead be shown in an "itinerant theatre" or elsewhere.

A large number of 16mm films, most of them made by the smaller independents and foreign companies, are booked without any restriction except not in places that regularly show 35mm film. In these cases the 16mm rights have been sold "without restriction."

Applications Made Easy

Most of the 16mm distribution is handled by large recognized companies. However, there are many smaller distributors of 16mm film. Even the large companies make the application for approval from the major company as easy as possible. The Bell & Howell "Filmosound Library" (16mm catalogue) explains this: "Some of these films, notably those from 'major' producers, are restricted against showing in any but "approved locations." An application blank for such approval is inserted into this catalogue. Please fill it out immediately and mail in the postpaid envelope, even before you are ready for your first show. No commitment is involved. The application for 'Universal' approval is all that is necessary." The company also stresses the value of "non-theatrical advertising with theatrical materials," and rents press books, lobby cards, glossy stills, one-sheets as well as discussion outlines and study guides.

In many cases 16mm prints can be bought outright as well as rented. Sale prices run from about $15 to $30 per reel. The range of rental for a feature is $15 to $25. "The Big Parade" at $6 tops the price list for silent features. Shorts are rented from a dollar on up. In addition to those rented there are hundreds of free shorts, advertising and promotional material. It is said that many of these "sponsored" reels have little or no advertising and are made entirely from an entertainment viewpoint.

Eastman Showings Restricted

The Eastman Kodascope 16mm catalogue points out that certain designated films are "restricted." Those indicated are "offered for exhibition in non-theatrical places of entertainment, such as residences, schools, churches, camps, institutions, clubs, railroad trains and other private and semi-private places which do not admit the general public for an admission fee." The restricted films, it is said, must not be shown, even without charge, under merchant sponsorship. Mickey Mouse, Silly Symphony and other Walt Disney cartoons are rented by Eastman but "their showing must not be advertised, nor made open to the general public, nor may admission be charged for their viewing," and must not be shown in competition with motion picture theatres.

Castle Films distributes 16mm films based on newsreels and other short subjects. The sound edition of 350 feet of Castle Films sells for $17.50 and is "based on original footage of theatrical release."

A large number of RKO and Universal 16mm films is handled by Walter O. Gutlohn, Inc. That company issues two large catalogues of 16mm films, one "entertainment films" and the other "educational films." In the educational classification are included some features and many shorts which received theatrical distribution in their 35mm form.

The YMCA, through its Motion Picture Bureau, is a large distributor of 16mm film. For $2 an organization joins the Film Service and is eligible to receive many films free and others for a rental fee. Universal and Columbia advertise in the YMCA catalogue to call attention to their "non-theatrical" departments.

TWO-REEL SUBJECT ON UNEMPLOYMENT

A two-reel documentary film on technological unemployment, "The Valley," has been made under the auspices of the Educational Film Institute of New York University in New York City and the Documentary Film Productions, Inc. The production is the third by this group, the other two having been "Children Must Learn" and "And So They Live." Willard Van Dyke, who was connected with the housing documentary film, "The City," directed the shootings of "The Valley." The picture has no definite distribution plans or release date. The Educational Film Institute with Dr. Spencer Pollard as director is financed by a grant from the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation for the purpose of making documentary films on national economic subjects.

of unauthorized, non-contractual exhibitions of both 35 and 16mm film to laxity on the part of exhibitors in previous seasons. He said that the exhibitors must be vigilantes and spot any suspicious showing and report it to their state organization which would refer it to the Bureau, if circumstances warranted.

"The distributors are spending great sums of money," Mr. Levin said, "to offer policing and protection, but the exhibitor must be the local constable. The Copyright Protection Bureau cooperates more readily with exhibitors than the exhibitors with the Bureau."

He explained the purpose of the Bureau was to keep territories clear of non-contracted, unauthorized exhibitions of film, and pleaded for 100 per cent cooperation and prompt notice of suspicious showings.

The following is a partial list of 16mm features available, together with their original release dates. In addition to those listed, hundreds of features made by independents, films of British companies and other producers are being distributed by 16mm companies. The number of shorts in 16mm runs into the thousands, among them the Disney cartoons, Universal shorts, Terrytoons and films made by the Government and other similar agencies. All the pictures listed are intended for "non-theatrical" showings but exhibitors charge that scores of them are used in competition by itinerant showmen:

$278,210 Award to Hart In UA Suit Upheld

The Court of Appeals in Albany Tuesday affirmed without opinion a judgment for $278,210 in favor of William S. Hart, western star, and his sister Mary against the United Artists Corporation. This action ended nine years of litigation during which the suit has been in the lower and appellate divisions of both the Federal and New York State courts.

Mr. Hart charged that his production, "Tumbleweeds" (1925), was improperly block-booked with "Wild Justice" and as a result he suffered a loss on the deal. On November 4, 1938, the New York Supreme Court awarded Mr. Hart $85,000. This judgment was upheld by the Appellate Division November 17, 1939. United Artists appealed and a new trial was ordered. At the new trial the judgment, including the interest, was increased. House, Grossman, Vorhaus & Henley represented Mr. Hart.

Reissue "West Wall"

The RKO Pathe short subject, "West Wall," first released last December, has been reissued for the New York RKO circuit, opening in 41 houses, and for the RKO circuit nationwide later.

FCC COMMERCIALIZES "FM", ADDING CONFUSION TO TELEVISION CHAOS

Assignment of Bands for Use After January 1st Will Force Television Out of Its Number One Channel

By a sweeping use of its power the Federal Communications Commission last Sunday gave commercial standing to frequency modulation broadcasting and simultaneously further confused the television situation which has been in a heavy fog ever since the Commission's recent contradictory orders. The number one television channel from 46,000 to 50,000 kilocycles was given over to FM radio so that the latter would have complete use of the whole band between 42,000 and 50,000 kilocycles.

Wider Radio Use Seen

The Commission's action in granting commercialization to FM broadcasting beginning next January 1st will further the competition offered by radio to motion picture theatres. FM stations can operate in areas and at times when the regular radio is unsatisfactory and furthermore stations will be possible for every town of any size, presenting many exhibitors with local radio competition where it has not been found up to now.

Frequency modulation broadcasting (FM) was described in two articles in Motion Picture Herald (December 9 and 16, 1939). Said to be the answer to the radio listener's dream, it is claimed to be "staticless" and to give "unbelievable" high fidelity reception. Many engineers believe that FM radio will eventually replace the present system and that the 40,000,000 receivers and $75,000,000 worth of transmitters now in use will be made obsolete.

Television Seen Set Back

The possibility of early competition to motion picture theatres from television appeared more remote following the FM decision because most of the present television stations will be asked to "move over" to make room for the FM broadcasters. W2XBS, NBC's television station in New York, has done the most extensive experimentation in program technique and it will have to move from its present band. Until the Commission issues its television order, expected any day, the television stations using channel No. 1 do not know their new band assignments.

An additional complicating factor is that changes in the wave length used by television stations will require expensive alterations in the transmitters and keep them off the air some time. Furthermore, adjustments might be required in all present television receivers.

At the present time the following television stations, in addition to NBC's W2XBS, use the wave length which has been taken away from television: the Don Lee Broadcasting System station, W6XAO, which also has a regular program schedule; the Allen B. DuMont (Paramount affiliate) station in Passaic, N. J., W2XVT; W3XPF, Farnsworth; W9XAL, First National Television; W2XB-W2XH, General Electric Company; W1XG, General Television Corporation; W3XE, Philco; W2XDR, Radio Pictures, Inc.; W3XEP, RCA Manufacturing Company; W9XZV, Zenith Radio Corporation, and several other stations.

The action of the FCC provides 40 200-kilocycle channels for FM broadcasting. This is said to be sufficient to cover the whole country because FM stations can operate on the same wave-length every hundred miles or so without any interference with each other. Of the 40 FM bands 35 will be available for regular commercial radio and five for non-commercial, experimental and educational work.

In addition to taking the No. 1 television channel which is used by most television stations the No. 8 band from 156,000 to 162,000 kilocycles has been discontinued. The present No. 2 channel will be renumbered No. 1 and a new channel will be provided for television at 60,000 to 66,000 kilocycles. This band was taken away from the Government which was given the No. 8 television channel and the 40,000 to 42,000 kilocycle band in exchange.

At present the CBS television station in New York, W2XAX, is assigned to channel No. 2. If the NBC station is moved up, the CBS station also will have to change its wave length.

Also as a result of the changes all of the some 130 applications for FM radio stations now pending will be dismissed in order that new applications may be filed for the space on the frequencies now available for FM broadcasting. The authorization of existing experimental stations will be terminated by January 1st so that the new requests may be made for wave lengths.

Commission Lauds Development

Frequency modulation was hailed by the Government body as "one of the most significant" contributions made to radio in recent years.

"FM is highly developed. It is ready to move forward on a broad scale and on a full commercial basis. On this point there is complete agreement among the engineers of both the manufacturing and the broadcasting industries," the report said.

"A substantial demand for FM transmitting stations for full operation exists today. A comparable public demand for receiving sets is predicted. It can be expected, therefore, that this advancement in the broadcast art will create employment for thousands of persons in the manufacturing, installation and maintenance of transmitting and receiving equipment and the programming of such stations," the report said.

Although five companies now make FM receivers about a dozen firms are expected to enter the field immediately. Transmitting equipment is being made by General Electric, Western Electric and Radio and Engineering Laboratories, Long Island City. The RCA Manufacturing Company has announced that it will make FM transmitters.

The Commission's report said that present standard broadcasting would continue and that it would "render full service for a number of years." It admitted that it could not predict the extent to which the public would be attracted away from "standard" broadcasting.

Facsimile development was also stimulated by the FCC's order. W. G. H. Finch, facsimile inventor, said that service on a national basis might be expected in a short time.

DuMont Discontinues Small Sets

The Allen B. DuMont company has discontinued production of small image television receivers and is now concentrating on large-screen, direct-vision receivers, using the 14-inch and 20-inch DuMont teletrons. Mr. DuMont said: "Television long ago passed through its 'head-phone stage,' just as did sound broadcasting in its earlier days. Today the public is interested in large images that can be comfortably viewed by a group."

Television Reception at Sea

The National Broadcasting Company reported that clear and steady television images were seen on the President Roosevelt, U. S. liner, when the ship was more than 230 miles out. This record-breaking reception was had after RCA engineers returned from a demonstration of television at Hamilton, Bermuda. Engineers reported that the reception was caused by a wave refracted in the atmosphere.

Theatre Planned for Television

One of the first theatres in Ohio to be equipped for television, if and when it is developed to permit projection of televised pictures on a screen for use in a theatre, will be built in a Columbus suburban location by Hal D. Dickinson. Estimated cost of the structure, which will contain two storerooms and eight apartments in addition to the theatre, is given at $75,000. Excavation work is to begin June 1st for completion November 1st. There will be an adjacent parking lot to accommodate 200 cars. The house will be leased by W. J. Russell, who operates the suburban Pythian and Columbia theatres in Columbus.

Theatre Radio Permit Denied

The application of the Publix Bamford Theatres, Inc. of Asheville, N. C., for a construction permit for a new radio station in that city has been denied by the Federal Communications Commission.

HOLLYWOOD'S ALL-STAR TELEVISION MIXUP

The first all-star telecast scheduled by the Don Lee System television station, WX6AO, last Sunday failed because no one told the screen actors they would be televised.

Mickey Rooney, Edward Arnold, Lewis Stone, Hedda Hopper, Marjorie Rambeau, Rosemary Lane and Marsha Hunt appeared at the station for a rehearsal of "I Am an American" before their appearance at the Hollywood Bowl. The screen players thought it was merely a Mutual radio program. When they learned it was also scheduled for a telecast, that part of the program had to be cancelled because the film actors and actresses did not have time to prepare and learn their lines.

Milliken Addresses Club

Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, addressed the annual dinner of the Indianapolis Business and Professional Women's Club Thursday night in that city. He said that the motion picture could only have arisen to its present state under a democratic form of government.

GERMAN FILMS IN U.S. IN 'FIFTH COLUMN' SEARCH

FBI Conducts Investigation of Imports, Theatres in Drive Against Subversion

Precautions being taken by the United States Government against subversive activities of foreign powers through "fifth columns," propagandizing and other methods, have reached the American motion picture business.

It has been learned that agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation—the "secret service" arm of the Government—have been investigating the German language film market in the U. S., with a view to guarding against sabotage, espionage or worse.

Imports Scrutinized

Operations of all foreign-language theatres here are being watched by the U. S. agents, but it is understood that German film imports are the subject of major interest and attention in the FBI investigation, which, according to Washington sources, is aimed at forestalling any "fifth column" development—remembering the preparations which the Nazi "fifth columns" made in the lowlands of Europe.

There are some 175 foreign language film houses in 85 U. S. cities and towns in 25 states, 23 of them in New York City. Forty-one of the 175 play German pictures. Seventy-six of the total, however, show foreign films only occasionally, because of non-availability.

Washington this week recalled that Denmark a few years ago was forced to take steps to prevent the spread of Nazi doctrines through motion pictures and established special Government control over film imports, of which a large number were being received from Germany.

Called "Routine Matter"

Department of Justice officials of the FBI in Washington would not comment Monday on the situation, other than to observe that the surveillance of foreign films and foreign film theatres in the U. S. is more or less "a routine matter in the light of present conditions," undertaken in connection with a general study.

It was observed that foreign film theatres were considered as rallying points for groups "frontists" and others—not in sympathy with American ideals or actions.

The foreign film and foreign theatre market in the U. S. has been losing ground steadily, especially since the outbreak of World War II, due, partly to unsympathetic feelings toward some countries which had been sending films to these shores, but, principally because of the difficulties of transportation. Germany has been losing ground, cinemawise, since Hitler started his racial purge, six years ago. German films—UFA, et al—had a fairly substantial market up to then, but it has been dwindling to the point where, today it is comparatively negligible. The Nazis tried to circumvent the situation here by making pictures in other countries. Anti-Nazi boycott interests in the U. S. however, revealed the true sponsors and through wide publicity, succeeded pretty much in stopping infiltration of the films here.

The German industry, like others in totalitarian countries, is under control and orders of the Government. They have long since recognized the importance of the medium for spreading their ideological teachings and preachings—Germany, with its strong ministry of propaganda, and Russia being particularly active in this connection.

Disclosed in Annapolis

Disclosure of the FBI's probing of German films in this country came in an unusual manner, Thursday, May 16th, in Annapolis—seat of the United States Naval Academy—when, in disclosing activities of the state censor board which he heads, George W. Mitchell, board chairman, told the Legislative Council that agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation had asked the Board's cooperation in getting information on a German-language film theatre in Baltimore. Mr. Mitchell was appearing before the Legislators for more funds for his censorship bureau, and was describing the diversity of the Board's activities, for which, he said, it needs a larger budget.

Mr. Mitchell told the inquiring legislators that he did not know the reason for the investigation, nor whether it concerned the same kind of theatres in other cities. A check in Washington established that.

Forty-one theatres play German motion pictures in the United States at the present time. This is approximately the same number as at the last Motion Picture Herald survey of foreign theatres (July 15, 1939). Of the total number 17 play German films as a regular policy. The other 24 show non-Nazi German films occasionally. From the time Austria was annexed there has been no new German-language film which is "non-Nazi." However some pre-Hitler German films and old Austrian pictures are shown from time to time.

The theatres which show German films get their product from the 80 films imported each year. Even though the number of imports remains pretty much the same the distribution is much less.

The chief concentration of German-language motion picture theatres is in New York's Yorkville where three houses regularly show German product. Other theatres with a German policy are in New Jersey, Brooklyn, Chicago, Buffalo, Detroit, Milwaukee and San Francisco.

NEW JERSEY SCARES UP NAZI INVASION

An advertisement for German films submitted to the Ridgewood Herald-News in Ridgewood, N. J., and published as a news story last week has raised fears of "fifth column" activity and on Monday Congressman J. Parnell Thomas, a member of the Dies committee, said the matter would be referred to that group. New Jersey's Governor A. Harry Moore ordered a state drive on "fifth columnists", declaring there are 8,000 aliens in the state.

The general manager of Henka Film Exchange, Henry Kaufmann, who submitted the ad, denied that there was any purpose behind the action other than that of increasing attendance. Mr. Kaufmann said he was Jewish and "I'm certainly no Nazi or Nazi sympathizer. I've been running this exchange since 1931, and that was pre-Hitler."

The advertisement as submitted announced the showing of "Der Westwall", described as "authentic documentary scenes from the Siegfried Line", and "Der Arme Millionaer", starring Weiss Ferdl, at St. Stephens Church Auditorium in Passaic and Lazzara's Music Hall in Paterson. The ad also carried the line, "If you want a free pass, send us six names of your German friends". That started the speculation. A letter accompanying the ad asserted that the only purpose was "To bring us some new patrons from your vicinity".

Griffith Circuit Realigns Personnel

Lou Chatham has been put in charge of all Griffith Southwestern theatres in Tulsa, Okla., and Springfield, Mo. Abe Rosenwall has been transferred from the Delman, Tulsa, to Springfield to be city manager of all houses there. Charles Trego has been placed in charge of the Joy, Isis and Reno theatres in Oklahoma City. Johnny Ryan, manager of the Joy under the old Southwestern Theatres, Inc., regime has resigned.

Roy McCullough has been transferred from Hominy, Okla., to Pawhuska, Okla., in charge of theatres recently acquired there by the circuit. Fred Brewer, assistant manager of the Fairfax, Okla., has been transferred to Hominy to succeed Mr. Brewer as city manager. Kenneth Blacklidge has been transferred from manager of the Okmulgee, Okla., houses to manager of the Bartlesville, Okla., houses. Kenneth Taylor, assistant manager at Lubbock, Tex., becomes city manager at Clinton, Okla. Clark Abbott has been transferred from Clinton to Okmulgee, Okla.

Dorothy Deere with B&K

Dorothy Deere, motion picture editor and critic of the Chicago Herald American, has resigned to join the advertising department of Balaban & Katz. The only woman ever to be appointed to the publicity staff of B&K, she will take over the United Artists and Roosevelt theatres' publicity, formerly handled by Edwin Levin, who joins the promotional department of PM in New York. In addition, Miss Deere will create a special service to all Chicago newspapers.

"Our Town" for Study

Sol Lesser's "Our Town" will be included in the course of study of "English 49," the course on the history and art of motion pictures, at Columbia University, Dr. Duncan Emrich, instructor, announced Friday, May 17th.

U. S. SUBPOENAS FIRST WITNESSES FROM MAJORS FOR TRUST TRIAL

Talk of Settlement by Consent Decree or Otherwise Still Persists; Three More Anti-Trust Suits Filed

The Department of Justice expects to get a complete picture of the early history, development and present status of the motion picture industry from 21 top executives of the major company defendants for the Government's "key" New York trust prosecution, issuing subpoenas this week for their early appearance as the trial starts next month. In addition, the Department also subpoenaed James R. Grainger, president of Republic, and David Selznick, of Selznick International Pictures, for the same purpose, although neither are defendants or with defendant companies.

While the June 3rd deadline nears for the actual courtroom beginning of the Government's key trust action against the majors in New York, and the Department of Justice continues with pre-trial examination of witnesses, Broadway heard reports from Washington last week end that talk of a settlement, by consent decree or otherwise, still persists. Thurman Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney general in charge of trust prosecutions, appeared to have spiked possibilities of a consent decree, several weeks ago, when he stated publicly that such was impossible unless the distributors completely capitulated, particularly on the Government's demands for divorcement of circuit operation from production-distribution.

The rumors from the Capital were to the effect that even if all the defendants do not favor a consent decree, some are ready to consider a settlement apart from the other defendants.

Loew's and Warner Brothers are described as not having changed their views in favoring an out-of-court settlement. Also, there have been expressions made in Government circles that Twentieth Century-Fox is not altogether opposed to a "reasonable" settlement.

3 More Independent Trust Suits Filed

Last week independent theatre operators in Minneapolis, Dallas and Houston filed anti-trust suits.

In the Minneapolis action A. R. Johnson, former RCA Photophone representative and theatre operator, filed suit in the U. S. District Court at Sioux Falls, S. D., asking $523,500 damages from the Minnesota Amusement Welworth circuit, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal, MGM, Columbia, Warner Brothers, Republic and Monogram. The plaintiff claimed that there had been a combination to force him out of business. He has been operating the Granada, Sioux Falls and the Time and Pix, Aberdeen, S. D. The Aberdeen theatres were recently sold by Mr. Johnson.

O. B. Bridges, former operator of the Zoe and Midway theatres in Houston, named the Interstate Circuit and major companies defendants in a $100,000 damage suit. The suit is one of several filed against exhibitors and distributors since the U. S. Supreme Court ruled in the Texas Interstate case that first class pictures could not be banned from theatres charging less than 25 cents admission.

The Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc., has been sued for $60,000 damages and $3,750 attorney's fees by H. E. Fulghum of Fort Worth who formerly owned the Joy theatre at Tyler. The suit was filed in the Federal Court at Dallas and unlike other suits filed against the Interstate circuit conspiracy is not alleged. Mr. Fulghum was at one time booker for several theatre circuits.

FARNSWORTH QUITS ANTI-TRUST POST

William P. Farnsworth, special assistant to the U. S. attorney general and head of the New York office of the anti-trust division, has submitted his resignation to Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, effective June 1st. He will resume private practice.

Mr. Farnsworth has been in charge of the Government's investigation of the film exhibition situation in the New York metropolitan area. For some time he has been working on material for trial of the "key" New York anti-trust suit which is scheduled to begin on June 3rd. In the Blue Eagle days Mr. Farnsworth was attorney for the NRA motion picture code.

Act to Prevent Dismissal of Griffith Trust Suit

The defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit against the Griffith Amusement Company and the majors moved in Oklahoma City Thursday, May 16th, to prevent the dismissal asked by the Government without prejudice to renew it.

The Government had defaulted in not filing a detailed bill of particulars as directed by Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught and then had sought a dismissal of the suit in order to appeal the order requiring additional information. The defendants filed replies in which they waived their rights to a more detailed bill of particulars. This action was taken to force a dismissal with prejudice against renewing the case on the part of the Government or an early trial.

Judge Vaught indicated he would issue an order directing the Government to file its bill of particulars without the additional information and then would give the defendants 30 days to file answers.

The position of the Government was that it did not have additional information and could not comply with the court's order of April 4th requiring that the allegations in paragraphs 36 to 50 of the petition be fully explained.

U. S. Calls 34 Executives, 38 Independents to New York

The United States Government has subpoenaed its first company defendant witnesses, 32 top executives, to testify in the "key" New York anti-trust action. They are to be questioned on the background, development and present status of the motion picture industry. Two others, David O. Selznick, of Selznick International Pictures, and James Ross Grainger, president of Republic Pictures, both of non-defendant companies, have also been subpoenaed.

The Government has also subpoenaed five more independent producers and 36 additional independent exhibitors.

The executives subpoenaed and a large number of other executives who the Government plans to call are expected to be placed on the stand immediately after both sides complete their opening arguments before Judge Henry W. Goddard in Federal Court in New York.

Company officials who have been served with subpoenas are the following:

Loew's

N. M. Schenck, president; Charles Moskowitz, vice-president; Sam Katz, associate producer; Al Lichtman, vice-president; E. M. Saunders, western sales manager.

Paramount

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of directors; Barney Balaban, president; Neil F. Agnew, vice-president and general sales manager; Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president.

Twentieth Century-Fox

Sidney R. Kent, president; Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution; William Kupper and William Sussman, western and eastern sales managers, respectively; Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres; William P. Philips, director; Truman Talley, vice-president and general manager of Movietonews.

Warner Brothers

Harry Warner, president; Jack L. Warner, vice-president; Albert Warner, vice-president and teasurer; Joseph Bernhard, head of the Warner circuit; Gradwell Sears, sales manager.

United Artists

Maurice Silverstone, president; L. J. Schlaifer, vice-president and western sales manager; Samuel Goldwyn, producer; Harry Gold, vice-president and eastern general sales manager.

RKO

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president.

Universal

Nate J. Blumberg, president; William A. Scully, general sales manager; Cliff Work, vice-president and studio head.

Columbia

Harry Cohn, president; Jack Cohn, vice-president; Abe Montague, general sales manager.

Other Witnesses

Government plans also call for the service of subpoenaes upon Joseph Schenck, president of Twentieth Centurv-Fox; Charles Chaplin; Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production of Twentieth Century-Fox; Louis B. Mayer, head of MGM production.

The Department of Justice has already obtained judicial consent to call these executives.

On application of the Government, Federal Judge John T. Clancy Tuesday authorized the issuance of subpoenaes for H. P. Van Pelt, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and George K. Spoor. Both prospective witnesses reside in Chicago. Mr. Van Pelt has taken part in the Government investigation of the theatre situation in Chicago.

Five more independent producers have been called from the coast by the Government. They are Richard Rowland, I. E. Chadwick, William W. Hodkinson and Jesse Goldburg.

LA CROSSE, CHICAGO CASES DELAYED

36 Owners Subpoenaed

The Government has also subpoenaed 36 exhibitors located in the Philadelphia area in an effort to prove that the majors have monopolized first-run exhibition in that city. Those exhibitors, who will be called early in the trial, are as follows:

In Philadelphia: David Barrist; Allen M. Benn, Belmont Theatre; Herbert Elliott, Fern Rock Theatre; Ben Fertel, New Colonial; William Goldman; George T. Graves, Carman Theatre; Robert H. Hexter, Point Breeze Theatre; Thomas Lazarick, New Ritz Theatre; David Milgram; George Naudascher, Cambria Theatre; Harry Perelman, West Allegheny Theatre; Milton Rogasner, Iris Theatre; Henry Rosinsky, New Broadway Theatre; Sam Somerson, Palm Theatre; William Spiegel, New Lyric Theatre; Charles Segall; Columbus Stamper, Rivoli Theatre; Samuel Waldman, Garden Theatre; G. F. Wielland; I. Yaffe, Unique Theatre, and David Shapiro, Admiral Theatre.

H. A. Batastini, Alpine Theatre, Punxsutawney; Joseph Conway, Egyptian Theatre, Bala-Cynwyd; William Davis, Triangle Theatre, Pittsburgh; Albert Fischer, Keswick Theatre, Glenside; Harry Fried, Suburban Theatre, Ardmore; Henry Friedman, Lansdowne Theatre, Lansdowne; Thomas A. Gilbert, New Oakland Theatre, Pittsburgh; Melwin Koff, Darby Theatre, Darby; Chris Lampros, Capitol Theatre, Farrell; M. E. Ouslander, Pinebrook Theatre, Scranton; Harry Stahl, Nu-Luna Theatre, Sharon; Al, Joseph and William Weiss, McKeesport, and Joseph Wodock, County Theatre, Doyleston.

The Government also added to its list of prospective witnesses the names of Elmer Pearson, former vice-president of Pathe Exchange, and Charles Morse, of Boston.

Samuel Goldwyn, who was subpoenaed Tuesday plans to leave New York for the Coast at the end of this week but told Department of Justice officials that he would be available as a witness whenever called.

N. M. Schenck Defends Block-Percentages

Exhibitors would find individual buying a "terrific" hardship, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's and MGM, explained in his pre-trail examination Thursday, May 16th.

For three hours Mr. Schenck was questioned by John P. Clagett special assistant attorney general. He testified that the block-percentage policy of selling films was the fairest method. Individual selling would not only be difficult for producers but for exhibitors, Mr. Schenck explained. He said, "I believe that by selling on percentage an exhibitor only pays for what a film earns. If we pay $3,000,000 for a picture and it doesn't sell, we take the loss."

Mr. Schenck also said that theatre profits were by no means automatic but were dependent upon the quality of the product and the judgment of those in charge of presenting the film on the screen. It was pointed out that the manner of exploiting a film as well as its preparation is a vital element in box office results. MGM's principal benefit from selling its films to its affiliated Loew theatres is the assurance of having its product properly presented, Mr. Schenck said, adding, "There is a big difference between the exhibitor who lets his pictures do all the work and the one who puts thought behind the presentation of the picture."

MGM has no fixed policy with regard to borrowing or lending stars. "The only policy is to do as little of this practice as possible," Mr. Schenck said.

The history of the purchase of a producing company was also explained. Mr. Schenck said the producing company was acquired to protect the theatre chain's supply of films when it was threatened by the theatre interests of Famous Players-Lasky. At that time Loew's had been depending to a large extent on Famous Players' films and that company's entry into the theatre field it was feared would be "upsetting."

Mr. Schenck said the early Metro product was very poor and he had to be "practically forced to play Metro films" in Loew houses. However, he explained that after Metro merged with Goldwyn and Louis B. Mayer became head of production the quality improved.

Many questions asked by the Government attorneys were related to the Loew theatre circuit. Mr. Schenck was asked to explain and analyze operating costs of certain theatres in Pittsburgh, Memphis, Cleveland and Baltimore and to explain pooling arrangements with other companies. The pool under which Loew's and RKO, in partnership, operate the Orpheum in Denver was mentioned.

Other questions concerned film deals with Warner Theatres, Paramount Theatres and Fox West Coast Theatres. Mr. Schenck said that the deal with Warner theatres was expiring this year. He also said the longest franchise term ever held by Loew's was one for ten years with Paramount Pictures.

In the examination it was shown how production costs have increased. Mr. Schenck said the average cost of an MGM picture this year was $850,000. In 1924 the figure was $146,000.

Harry Warner, president, and Jack Warner, production head, of Warner Brothers, will be the next witnesses to testify in the pre-trial examinations, according to announcement of the Department of Justice. Louis B. Mayer, in charge of MGM production, and Darryl F. Zanuck, head of Twentieth Century-Fox production, will not be questioned because of duties requiring their presence on the West Coast.

La Crosse Trust Suit Hearings Postponed

Action on the La Crosse Theatre Company's suit against three majors and two affiliated circuits has been postponed until the fall term of the U. S. District Court for the Western District of Wisconsin. Damages totalling $1,050,000 have been asked on the grounds that the defendants formed an unlawful combination in an effort to drive the La Crosse company out of business. The defendants are Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Paramount, the Minnesota Amusement Company, its president Ed Ruben and its subsidiary, Welworth Theatres of Wisconsin.

According to the complaint the La Crosse company operated five theatres in that city until the Welworth circuit opened the Hollywood theatre several years ago and since that time has been unable to get adequate product.

CITY REJECTS PLAN TO LIMIT THEATRES

The New Hampton, Ia., city council has voted down by a count of 4 to 2, a proposed ordinance that would have regulated the number of theatres in the city. The ordinance, drawn for the New Hampton volunteer fire department, would have allowed but one house. The fire department owns the Firemen's theatre, now leased to Harry Herman for a 10 year period at $300 a month. E. C. Potter, operator of the house for the last 18 years had been paying only $175 a month until outbid by Mr. Herman. Mr. Potter contemplates building a new theatre across the street from the Firemen's.

File Exceptions in B & K Decree Case

Exceptions to the findings of Master in Chancery Edgar Eldredge, in Chicago, that Balaban and Katz and Paramount had violated the 1931 Federal consent decree were filed in Federal court there Monday by B & K attorneys.

The exceptions sought to show that B. and K. had not overbought during the 1936-'37 season but had contracted only for a reasonable product supply. Mr. Eldredge's report, made public on April 29th, found B. and K. guilty of violating Paragraph 10 of the consent decree, relating to restraint of trade in first run exhibition through overbuying.

Paramount, as the B. and K. parent company, was found guilty jointly.

After studying the exceptions and possibly ordering additional briefs or testimony, Mr. Eldredge is expected to issue a supplementary report, following which the case will be set for hearing in Chicago Federal District court.

Fabian Theatres Meet

More aggressive exploitation and the plea to get more mileage out of good pictures was the keynote of a speech by Louis R. Golding, district manager of the Fabian Theatre Circuit in Albany, N. Y., at a meeting of the theatre managers last week. In attendance at the meeting were: Ward Craig, Community, Catskill, N. Y.; Irving Liner, Proctor's, Troy; Sol Ullman, Schenectady city manager; Dick Murphy, Proctor's, Schenectady; Guy Graves, State; Phil Rapp, Plaza, and Leo Rosenfeld, Strand, all in Schenectady; Alec Sayles, Palace; Larry Cowan, Grand, and others from the Albany district attended.

AVERAGE ANNUAL FILM EXPENDITURE IS $25.58 PER FAMILY, U.S. FINDS

$18.39 Spent for Adult Admissions, $7.19 for Children, U. S. Bureau of Labor Claims After a 6-Year Survey

Dependence of box office receipts of the individual exhibitor upon factors other than that of the economic level of his audience, is shown in a study published by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington after six years of study of the spending habits of the country in the influence of climate, the availability of other amusements and sports, literacy and automobile ownership upon motion picture theatre attendance were considered. Outstanding in the result is the fact that expenditures for theatre attendance show a much sharper upward inclination, when plotted against rising incomes, than do the curves for food and housing, an indication of general recognition of their essential utility beyond the luxury classification.

$18.39 Adult, $7.19 Child

Statisticians of the bureau have been studying the country's spending patterns since 1934. A cross-section of families in 42 representative towns and cities showed that an average of $25.58 per year was spent for film theatre attendance, of which $18.39 was for adult admissions and $7.19 for child admissions.

This national average is given firmer standing when broken down by economic levels, which shows that families with total annual unit expenditures of $200 to $300 can spend but $11.65 for adult and $7.10 for child admissions, while those with expenditures of $500 to $600 can spend $20.23 and $7.57 on such admissions, respectively; those with expenditures of $800 and $900 can spend $24.74 and $8.45, and those with expenditures of $1,100 to $1,200 can and do spend $29.66 on movies for adults but only $2.22 for children, the low latter figure being seen due to the availability of other recreations for children of more prosperous families, and to the smaller size of such families.

Per Person Expenditure Shown

These are family expenditures. They show a different aspect when the question is approached from a more selective viewpoint, that of expenditure per person.

Here it was found by the bureau that the per capita expenditure for movie attendance is $5.70 a year for persons over 16 years of age and $2.09 for younger persons. At the $200-300 level, the per capita expenditures are, respectively, $2.54 and $1.55; at $500-600 they increase to $6.98 and $2.88; at $800-900 they advance to $9.99 and $3.94 and at $1,100-1,200 they reach $13.13 and $7.50.

In other words, it is pointed out, admission prices and the economic level of the available audience must go hand in hand. Since no figures have been compiled as to the number of times individuals attend theatres, it is impossible, of course, to devise any yard-stick, but the fact that the most prosperous individuals spend more than five times as much on movies as the least prosperous, gives point to the general rule.

Bureau experts also found that there is a direct relationship between population density and theatre attendance in the division of recreation expenditures. In New York, for instance, the city family's compensation for lack of the automobile and ready access to facilities for outdoor sports is seen in the relatively high expenditures for movies and other commercial amusement.

Literacy also enters into the picture, in that the better educated families report higher expenditures for reading matter, and ownership of radio sets is still another factor with some influence.

To considerable extent, these influences are exerted regionally, and an analysis of the figures gathered for 42 cities shows that while the average family in New York spends $30.04 per year on movies, the average family spends but $13.74 in eight east north central cities, $13.94 in 12 southern cities, $14.64 in five west north central cities, $15.43 in 11 north Atlantic cities and $18.36 in five Pacific Coast cities.

It was pointed out that the ownership of automobiles is very high in the east and west north central area, but low in the north Atlantic section, while the economic level of the South generally is low, while on the Pacific Coast the average expenditure for recreation and transportation is much above the average for the country as a whole.

Higher Brackets Change

These sectional differences remain fairly constant for the low-income levels, but show a tendency to shift in the higher brackets.

At the expenditure level of $200-300 per person annually, the family expenditure for movies is $15.08 in New York City, $9.64 in the South, $9.73 in the east north central section, $10.89 in the west north central, $11.51 in the north Atlantic and $12.50 on the Pacific coast.

At the $500-600 level, the figures are $35.73 for New York city, approximately 125 per cent more than at the lowest level, but do not show comparable increases for other areas, where movie expenditures are more level than at any other income point. By sections, these expenditures are $15.39 for the east north central cities, $15.69 for the south, $16.25 for the west north central area, $16.69 for the north Atlantic and $16.86 for the Pacific coast.

At the $800-900 level, movie expenditures in New York city decline as expenditures for other commercial entertainment jump to five times what they were at the $500-600 level, but continue to increase in other areas; the figures: New York city, $34.46; east north central, $18.37; west north central, $19.16; south, $20.69; north Atlantic, $20.81; Pacific coast, $22.57.

In the top group studied, with expenditures of $1,100 to $1,200 per year per individual, movie expenditures rise sharply in every area except the east north central but most markedly in New York City and on the Pacific coast, where there are theatres charging higher than average admissions.

New York Exceptions

In this group, the New York family spends $39.37 for movie entertainment but only half as much for other commercial entertainment as in the $800-900 group and spends four times as much as that group on radio. In other areas, families in the east north central cities spend only $17.66 on movies and, in fact, spend less on all recreation than do families in the $800-900 group, but their expenditures for automobiles are more than 2½ times as much; in the north Atlantic states, movie expenditures rise to $21.64, but automobile expenditures nearly treble; in the south, movies get $24.90, in the west central area, $28.29 and on the Pacific coast $30.55.

Bureau officials point out that the figures afford a basis for some general conclusions as to the theatre-going habits and people in the different income levels in different sections of the country, but explain that it would be difficult to base an admission-price range on the statistics without study of the factors applying in each location.

They do indicate, however, that an exhibitor must take many factors into consideration in evaluating a location-economic levels, availability of other amusements, automobile ownership, percentages of children and adults, and the like.

The field for expansion appears to be more or less general in all areas and income groups. Among the low-income groups the question appears to be one of getting more people to attend the theatres by offering admissions they can pay; in the high-income groups the problem is one of getting people to attend oftener through increasing the attractiveness of the entertainment and surroundings.

VISUAL AIDS DATA SOUGHT

The United States Office of Education, which is revising Pamphlet No. 80, "Sources of Visual Aids and Equipment for Instructional Use in Schools," has sent a form letter to various agencies handling visual aids and equipment asking that they list the specific aids or types of equipment the agency distributes.

Under the heading of visual aids are listed objects, specimens and models, pictures and photographs, maps, charts and graphs, posters and cartoons, stereographs and other three-dimensional pictures, lantern slides, film strips, slide films and still films, motion pictures (8 mm., 16 mm., 35 mm., silent and sound), exhibits.

Under equipment are lantern projectors (stereopticons), film strips and still-film projectors and attachments, opaque projectors, micro-projectors, materials and equipment for making lantern slides and film strips, cameras, motion-picture projectors (8 mm., 16 mm., 35 mm., silent and sound).

The agencies are also asked to list availability areas—national, state and other—and terms—free, for rent or for sale.

Arthur Eddy Resigns

Arthur W. Eddy, former New York motion picture trade paper writer, has severed his connection with Warners' studio publicity department. Mr. Eddy started with various New England newspapers and later became motion picture editor of Billboard; news editor of Exhibitors Daily Review; personal publicity man for several stars and author of a few produced scripts. He later became managing editor and associate editor of Film Daily. In 1937 he joined Warner Brothers to concentrate on trade paper publicity.

MGM PRODUCT SCHEDULED ON BASIS OF 52 FEATURES FOR NEW SEASON

28 Stars, 43 Supporting Players and 22 Directors To Participate; 78 Short Subjects Are Announced

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in 1940-41 will continue its policy of making 52 features. All productions for the balance of the current season have been completed and it was emphasized that the studio is well prepared with planned story properties, scripts in work, casts assigned and productions shooting.

The company's annual product announcement was first made to its salesmen on May 6th, at the first of four regional sales conventions, which was followed by a regional on May 13-14, in Chicago; May 17-18, in New York, and last Monday and Tuesday, in Washington, from where the announcement was release to the trade.

Big Product Now in Work

Starting with "Waterloo Bridge," now playing in first-run theatres, the summer and fall will bring to the screen, among others from Metro, "Susan and God," from the Broadway play, co-starring Joan Crawford and Frederic March; "The Mortal Storm," from the novel by Phyllis Bottome, co-starring Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart; "New Moon," co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy; "Pride and Prejudice," co-starring Greer Garson and Laurence Olivier; "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," co-starring Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland; "Boom Town," with four stars, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr; and "I Love You Again," co-starring William Powell and Myrna Loy.

It is likely that the first release of the new season will be "Escape," an adaptation of the novel by Ethel Vance, with Norma Shearer and Robert Taylor.

Greta Garbo will have the title role in "Madame Curie," story of the life of the discoverer of radium, based on the book by Eve Curie.

The "Thin Man" combination of Myrna Loy and William Powell will be reunited in "The Thin Man's Shadow."

Miss Loy will also be starred in "Third Finger, Left Hand," and "The Road To Rome," based on the Robert E. Sherwood play.

Clark Gable will be co-starred with Myrna Loy in "The Great Canadian."

Other Clark Gable vehicles announced include "Witch of the Wilderness," with a South American jungle background; "The Life of Simon Bolivar," based on the career of the South American patroit; and "Osborne of Sing Sing," in which he is to be co-starred with Robert Taylor.

Spencer Tracy is to make at least three: "The Ex-Mayor of Boys' Town," sequel to "Boys' Town"; "Sea of Grass," based on Conrad Richter's novel of New Mexico; and "The Yearling," adaptation of the novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings.

Norma Shearer will make two pictures, based on stage plays: "Tonight at 8:30," adaptation of incidents in Noel Coward's skein of one-act plays; and "The World We Make," based on Sidney Kingsley's Theatre Guild stage production. She will also be starred in "Forever," an original.

Katharine Hepburn will play in a screen version of her stage vehicle of the past year, "The Philadelphia Story," marking her first appearance as a Metro star.

Silas F. Seadler, Howard Dietz, Rita Johnson who is starred in "Edison the Man", William F. Rodgers and Tom Connors on the dais at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales convention at the Hotel Astor, New York.

The Marx Brothers will be seen in "Go West," and are now testing comedy sequences before stage audiences on a personal appearance tour.

Two pictures are announced for Joan Crawford. One will be "Bombay Nights," by Louis Bromfield. The second is tentatively known as "Woman's Face," with James Stewart as co-star.

Robert Taylor will appear opposite star, Lana Turner, in "Tropical Hurricane." Taylor will also be seen in "Cause for Alarm" and "Flight Command."

Wallace Beery will be starred in "Wyoming," to be released early in the season. He will also be seen in "Combat Car," a story of the present war.

MGM will continue its Hardy family and Dr. Kildare series. In addition to carrying on the Andy Hardys, Mickey Rooney will be seen in at least three other productions. He will co-star with Spencer Tracy in "The Ex-Mayor of Boys' Town." The team of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland will appear in two new musicals: "Strike Up the Band" and "Babes on Broadday."

One of James Stewart's parts of the new season will be "Wings on His Back,"

Robert Montgomery's first picture of the new year will be "I Had a Comrade."

Ann Sothern's first of 1940-41 will be "Dulcy."

Varied Number of Musicals

Musicals will provide MGM stars with an arresting and varied number of story properties for the new year. "Ziegfeld Girl," will have James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr, Eleanor Powell and Lana Turner. Miss Powell will also appear in "Broadway Melody of 1941." Other musical productions will include "Little Nellie Kelly," the George M. Cohan stage play in which Judy Garland will appear; Noel Coward's "Bitter Sweet;" and "I Married an Angel." Nelson Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald will be co-starred in the last two. Miss MacDonald will also be seen in a straight dramatic role in "Smilin' Through."

Among the other story properties from which new season M-G-M stories will be selected are: "Our Home Town," "Countess Maritza," "Beau Brummel," Oscar Wilde's "The Canterville Ghost," Fannie Hurst's "Great Laughter," "Good News," "Mister Co-ed," "Rage in Heaven," "War Eagles," "Adventure for Three," "Whitechapel," "Dawn's Early Light," "Two Sons," "Clear All Wires," "Fingers at the Window," "Cathleen," and "Soapy Smith."

MGM's Short Subjects

Emphasis on diversified short subject product will be maintained during the coming year, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced. The company will release 78 short subjects, in 84 reels, in addition to 104 issues of "News of the Day."

An exhibitor-exchange survey recently conducted by Fred C. Quimby, shorts subject manager, was said to have revealed an increase in anti-double-bill sentiment and a corresponding increased interest in shorts.

Next season's M-G-M shorts line-up will be headed by six "Crime Does Not Pay" two-reelers, several of which are to be based on racket investigations currently in the news.

Topping the one-reeler division will be 14 Pete Smith "Specialties."

John Nesbitt will deliver nine documentaries in his "Passing Parade" series.

The documentary treatment will also be represented in a series of 10 "Miniatures," the majority of which will be narrated by Carey Wilson.

Eighteen cartoons, in color, will be divided between producers Hugh Harman and Rudolph Ising.

Next season's 12 color "Traveltalks," produced by James A. Fitzpatrick, will be devoted largely to the United States and its possessions. Completing the list will be nine "Our Gang" comedies, which this time are to be produced with an eye to adult appeal.

$2,750,000 for Ads

An advertising appropriation of $2,750,000 will be spent promoting the 1940-41 product of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Howard Dietz, executive in charge of promotion, told the M-G-M regional sales conferences.

"Our experience with 'Gone With The Wind' indicates that there is no ceiling to the possibilities in attendance and revenue in our business. One of the most important functions of our advertising is to realize full revenue possibilities of exceptional pictures.

"These, and other pictures in production, were designed to attract extra business. Our advertising plans are being laid to give them the selling support they deserve," he said.

In addition to large scale national campaigns there will be a series of local newspaper budgets centered in key cities under the supervision of M-G-M's 40 field exploitation men who are directed by the promotion staff consisting of Silas F. Seadler, advertising; Wm. R. Ferguson, exploitation; Arthur A. Schmidt, publicity; Howard Strickling, studio publicity director, and Frank Whitback, studio exploitation director.

VIRGINIA JUDGE IN BLUE LAW RULING

Judge Herbert C. Smith of the Corporation Court in Newport News, Va., has ruled that the city cannot prosecute Karl Wolever, manager of the Paramount theatre in that city, for violation of the city Sunday closing law. In Martinsville, Va., a decision was handed down in police court that it was illegal to operate a motion picture theatre on Sunday.

William Jones, manager of the Rex theatre in Martinsville, was fined five dollars and court costs for violating the law. Mr. Jones, through counsel, noted an appeal to the Circuit Court and a new trial is scheduled for July.

Goldwyn Appeals Case Against UA

Arguments on the appeal of Samuel Goldwyn, in his civil action against United Artists for a declaratory judgment against the picture company which distributes his films, for a release from his contract, which runs until 1945, opened Wednesday in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia before Judges Biggs, Maris and Clark.

Dismissed Last Year

Max D. Steuer, of New York City, and the law firm of Southerland, Berl, Potter and Leahy, of Wilmington, Del., represented Mr. Goldwyn. Former United States Senator George Wharton Pepper and Robert H. Richards, of the Wilmington, Del., law firm of Richards, Layton and Finger represented the picture company. The case was originally dismissed in United States District Court in Wilmington, Del., on December 27, 1939, when Judge John P. Nields declined jurisdiction of the case, ruling that Alexander Korda's London Film and Douglas Fairbank's Elton Corporation should have been parties to the action.

Mr. Steuer, in his arguments, intimated that Mr. Goldwyn might use Paramount for the distribution of his pictures if his United Artists contract were invalidated. At present, he said, Mr. Goldwyn can get no other distributor for his films since United Artists threatened them with litigation. While he admitted that in the suit filed against United Artists in New York City, in February, that Mr. Korda was made a party to the action, Mr. Steuer said that his only reason for such a move was because the lower court had held Mr. Korda an "indispensable" party in spite of the fact that Mr. Goldwyn has no cause for action against Mr. Korda and has admitted so in his bill of particulars.

Mr. Steuer held that Mr. Korda and Mr. Fairbanks had broken the original contract of association, which was entered with Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin, and had obtained more favorable terms than Mr. Goldwyn in the United Artists distribution set-up. As a result, he said, United Artists alone is at fault in that being the common agent for the producers involved, it did not discipline the two principals.

A declaratory judgment that United Artists had breached Mr. Goldwyn's contract and that his distribution and guarantee contracts with United Artists were invalidated was asked. Also asked was an accounting to date for relief as might be deemed just.

Senator Pepper urged the court to uphold the decision of the lower court, arguing that there was a community of interest between all five producers and justice could not be rendered in the absence of any of them. In the lower court, Judge Nields, in dismissing the action, had said that otherwise it would put Mr. Korda and Mr. Fairbanks in the position of "contract-breakers" without having their day in court.

Plan Lansing Theatre

W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Inc., announced Monday that work will start within the next week on a new theatre for South Lansing, Mich., located on South Cedar Street at Rockford Road. The house is scheduled to be opened about October 1st. It will seat 900 and have an adjoining parking lot.

CHANCES NARROW FOR DIVORCEMENT BY LEGISLATION IN THIS SESSION

Neely Shelves Hearings on New Senate Bill but Rejects Companies' Appeal for Delay until Suit Is Completed

If divorcement of major circuit operation from production-distribution is to come, it can hardly be through the legislation asked of Congress by Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely (Dem., W. Va.), because the Senator has shelved hearings on his bill, even though temporarily, and after the close of this session, scheduled for early June, he will start campaigning for the Governorship of his native state.

Rejects Companies' Plea

The Senator rejected an appeal by the companies for postponement until after the Government's "key" New York monopoly-divorcement suit trial, declaring he would not wait the ten months which it is estimated will be consumed in the presentation of the case.

He did, however, accept a suggestion apparently made by the independent exhibitors (presumably Allied) that the hearings be recessed until after the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee had concluded its present hearings on the block booking bill. (See opposite page.)

He explained the adjournment as due to the belief that the parties interested in the divorce question also were interested in block booking. As a matter of fact, had he not taken the action he did, the independent exhibitors faced the embarrassment of being required to testify before two committees at the same time.

Restriction of Testimony Threatened

As Senator Neely announced postponement of his hearings, he had before him a letter signed by the counsel for the five theatre-owning producers, asking for the delay until after the New York trial and stating flatly that if the hearings were held in advance of the trial company testimony would be restricted so as not to jeopardize the industry's position in court.

"The defense in this case ought not to be required to carry on two defensive proceedings at once," the letter said. "They must advise you frankly that in some respects it will be impossible for them to do so. They cannot jeopardize their defense in the equity suit, which involves other matters in addition to divestiture, by anticipating the presentation of vital facts which must be shown to the court in their proper setting and sequence."

As the Senator made his announcement of postponement, Thomas D. Thacher, former solicitor general of the United States and now of counsel for Paramount, said he would not object but that the companies, when the new date for hearing is set, would appreciate an opportunity to present the situation as it might be then, in view of the New York suit and the need for attendance there of the men who would present the companies' case before the subcommittee.

In their formal petition for delay, the companies pointed out that "ownership of theatres by producers and distributors has existed for over 20 years and has not until within the last two years or so been challenged by legislation or litigation, public or private."

"Both the suit and the legislation seek a fundamental, radical and far-reaching change in the legal and economic status and structure of the industry," it was declared. "No such change should be brought about without the most careful and complete study of all of the facts and factors involved and the consequences to result therefrom. Such deliberation obviously is required in the public interest as well as in consideration of the welfare of those engaged in the industry and by the dictates of ordinary fairness and justice.

"Moreover, the proposed legislation is so drastic that if it be enacted without exhaustive inquiry and consideration regarding its necessity and its consequences, it may well be disastrous to the public interest, result in seriously decreased employment, deterioration in the quality of pictures, and complete disorganization of one of the great industries of the Nation."

The company counsel told the Senator that "while it is the right of Congress to conduct investigations with a view to appropriate remedial legislation looking to the future, notwithstanding the pendency of litigation covering the same subject matter, we submit that Congress should avoid a sheer duplication of the investigatory process where the concurrent investigations will interfere with each other and one furnish a diversion of attention from the other, and especially where there is no compelling emergency calling into action the legislative process."

"Ten Months of Trial"

Any delay involved in holding up the hearings until after the New York trial would be more than compensated for by the more intelligent and detailed evidence which would be available, the Senator was told.

"Counsel for the Government has informed the court that it expects to present its case within four months and counsel for the defendants advised the court that they will probably require six months for their case if the Government takes four, but intend to make every proper effort to conclude their defense in shorter time if possible," it was stated. "If these estimates be not too optimistic, the facts will be laid before the court by sworn testimony clarified and tested by cross-examination and by the introduction of relevant documents, all within a period of approximately 10 months of trial.

"The record so provided is available to the Congress as a basis and guide for its judgment on whether the situation disclosed calls for legislative action. It can be supplemented by whatever other facts Congress or its committees believe advisable. Congress need not await the final decision of the courts—it need only abide the completion of the testimony. Hence, no one has to wait 'ten years' or any other long period for a redress of proven grievances.

"With the limited time available for legislative hearing because of the demands made by other problems of great national importance confronting Congress, the committee cannot in such a complicated situation elicit the whole truth as effectively as can the court whose sole duty until this case is finished is to give it his undivided attention. Furthermore, the usual procedure at legislative hearings does not permit of the cross-examination of witnesses befort the committee and the differentiation between fact and opinion which is available in court."

Criticize Arnold Statement

The letter also criticised a statement made by Arnold when he appeared before the subcommittee in April, that the divorce bill is "declaratory of the common law."

"We do not know what this statement can mean or what its purpose is," it was asserted. "The Supreme Court has recently pointed out that there is no Federal common law, and neither the courts of England whence we derive our common law, nor the courts of any American state have ever said that the law forbids a manufacturer and a distributor, or either of them, to sell direct to the public by the use of their own facilities.

"If Mr. Arnold's statement is intended to refer to the statutes against monopolies and restraints of trade, he assumes as the basis for the bill the uncontroverted existence of the very monopoly and restraint which is alleged in the Government's suit, which the defendants emphatically deny. This very question will be determined in such suit. It will be argued that Congress may, within its constitutional powers, enact this bill as law. Whether or not this is so, if Congress does so legislate, it will not be declaring the common law or any other existing law, but will be enacting a brand new law."

"No Compelling Emergency"

Insisting that "there is no compelling emergency for the consideration or passage of this proposed legislation," the company counsel referred to statements in press releases of the Department of Justice that producers and distributors are expanding their theatre holdings to the detriment of independent exhibitors, who are rapidly being driven out of business, and quoted trade figures to show that the reverse is true.

"It is obvious that the claim of an emergency consequent upon the rapid disappearance of the so-called independent theatre is baseless," it was declared.

Accompanying the letter was a statement signed by counsel for Columbia Pictures, United Artists and Universal Pictures, holding that "the far-reaching consequences to the entire industry" under the bill would be such that the three companies, which do not own or operate theatres, joined in the petition for deferment of the hearings.

The letter was signed for Paramount Pictures by Thomas D. Thacher and Austin C. Keough, for Loew's, Inc., by John W. Davis and J. Robert Rubin, for RKO by William J. Donovan and William Mallard, for Warner Brothers by Joseph M. Proskauer and R. W. Perkins, and for Twentieth Century-Fox by Richard E. Dwight and Ralph S. Harris.

FLASH NEWS SERVICE FOR NEW PICTURE

A foreign flash news service served through the 32 branches of United Artists to circuit heads and exhibitors daily has been inaugurated as exploitation for the forthcoming Walter Wanger production, "Foreign Correspondent." Last minute items will be collated in each of the United Artists key cities and sent to theatres throughout the country.

"Foreign Correspondent," directed by Alfred Hitchcock, deals with the adventures of an American newspaperman in Europe. Joel McCrea and Laraine Day have the leading roles.

NEELY COMMITTEE PROBES EXPENSES; CONGRESSIONAL OPPOSITION STARTS

Congressmen Turn Up PTA-Research Council Link as Hearings Continue; Pettijohn Leads Attack on Measure

Proponents of the Neely block-booking bill on Tuesday finished their testimony—19 hours and 50 minutes of it, and on Wednesday the witness stand of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, in Washington, was turned over to the industry forces lined up against the measure as Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, led off for the defense.

Committee Continues Attacks

Committee members, following the practice set in the first week of the Neely bill hearings [Motion Picture Herald, May 18th], continued to place the witnesses speaking for the bill under a heavy barrage of questions, many of them of a hostile nature. Witnesses were asked whether they were more interested in the economic than the moral questions involved, if the synopsis clause was workable, who paid their expenses, why they were interested in the bill and other queries which showed that the congressmen had studied motion picture trade practice questioning.

In this, the second week of the hearings more emphasis was given by those in favor of the bill to the position of independent exhibitors and less to the club women and other groups.

Witnesses of the week included Sidney E. Samuelson, independent exhibitor; I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association; Mary T. Bannerman, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; other club women; Col. H. A. Cole, president of Allied, and Nathan Yamins, leader in the Allied movement, and the defense force led by Mr. Pettijohn.

Samuelson Reviews Receipts

Figures given by Mr. Samuelson, who disposed of his theatre April 1st, and is now booker for the Hildinger theatres in Trenton, were cited to show how block booking forces the exhibition of poor pictures which the public does not want and will not pay to see.

The four best pictures shown last year grossed over $1,000 each, he said, and the four worst gave him less than $50 apiece. The best gross reported for any year from 1930 on was $2,682 taken in in 1933 with "Tugboat Annie."

Mr. Samuelson, the first witness to appear before the committee as it went into its second week of hearings, declared the measure would insure to the industry an era of prosperity greater than any it has ever known.

"What we are seeking in this legislation is not anything new, but rather a restoration of those conditions that made this industry great," he said.

Asked by Chairman Clarence F. Lea (Dem., Cal.) whether enactment of the legislation would have any effect on picture prices to the exhibitor, Mr. Samuelson said it might serve to raise them, but added that he "never met an exhibitor yet who was not ready to spend more money for film if he had it at the box office." At the same time, he said, the increased competition in production would "automatically level off prices so that the best picture would command the best price and the poor picture would not be shown at all."

Only a "pseudo" competition exists between the major companies, now, he told the chair.

The witness told the committee he was an executive of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania, drawing from Representative James Wolfenden (Rep., Pa.) questions as to how the organization was financed. He explained that dues ran from $5 down to $1 a week and that the total revenue of the association was in the neighborhood of $13,000 a year.

Mr. Samuelson's assigned task was to trace the development of compulsory block booking, and he showed the committee a large number of contracts which, for the 1920's, carried the names and sometimes star designations of each picture while current contracts contained no names or similar information whatever.

"Are you interested in the moral or financial aspect of this bill?" he was asked by Representative Carl Hinshaw (Rep., Cal.).

"I am interested in both," Mr. Samuelson replied, "because I believe the best pictures at the box-office are the good pictures."

Questioned on Attendance

"Do you believe there would be more patronage at the theatres if you had these big pictures every day in the week?"

"Yes. My experience shows that business is good whenever you have a good picture."

"Why don't the producers produce all big pictures?" Representative Hinshaw asked.

"Don't think the independent exhibitors are trying to hamper or prevent the production activities of the producers," Mr. Samuelson cautioned him. "After all, we can't show cancellations or blank screens to the public—they want to see pictures."

He told the Congressman the exhibitors would continue to buy in blocks to insure continuity of supply, and indicated that they would not require as detailed a synopsis as was demanded by the public groups, but that the name of the picture, star and director and a brief outline of the story would be sufficient, together with at least an indication of anything in the film which might prove unsuitable for some audiences.

COUNCIL SUBSIDIZES NEELY BILL BACKERS

Testimony on the Neely block-booking bill before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee indicated that the Motion Picture Research Council is paying the bill in the fight to have the measure made a law. Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman was asked by Clarence F. Lea, chairman, who was financing the fight. She answered the Research Council was bearing the expenses for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, which she represents.

Since 1934 $4,000 has been contributed for expenses of the national PTA group in connection with motion picture activities, but no allowances are given for salaries, it was testified.

Hollywood Representative Attacks Measure in Committee; Derides Claim It Would Allow "Public Reelection"

Strong hints of opposition which would be offered the Neely anti-block and blind selling bill should it ever reach the floor of the House was given Wednesday by Representative John M. Costello (Dem., Cal.), one of the four members whose districts include parts of Hollywood. It came during the House Interstate Commerce Committee hearings on the bill.

Selling Defended

Declaring that the measure would result in "serious injury or irreparable harm" to the industry, Mr. Costello derided the thought that it would enable the public to influence selection and declared that the only community selection possible is a "community board of censorship."

Neither block booking nor blind selling is confined to motion pictures, he contended, arguing that automobile dealers bought "blocks" to assure themselves of an adequate supply of cars and also bought blind so far as new models were concerned. He denied also that the legislation would in any way change the type of moral fitness of films and claimed that such changes could be brought about only by "censorship or boycott."

Mr. Costello called attention to the exemption of shorts from the restrictive provisions of the bill, and declared they could well be as undesirable as features.

Much of Mr. Costello's testimony was devoted to buying. He asserted that under the bill exhibitors would have to buy singly, making from 52 to more than 200 contracts a year, depending upon the number of program changes and whether they double featured.

Fear of Suits Seen

Chairman Lea took issue with that statement, pointing out that the bill prohibited only "compulsory" blocking, but the California Congressman explained that producers would be fearful of suits by exhibitors buying blocks who might allege that they had been forced to take the pictures in order to get one or two they wanted. The "wise thing" for the producer to do, he said, would be to sell each picture separately.

The witness also assailed the synopsis provisions, contending that practically no picture adheres strictly to the synopsis and that any variations from the synopsis, no matter how immaterial, would be seized upon by exhibitors as an excuse for rejecting films with poor box office appeal.

"What is an exhibitor going to do with his theatre during the week he had planned to show a picture he has rejected?" he asked.

Mr. Costello also attacked the pricing provisions of the bill as unworkable, pointing out that the uncertainties of production cost are great and that it would be "extremely difficult for any producer to lease his film without running afoul of the bill."

Reverting to the synopsis provision, he said the requirement for a description of "scenes suggestive of sexual passion," in effect "legitimatizes" such scenes although probably the authors of the bill did not intend to do so. He pointed out that the bill would make it possible for any court to summon the president of a company to testify in any suit and declared company executives would be turned into "traveling professional witnesses."

NEELY PROBERS HEAR INDUSTRY

tion, told the committee the number of independents had been cut two-thirds in the past 10 years as a result of the tactics of the majors.

He said that the "B" picture was introduced to drive the independents out of business and "the major now is a prisoner of his own device."

In the 1920's, he said, the independents turned out from 175 to 250 pictures a year. He, himself, produced 12 to 18 at a cost of $900,000. Last year, after finishing his "Tailspin Tommy" series, he closed down and has no plans for production unless the bill is passed.

The majors are doing "a fine job" in production, he said, but the independents have been responsible for many of the fine pictures which have been shown. He denied there were 160 independent producers, as claimed by the industry, and placed the figure at less than 50.

Expense Accounts Investigated

At its final sessions last week, the committee pressed public group witnesses to disclose who was paying the expenses of their campaign for the bill and sought to ascertain whether any of those who testified were "professionals."

Questioning Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers as to the cost of her effort, the committee learned that the Motion Picture Research Council was bearing the expense and had contributed some $4,000 to the national PTA since 1934. Later, Miss Katherin Lyford of the Massachusetts Civic League admitted that the Research Council had also contributed to the expenses of her trip to Washington.

Seeking to unravel the tangled causes of public-group support of a bill dealing with the trade practices of an industry, members of the committee sought to ascertain where the incentive for the bill came from, but Representative William P. Cole, Jr. (Dem., Md.), directing such a question to Mrs. Ernest W. Howard of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, was referred to Senator Neely.

Mrs. Howard also was asked by Representative Lyle Boren (Dem., Okla.) whether she had any other occupation than appearing before committees. "No, I don't," she told the Congressman, who then pointed out that she had testified before several committees.

Similar questions were propounded to Mrs. Sylvia T. Bushnell of the Motion Picture Research Council.

Feminine Exhibitor Testifies

The most kindly treatment meted out during a week of hearings was extended to Mrs. Daniel Shaver of Shaverstown, Pa., operator of a theatre in that metropolis of 2,000 souls. A pretty young matron, whose lack of ease and hesitant speech contrasted strongly with the self-assurance of the group representatives, she was given every encouragement by committee members to tell how she was forced, upon opening her house, to make 18-months' contracts with three companies, taking all their features, their newsreels and their shorts.

Mrs. Shaver admitted she knew little or nothing about the film business and felt she had to do what the company representatives said, but confessed she didn't like it when a salesman slapped a contract before her and an order to sign and the explanation, "Here's your medicine—take it and like it."

Mrs. Bushnell and Miss Lyford frankly told the committee they were not interested in the exhibitors' box office and that, if the bill was passed, the organizations in the community would "assist" the exhibitor to select his pictures, but contended that this would by no means be control by "organized minorities."

FILM LOBBYISTS NOT "A LOCUST PLAGUE"

As part of his statement leading the fight against the Neely bill, C. C. Pettijohn attacked the accusation that motion picture "lobbyists" were "a swarm of locusts overrunning Washington," as an earlier witness had charged.

Mr. Pettijohn said he had represented the film industry in Washington for "the last 12 or 15 years" and was assisted by Burt New, who in turn was assisted by James B. Fitzgerald. The list of industry men engaged in the legislative battle was completed with the name of John W. Bryson, who, Mr. Pettijohn said, worked against the bill in California. He concluded, "Now that's the swarm of locusts—that's all of it—every man."

After they told the exhibitor what to show, they indicated, it was up to him to see that he made a profit.

Expressing confidence that under such guidance exhibitors would prosper, Miss Lyford told the committee, "The 'Big Eight' have misjudged public taste." She assured the members that the public groups knew better than the producers what the people wanted to see. She did admit, however, that the producers were trying. All of the ladies were insistent that selectivity had no relation to censorship, a viewpoint which members of the committee apparently had difficulty attaining.

Cole, Yamins on Stand

Concluding the presentation of their case Tuesday, Allied exhibitors revealed to the committee that they had little interest in the moral aspects of the bill, believing that public taste would evidence itself through the box office, and that the public groups which have so strongly supported them would have little or nothing to say about the selection of pictures if the bill was enacted.

Both Col. H. A. Cole, Dallas, Tex., president of Allied, and Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass., leader in the Allied movement, testified to their belief that the box office was the only significant barometer of public acceptance or rejection, pointing out that public taste varied from community to community and even among social and economic classes within a community.

They also told the committee that the majority of exhibitors would continue to buy in blocks, so as to safeguard supply, and expressed the belief that enactment of the bill would have little or no effect on admission prices.

Col. Cole told the committee the Government suit in New York would not settle the question of blind selling, but that it was inextricably tied in with block booking and elimination of compulsory booking would not enable an exhibitor to make a selection unless he knew what he could select from.

He followed that statement with testimony that exhibitors would need "no great assistance" from local groups in picking their pictures, and that "box office results are the best indication of what people want."

Carrying along the idea of the exhibitor's responsibility, Col. Cole told the committee that the theatre owner immediately knows when the public is dissatisfied with its screen fare by the lower grosses. The producers, he said, are so far away that they are late in learning of changes in demand. Under the Neely bill, he contended, the trend of public acceptance would quickly be realized by the picture makers.

Col. Cole was asked by Representative Patrick why all of the exhibitors in the country aren't pressing for the bill, and he later explained that some of the independents had been "deceived" by distributor propaganda into opposing the measure. He dwelt at length upon the "misrepesentations" and "half truths" which he said had been broadcast.

Synopsis Provision Pressed

As Allied concluded its presentation, members of the committee still failed to agree as to the effectiveness of the synopsis provision as written in the bill and questioned the two witnesses exhaustively.

Mr. Patrick insisted there would be many court cases, but Col. Cole refused to agree, predicting there would be very few and explaining that the bill "would enforce itself."

Mr. Yamins also contended that the synopsis provisions were all right, and that the exhibitors could make an intelligent appraisal of the pictures offered. He rejected a suggestion by Representative Lyle Boren (Dem., Okla.) that screening would be preferable to a synopsis, and said the distributors could break the selling year into quarters, selling the completed pictures on the basis of synopses written after they had been shot.

Mr. Yamins told the committee that single selling was not contemplated under the bill and that the majority of exhibitors would want to buy in blocks so as to have "stock on hand."

Questioned as to present conditions, he declared the cancellation privilege was of no value to the exhibitor, explaining how, when he cancelled a high priced "A" picture the distributor immediately moved a picture out of the lowest bracket into its place so that he paid $138 for a picture originally set at $23.

He declared cancellation is something granted by the companies at their convenience and that it can be eliminated at any time they desire, and commented that it is "offered only when the industry is faced with legislation and regulation."

"Trade practices today are much more onerous than they ever were before," he said.

Questioned by Representative Hinshaw, Mr. Yamins said the producers should make only "A" pictures, but admitted that it would add considerably to the cost of production.

The two estimated that the Big Eight were producing about 110 to 112 "A" pictures this year at a total cost of some $42,500,000, out of a total output of 334 pictures. To make the remaining 220 on an "A" basis would double or treble the cost, it was agreed.

However, Mr. Yamins said, the producers would not have to turn out as many pictures because the theatres would run the films longer.

As the hearings reached the half-way mark, Chairman Lea advised that the proponents had used 19 hours and 50 minutes time. He indicated that the opponents would be given the same amount of time.

Pettijohn Attacks Bill

C. C. Pettijohn's statement introducing the opposition forces explained industry trade practices, the scope and importance of motion pictures, attacked the proponents of the measure and gave numerous arguments against it.

In his opening remarks Mr. Pettijohn

46 TO 50 FROM PARAMOUNT NEXT SEASON, BUDGETED AT $25,000,000

Fewer Films, Higher Budgets To Mark New Schedule; Musicals, Adventure and Comedy To Be Keynotes

Salvos of laughter, romance and thrills—$25,000,000 worth—fired a near-weekly intervals during 1940-41, will be Paramount's answer to the thunder of the European war, Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, told delegates to the company's annual sales meeting in Los Angeles, Friday.

"Paramount believes that during the next year entertainment will play an even more vital part in the lives of all of us than it ever has in the past," Mr. Agnew said in announcing the company's production plans for the coming season which opens September 1st, to the 125 members of the sales force and studio staff in session at the Ambassador Hotel. "We will leave the problem and propaganda pictures to the others, and will give the world the laughs and escapist excitement it needs."

Wednesday night on the eve of the company's convention Barney Balaban, president, announced that Paramount "will completely abandon the production of 'B' pictures and devote itself exclusively to the making of 'A' product," effective May 31st when it will disband the "B" production unit headed by Harold Hurley and his associates who will leave the company, Mr. Hurley entering independent production.

Individual Budgets Increased

Paramount will release from 46 to 50 feature length productions, the exact number to be determined at a later date, the sales chief said.

"Although we shall make fewer pictures than we made during 1939-40 (58), our investment will be just as great. This means that we shall produce fewer pictures for the same money, spending approximately $100,000 more per negative, which inevitably will result in more important casts, top direction and important story vehicles in the best seller class," he added.

The company, he continued, is prepared to sell its product with "big scale showmanship." Mr. Agnew also announced that Paramount has set up a $2,000,000 advertising budget for 1940-41.

Giving a detailed prospectus of the studio's program for next year, Mr. Agnew announced that Paramount would make at least three features in Technicolor during the season—"Shepherd of the Hills," "The Queen of Queens" and "Aloma of the South Seas."

The comedies-with-music classification will be led off with the Jack Benny-Fred Allen-Mary Martin co-starrer, "Love Thy Neighbor," to be produced and directed by Mark Sandrich, who made "Buck Benny Rides Again."

Also there will be: "Rhythm on the River," with Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Basil Rathbone and Oscar Levant under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

The co-starring trio of Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour will be in "The Road to Zanzibar."

"Dancing on a Dime," featuring Grace McDonald, hit-girl of the Broadway stage success, "Very Warm for May," and Robert Paige, Peter Hayes, Eddie Quillan, Frank Jenks, Virginia Dale, Carole Adams, Lillian Cornell and William Frawley under the direction of Joseph Santley.

"There's Magic in Music," starring Allen Jones with Susanna Foster.

A musical starring Orrin Tucker and his famous band and Bonnie Baker, and "Second Chorus," starring Artie Shaw and his band. This will be one of two pictures made for Paramount release by the newly organized National Pictures Corporation, headed by Boris Morros and Robert Stillman.

In Action Field

In the action classification the company will offer, in Technicolor, "The Shepherd of the Hills," based on the novel by Harold Bell Wright, in which Henry Hathaway will direct co-stars Betty Field and Robert Preston; "Rangers of Fortune" with Fred MacMurray, Patricia Morison, Albert Dekker and Gilbert Roland directed by Sam Wood, and Jon Hall and Dorothy Lamour, stars of "Hurricane," in "Aloma of the South Seas." Joseph Conrad's "Victory" starring Fredric March and Betty Field, with Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Others will be:

"Sunrise in My Pocket," drama of the Alamo in which Henry Hathaway will direct an all-star cast.

"The American Vagabond," based on the life of O. Henry, the second of the Morros-Stillman productions, which will star Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

Two outdoor action pictures entitled "Cherokee Strip," a tentative title, and Peter B. Kyne's "Parson of the Panamint."

"Birth of a Hero," with William Holden, Maria Ouspenskaya and Albert Dekker.

"I Wanted Wings," story of America's air heroes.

"The Roundup," with Don Wilson of radio fame in the role created by Macklyn Arbuckle.

Romantic Drama

Heading the list of romantic dramas will be "Arise, My Love," starring Claudette Colbert and Joel McCrea under the direction of Mitchell Leisen. Others will be:

Claire Trevor in "The Silver Queen," to be directed by Alan Dwan.

Jack Moss will produce "Dead on Arrival."

Madeleine Carroll, Franchot Tone, Ray Milland and Carolyn Lee in "Virginia" to be directed by Edward H. Griffith.

"I Want a Divorce," co-starring Joan Blondell and Dick Powell.

A William A. Wellman production, "The City That Never Sleeps," starring Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea and Eddie Bracken.

"The Aldrich Family in Life with Henry," with Jackie Cooper, Leila Ernst, Eddie Bracken and Hedda Hopper, directed by J. Theodore Reed.

"There's Always Juliet," starring Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray under the direction of Edward H. Griffith, and Dick Powell and Ellen Drew in a Preston Sturges story, "The New Yorker," which Sturges will direct.

Four literary prizes are among the story properties which Paramount includes in its line-up. They are the Broadway stage success, "Skylark," in which Claudette Colbert and Melvyn Douglas will co-star under the direction of Mark Sandrich; another Broadway hit, Claire Booth's "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," which will star Mary Martin and Ray Milland.

DeMille Production

Cecil B. DeMille will follow his "North West Mounted Police" with three features in the next two years, "The Queen of Queens," the story of Mary, the mother of Jesus, which the producer-director plans as a companion-production to his famous "King of Kings," "Ten Commandments" and "Sign of the Cross." The other two will be "Reap the Wild Wind," currently running serially in the Saturday Evening Post, and "Rurales."

Still another group will be "Texas," starring Ellen Drew and John Howard with May Robson, Akim Tamiroff, Broderick Crawford and Anthony Quinn under the direction of James Hogan; "A Date with Destiny," in which John Howard, Ellen Drew and Basil Rathbone portray the top roles; a sea thriller, "Mystery Sea Raider," with Carole Landis, Henry Wilcoxon and Onslow Stevens, and a sextet of the Hopalong Cassidy westerns starring Bill Boyd and produced by Harry "Pop" Sherman.

Others To Be Included

At least five additional feature productions as yet unlisted will be included in the Paramount program, Mr. Agnew said.

In addition to the feature schedule, Paramount will release 86 short subjects and 104 issues of the Paramount News. The short subject schedule will include a one-reel comedy series starring Robert Benchley, with whom negotiations were just concluded; 12 Max Fleischer "Popeye" cartoons; eight Paramount Paragraphics; eight Max Fleischer "Gabby" cartoons, starring the comedy hit of "Gulliver's Travels;" eight Paramount headliners; 13 Grantland Rice Sportlights; six popular Science Cinecolor shorts; six Unusual Occupations, also in Cinecolor; "Raggedy Anne," a two-reel cartoon in color and six Travelogues in Technicolor.

Sales Force Gathers

Home office executives, district and branch managers, and key members of the Paramount sales force, assembled this week in Los Angeles for the annual convention being held from Friday, May 24th through Sunday, May 26th at the Ambassador Hotel.

The Paramount convention train arrived in Hollywood Thursday. Scheduled to address the opening session were Barney Balaban, Adolph Zukor and Y. Frank Freeman.

At Galesburg, Ill., the train carrying the home office delegation made a special stop on Wednesday so the executives could see part of the celebration in connection with the premiere of Paramount's "Those Were the Days" ("At Good Old Siwash"). The Hollywood contingent present for the opening, including Muriel

URGE PROMOTION OF GOOD PICTURES

Mrs. Ernest M. Holmes, motion picture chairman of the Eighth District, Buffalo, of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, in Albany, last week, urged members to "promote appreciation of fine films and work in your community councils for the promotion of good pictures and better attendance at them."

Mrs. Holmes also urged that children be deterred from night attendance at motion pictures except on Friday nights.

Paramount Plans Higher Budgets

Angeles, Jay Theodore Reed, producer-director; Lynne Overman, J. Carrol Naish and Vaughan Glaser, greeted the officials from the New York office.

En route West the following men join the group bound for the national sales convention:

J. J. Donahue, A. Usher, H. R. Hamburg and B. Elrod from Chicago; H. H. Goldstein and M. R. Clark from Cleveland; D. Kimelman and G. Elmo from Pittsburgh; J. J. Oulahan from Cincinnati; J. T. Howard, E. Stuckey and J. Ryder from Detroit; F. C. Clark from Milwaukee; J. H. Stevens from Indianapolis; H. F. Wilkes, J. F. Kirby, C. Goodson and A. Duren from Atlanta; S. Lett from Charlotte; E. B. Price from New Orleans; W. F. Bugie from Memphis.

Canadian delegates who boarded the Paramount convention special in Chicago included:

M. A. Milligan, J. L. Hunter and W. O'Neill from Toronto; M. A. Brown and T. Dowbiggan from Montreal; P. J. Hogan from St. John; W. O. Kelly from Calgary and D. M. Brickman from Winnipeg.

At Kansas City: H. W. Braly, L. W. McClintock, F. Larned from Dallas; C. L. Dees from Oklahoma City; R. C. LiBeau, J. T. Manfre, G. W. Hinton and A. H. Cole from Kansas City; M. Schweitzer and C. Roeder from St. Louis; A. Mendenhall from Omaha; R. M. Copeland from Des Moines; B. Blotcky and J. Fritcher from Minneapolis.

Among the representatives who traveled directly to the convention headquarters in Los Angeles were:

W. Hansher from Vancouver; H. N. East, J. M. Battencourt and A. Taylor from San Francisco; M. Segel, G. Haviland from Seattle; A. R. Anderson from Portland; C. J. Bell from Denver and F. H. Smith from Salt Lake City.

A. L. Pratchett, general manager for Paramount in Cuba, Mexico and Central America, went directly to the convention from Mexico City.

Paramount and National Pictures, the Boris Morros-Robert Stillman producing unit, signed a contract last week providing for Paramount release for "Second Chorus" and "The Life of O. Henry" which National will produce on the RKO-Pathe lot at Culver City. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. will star in the "O. Henry" film, an original by Mrs. William Sidney Porter, widow of the writer, and Ralph Spence. The screenplay was written by Sheridan Gibney. "Second Chorus" will star Artie Shaw and his band. The story was written by Frank Cavett, assisted by Elaine Ryan. The picture is to go into production about July 1st with H. C. Potter directing.

Mr. Morros resigned as head of the Paramount studio music department a year ago to begin independent production. He had been with Paramount 18 years. "Flying Deuces," a Laurel and Hardy picture, has recently been completed by the Morros-Stillman unit for RKO release.

George Naffka, film executive formerly in the Paramount home office, has been appointed head of the Paramount studio budget bureau. He succeeds R. J. Wolff who has been made assistant to T. Keith Glennan, studio manager.

ASCAP Briefs Due May 29

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the state of Florida have until May 29th to file briefs in the case of the attack of the state's anti-ASCAP law. The case was tried last month, but decision has been reserved pending completion of the briefs.

Acquires Shirley Temple Subjects

Commonwealth Pictures Corporation has acquired the exclusive 16 mm. distribution rights to the following group of two reel comedies featuring Shirley Temple: "Dora's Dunking Doughnuts," "Pardon My Pups," "Managed Money" and "Merrily Yours," all produced by Educational Pictures.

Women Vote Award To "Forum" Programs

The best liked radio programs are of the forum type, according to the annual nationwide poll of the Women's National Radio Committee, an organization embracing about 30 women's clubs with a voting poll of several million women listeners. The awards were made last week by Madame Yolanda Mero-Irion, founder of the group.

"America's Town Meeting of the Air" (NBC) received the top award in the adult education forum classification. Other winners were: religious classification, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's "National Vespers" (NBC); news commentator, H. V. Kaltenborn; dramatic programs, "Lux Radio Theatre" (CBS); evening dramatic serials, "One Man's Family" (NBC); Edgar Bergen (NBC) in the variety field; sustaining music programs, NBC symphony; light music, "Firestone Symphony" (NBC); children's educational program, "Columbia's School of the Air."

Kennebeck Named Far East Paramount Manager

Frank Kennebeck, Paramount manager in India for many years, has been named manager for the Far East. He succeeds Charles Ballance, who resigned several months ago due to ill health. Mr. Kennebeck recently arrived on the coast from India to attend the Paramount sales convention and to confer there with John W. Hicks, Paramount vice-president and foreign manager, who left New York for the coast Monday.

Warner Subjects Honored

Warner Brothers patriotic short subjects have been cited by Youthbuilders, Inc., for helping school children of the City of New York to understand the workings of democracy. The award was announced at the Youthbuilders' Forum Award Luncheon, held this week at the Hotel Martinique, New York. Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt was guest of honor.

Acquires French Film

Leo Films, Inc., has acquired the American rights to the French motion picture "The Twins of Brighton," starring Raimu. Mrs. Nat Sanders, who negotiated the deal in Paris, will leave for the United States May 29.

Renew Universal Pact

Universal has again been awarded the contract to supply features, short subjects and newsreels in 84 veterans' hospitals and soldiers' homes throughout the country, according to Herman Stern, head of the non-theatrical department. The contract is for one year, beginning July 1st, with the U. S. Veterans' Administration.

Dodds Leaves Republic

Harold Dodds, for several years casting director at Republic, has resigned.

Pettijohn Leads Attack on Bill

pointed out that the MPPDA has not eight member companies but 29. He defined "compulsory block booking" and "blind selling." The first, he said, was simply wholesale selling or wholesale buying, a recognized and almost universal practice.

"Blind selling," he explained, means simply buying in advance for future delivery which is a practice in practically all businesses. "But," he said, "the motion picture retailer does not buy blindly. What he does buy with his eyes wide open is product of a producer of proven reputation in making quality pictures. These pictures are created by writers, directors, and actors who have proven their worth at the box office. He deals with a distributor of proved ability to deliver an even flow of product to his theatre so that he may remain in business 365 days per year."

Statistics were cited by the Hays Office general counsel to show the House Committee the size of the industry and to explain how much of the money paid in at the local box office stayed in the community.

He declared that he spoke for producers and distributors who were opposed to the measure and that spokesmen for the great majority of exhibitors, representatives of artists, writers and directors and other workers in the industry would also appear to fight the measure.

Censorship Attempt Charged

The whole concept of "community freedom" urged by organizations backing the Neely bill was opposed by Mr. Pettijohn who called it "pressure censorship."

"The bill contains three enforceable sections," he continued. "Section 3 is price control. Section 4 is censorship. Section 5 provides criminal penalties." He then referred to the lack of knowledge of motion picture affairs on the part of those who framed the bill and its backers. "No one who drafted this measure had ever made a film or sold a film. Few, if any, have ever been inside a studio. Is it any wonder, then, that this measure contains so many loosely written and unrealistic provisions?," he asked.

"There is no moral question involved in this bill," Mr. Pettijohn continued.

In conclusion Mr. Pettijohn listed the effects which he said other witnesses would prove would result if the bill were passed.

"This bill," he said, "if passed, will: result in financial disaster, chaos and confusion; bring about pressure censorship; increase distribution costs and raise admission prices; reduce employment in the industry; lower the quality of the films; reduce substantially the number produced each year; annihilate the Motion Picture Production Code which now assures decent and wholesome entertainment; require the investment of millions of dollars of new capital; bankrupt untold numbers of exhibitors; result in substantial losses in trade where theatres are shut down; destroy present production methods; wreck the present distribution system and compel the motion picture industry to embark on an untried experiment over the protests of the overwhelming majority."

Other witnesses took up specific effects outlined by Mr. Pettijohn and explained just what, in their opinion, would happen if the bill passed. Industry witnesses scheduled to appear against the bill were: William F. Rodgers, MGM; Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers; George J. Schaefer, RKO; Austin C. Keough, Paramount; Y. Frank Freeman, Producers Association; Walter Wanger; Col. Jason Joy, Jean Hersholt, Walter Abel and Edward Arnold, Screen Actors Guild, and about 20 exhibitors, principally representatives of regional exhibitor associations.

PARAMOUNT, RKO, MGM, UNIVERSAL, UA CONVENE IN ANNUAL SESSIONS

Three Companies Continue Regional Convention as Two Others Open National Sessions Over Weekend

The 1940 sales convention season out of which come product promises and commitments as to quantity and quality for the new motion picture year, this week headed into its last quarter, United Artists holding a second and final regional meeting, in Chicago, Friday to Sunday, May 17 to 19; Universal, holding a similar meeting, in the same city, Saturday to Monday, May 18 to 20; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, conducting a fourth and final regional, in Washington, Monday and Tuesday, May 20 and 21, and Paramount opening a single national three-day convention, in Los Angeles, Friday, May 24, running through Sunday, while RKO Radio opens its national conference in New York, Monday, to run through Thursday.

Product Announcements Made

United Artists' product announcement was published last week, following the first regional, in New York. Likewise Universal's, after its meeting, in Atlantic City. The 1940-41 product announcement of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer appears in this issue on page 29, and Paramount's on page 35. Previously, sales conventions were held by Monogram and Twentieth Century-Fox, and their complete product announcements duly reported.

Only three others of the ten large companies have yet to meet and make product announcements: Republic, meeting sometime between next week and June 10, in New York, Chicago, Memphis and San Francisco; Columbia, June 4 to 7, in Chicago; June 11 to 14, Atlantic City, and Warner Brothers, the last, June 10 to 12, at Pittsburgh and June 17 to 19, Chicago.

Herbert J. Yates, Republic board chairman, Wednesday, in Hollywood announced the 1940-41 season would see production of 26 features, 30 westerns and four serials, the largest program in company history. After conferring with M. J. Siegel, studio head, Mr. Yates said substantial increases would be made for all films.

"As a result, an increase in personnel to handle the production for the augmented program must be made," he declared. "The motive behind the program will be a pointing to western hemisphere markets. We feel an increase in quality for the coming year will offset declines in revenue from foreign markets."

Westerns will be divided as follows: eight Gene Autrys, including two high-budget films, eight Roy Rogers, eight Mesquiteers, and six Donald Barrys.

Second Universal Regional Held in Chicago May 18–20

At the second regional meeting of Universal in Chicago May 18-20 at the Drake Hotel William A. Scully announced that the company now has over 10,000 accounts and Nate J. Blumberg, president, said there would be "an even closer alliance between the studio and the sales personnel on all matters of production."

Mr. Blumberg presented an analysis of the company's accomplishments and marked each step towards success that was attributable to the sales department.

"On May 1st of this year," Mr. Scully said, "you boys put Universal over the 10,000 accounts mark. With the product I have announced for the new year, I have every reason to believe that even though we are nearing the 'ceiling,' you'll find the climbing even easier than last year."

Mr. Scully also announced the following winners in the Scully Drive: E. T. Gomersall, district manager who led the Western Division; M. M. Gottlieb, Chicago; C. J. Feldman, Los Angeles; Harry Hynes, new manager of the St. Louis exchange; R. O. Wilson, Portland, and G. C. Craddock, Indianapolis.

Universal's production activities were detailed by Cliff Work and Matthew J. Fox from the studio and by Jules Levey, producer of "The Boys from Syracuse" and Jack Skirball, associated in the production of the three Frank Lloyd productions which Universal will release.

W. J. Heineman, Western sales manager; Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president in charge of the foreign department, and F. J. A. McCarthy, eastern sales manager, also spoke. Individual meetings with district managers were held Monday as the closing activities of the convention.

Others present were Leo Abrams, short subjects sales manager; John Joseph, advertising and publicity director; Lou Pollock, Eastern advertising and publicity manager, and James J. Jordan, O. C. Binder, Andrew J. Sharick, Herman Stern, Morris Alin, Adolph Schimel and F. T. Murray.

The district managers at the Western meeting were E. T. Gomersall, J. E. Garrison and A. J. O'Keefe.

Branch managers and salesmen at the meeting included:

Chicago: Manager M. M. Gottlieb; salesmen T. G. Meyers, William Weinshenker, R. W. Funk, Max C. Brodsky, Alfred Kent, John Blank and head booker Walter A. Hyland.

Detroit: Manager E. Heiber; salesmen Jack Stewart, Bert G. Tighe, Jack R. Susami and head booker Eugene Alexander.

Indianapolis: Manager E. C. Craddock; salesmen W. H. Sherman, Wilbur B. Grant, Carl F. Mock and head booker Milton Ettinger.

Milwaukee: Manager Frank Mantzke; salesmen E. W. Gavin, R. J. Bassett, D. McFadeen and head booker Orval Peterson.

Minneapolis: Manager L. J. Miller; salesmen Arch Zacherl, Sylvan Leff, Malcolm Haloran, Fred E. Abelson, Harold Johnson and head booker Claude Dickinson.

Des Moines: Manager Lou Levy; salesmen Joe Smith, R. G. Olson and head booker J. Rogatnick.

Kansas City: Manager Grover Parsons; salesmen Ralph A. Morrow, Roscoe Thompson, Leslie Durland, Isadore Beiser and head booker Edward Solig.

Omaha: Manager Otto A. Siegel; salesmen Lawrence Hensler, Isadore Weiner, R. J. Cadman and head booker W. E. Barker.

St. Louis: Manager Harry Hynes; salesmen J. H. Sarfaty, S. H. Nesbitt and head booker Harry Hynes, Jr.

Denver: Manager Jack Langan; salesmen A. W. O'Connell, Emmett Warner and Jack Allender and head booker T. A. McMahon.

Los Angeles: Manager C. J. Feldman; Office Manager Edward Cooke; salesmen Sam Milner, Lon E. Hoss, Foster M. Blake and head booker Harold Whitman.

Portland: Manager R. O. Wilson; salesmen C. J. Farnes, J. S. Hommel and head booker J. W. Harvey.

Salt Lake City: Manager C. R. Wade; salesmen J. R. French, H. W. Landstrom and head booker E. H. Smyth.

San Francisco: Manager Barney Rose; salesmen King Trimble, Bradley Fish, Al Bowman and head booker Charles McBride.

Seattle: Manager L. J. McGinley; salesmen C. L. Theuerkauf, M. G. Whitman and booker A. M. Kallen.

OLD FILM "STUDIO" DWELLING IS SOLD

After an ownership of 35 years, the dwelling at 2 Gigante Terrace, Cliffside Park, N. J., has been sold by Bertha Mehl to Elizabeth Walko. On the brink of the Palisades the dwelling in the early days of the motion picture was the scene of many a film. Bertha Mehl, who is an old time resident of the locality, worked as an extra in some of the films.

United Artists' Western Sales Meeting in Chicago

After attending the eastern meeting in New York on May 13-15 home office executives and producers of United Artists went to Chicago to attend the western sales sessions at the Congress Hotel from Friday, May 17th to Sunday, May 19th. Representatives of 12 exchanges were present.

Hal Roach and Sol Lesser outlined their coming season production plans to the western branch managers, salesmen and bookers. L. J. Schlaifer, vice-president and Western sales manager, presided at the sessions at which plans for merchandising the company's 1940-41 program of 22 productions from 13 producers, and to be made at a cost of over $30,000,000.

An advertising budget of approximately $3,000,000 was announced by Lynn Farnol, advertising and publicity director. Mr. Farnol said:

"Our newly organized field exploitation staff, comprising 15 permanent men in as many key cities, will play a vital part in the planning and the execution of these advertising plans. They will represent the sales department and the exchanges in contact with the exhibitor."

Explaining the distribution of the advertising budget, he said:

"No longer will we lay down a large sum on the line for a national campaign three months before we see the picture, and then hope that the picture is what we think it is, and that the insertion dates of the advertisements and the playdates of the picture will dovetail."

He pointed out that the budget included "the various expenditures such as trade paper advertising, on which United Artists spends twice as much per picture as any other distributor in the business.

"To as great an extent as possible," Mr. Farnol continued, "United Artists will follow a policy of advertising test engagements on important pictures to experiment with a picture and the capacity of different advertising themes to attract people to that picture. This naturally is one of the duties of our new field exploitation staff.

"We hope to attract the ultimate and potential audience of a picture," Mr. Farnol concluded. "How much money this costs is infinitely less important than the fact that it makes our advertising dollar go farther and in that it is spent more effectively, we will get more for our money than ever before."

Those present from the home office included: Murray Silverstone, chief of world-wide operations; Harry L. Gold, vice-president and Eastern general sales manager; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president in charge of corporate affairs; Paul N. Lazarus, contract manager; J. D. Goldhar, Western district manager; Ben Fish, Far-Western district manager; Lynn Farnol, director of advertising and publicity; Monroe W. Greenthal, director of exploitation; Albert Margolies, publicity manager; Arthur Silverstone, assistant to Gold; Seymour Poe, assistant to Schlaifer; Charles M. Steele and N. A. Thompson, sales controller.

Among the producers' representatives who attended the convention were James A. Mulvey, vice-president and Eastern representative for

RKO Adds New Producer On Eve of Sales Meet

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO Radio Pictures, announced that a contract has been signed with Vogue Pictures, Ltd. for the production of four films for RKO release. Also mentioned was the first production of the Frank Ross-Norman Krasna, Inc., as the company prepared to open its sales convention opening, Monday, in New York.

The first production of Vogue for RKO release will be "Li'l Abner," based on the comic strip which appears in 435 newspapers with a combined circulation of 22,000,000.

In Hollywood Mr. Schaefer concluded the deal under which "The Devil and Mrs. Jones," based on an original story by Norman Krasna and starring Jean Arthur will be released by RKO. The film, to be produced by Frank Ross, is scheduled for September production as one of the features on RKO new season's schedule.

Lewis Milestone, now directing Ronald Colman and Ginger Rogers in "You Can't Be Too Careful" has been signed to direct two more major features for RKO in the coming season.

Clem Beauchamp has been appointed associate producer under Lou Brock's supervision in the RKO short subjects department.

Leo McCarey, the producer and director of "Love Affair" and "My Favorite Wife" has terminated his connection with RKO.

Herbert Wilcox will make at least two pictures starring Anna Neagle in Hollywood for RKO during the coming season. Mr. Wilcox and Anna Neagle were in New York this week to attend the Radio City Music Hall's opening of "Irene" and the RKO sales convention.

J. J. Nolan, vice-president in charge of studio operations for RKO, is scheduled to arrive in New York Friday, May 27th, to attend the convention. Perry Leiber, head of the studio publicity department, also is coming from the Coast to be present at the sales meeting.

Ned E. Depinet Monday announced promotions in the staff of the Canadian District, headed by Leo Devaney. The moves came as a result of the resignation of J. F. Meyers as managers of the Toronto offices.

The following were promoted: Mark Plottel, from manager at Montreal to manager of the Toronto branch; Hatton F. Taylor, from manager at Calgary to Mr. Plottel's old position; Joseph McPherson, a salesman, succeeds Mr. Taylor, and Paul Cardell, booker, becomes a salesman, taking over Mr. McPherson's territory. Robert Radis has been engaged as booker at Winnipeg to fill the vacancy created by the promotion of Hugh Conway from the position of booker in Winnipeg to salesman in Toronto.

Republic To Hold Four Regional Meetings

James R. Grainger, president, has announced that Republic will hold four regional sales meetings, one in San Francisco, Memphis, Chicago and New York. The exact dates will be determined by Mr. Grainger within a few days. Herbert J. Yates, head of Consolidated Film Industries, also went to the Coast.

The regional meetings are expected to be held between May 27th and June 10th.

Robert Webb has been appointed casting director at the Republic studio.

Fairbanks, Jr.-Ben Hecht Form Producing Group

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Ben Hecht have formed a producing team which will co-produce, write, direct and star in "Until I Die," an original story by Mr. Hecht. The picture will be made on the Columbia lot for release by that company. "Until I Die" is described as a comedy romance. It was reported that a top feminine star to play opposite Fairbanks will be selected within a few days.

Warners to Release "Heaven" as One

S. Charles Einfeld, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, has announced that "All This and Heaven Too" will be released as one film and not in two parts as had been discussed. Rachel Fields, author of the book on which the picture is based, has been recalled to aid in the final cutting of the film. The film will run about two and a half hours in the one edition. If the film was released in two parts to be shown in succeeding weeks, each section would run about two hours.

Warner Brothers will continue to spend more money than ever before on production, despite the reduction in the foreign market, Mr. Einfeld said. The company will produce pictures of national interest which will find a market in this country.

Double features are definitely responsible for "some of the stagnation of the motion picture industry" and, according to Mr. Einfeld, the motion picture-going public is now more interested in news reels and shorts than in double features.

The world premiere of "The Life of Knute Rockne," according to tentative plans, will be held in South Bend where Notre Dame University is located, sometime between September 15th and October 15th.

Altec Deal Set

Altec has been contracted to handle sound service and projection room parts repair and replacements for theatres in the circuit owned by Lewen Pizor and Herman Coane, as well as for Mr. Pizor's individual theatres. E. O. Wilschke negotiated for Altec.

Drawing Exchanges' Plans

Pereira & Pereira, Chicago architects, are completing the plans for three new RKO exchanges—in Chicago, Boston and Buffalo. They also drew the plans for the company's new Milwaukee exchange.

Canadian Pioneers Appoint Officers

The officers of the Canadian Picture Pioneers club, to serve until a general meeting is held in Toronto next August, have been named as follows: president, Clair Hague, Canadian Universal; vice-president, Oscar Hanson, Empire Films; secretary-treasurer, Ray Lewis; directors, L. M. Devaney, RKO Distributing Corporation of Canada; J. P. O'Loghlin, Twentieth Century-Fox; Sam Sternberg, B&F Theatres; Louis Rosenfeld and Herbert Allen, Columbia; E. H. Wells, Canadian Film Boards of Trade; H. M. Masters, United Artists; Charles Stephenson, Ben Conk, Fred Pursel, A. J. Laurie, Sidney Taube and J. Smith.

Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, has been named honorary president. The qualification for membership in the club is 25 years' active service.

Charles Powers Transferred

Charles Powers, Paramount salesman in Cincinnati, has been transferred to the Cleveland branch, where he succeeds Max Greenwald, who enters the exhibition field, having taken over the Capitol, Lincoln, Rialto and Rivoli, at Elyria, Ohio, formerly operated by John Perkas. Robert Clark of the Pittsburgh exchange, son of M. R. "Duke" Clark, Paramount manager in Cleveland, succeeds Mr. Powers in Cincinnati.

Goodman Succeeds Harrison

Carl Goodman, son of Julien Goodman, head of the Goodman-Harrison circuit, Chicago, has been named to succeed Tippy Harrison, resigned. A testimonial dinner was given Mr. Harrison Thursday, May 9, at the Congress hotel. Jack Miller was toastmaster and Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, the principal speaker.

Set Warner Outing for June 19th

The annual outing of the Warner Club, New York, will be held June 19th. It is described as a "mystery cruise." In charge of arrangements are Ralph Budd, chairman; Nat Fellman, president of the Club; S. Schneider, Harry Mayer, Robert Salomons, Stuart Aarons, I. H. Birnbaum and Ann Martin.

Kilgore to Memphis

Robert Kilgore, who started with Loew's as an usher in Memphis, will return to that city after an absence of 10 years as manager of the Palace. Loew's will take over operation of the theatre late this month. Mr. Kilgore is now managing the Bedford in Brooklyn.

Beier Opens Exchange

Murray F. Beier has opened his own independent exchange in Philadelphia, to be known as Ace Film Exchange. He was formerly manager of the Preferred exchange in Philadelphia, which has merged with Fine Arts Pictures.

New Monogram Exchange Office

Monogram Film Exchange has opened its new office in Albany, N. Y., under branch manager Nate Sodikam, formerly working in Buffalo. Mitch Pantzer will continue in the capacity of office manager and booker.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Meet Mr. Ostrow

Discovered: in Hollywood, a rare specimen of homo sapiens who produces pictures, some of which have been top box office successes, but who will not allow his name to be used in the credits, nor permit publicity about himself.

That, ladies and gentlemen, is Mr. Lou Ostrow, who has given to you the "Hardy Family" series which elevated Mickey Rooney to Number One money making star of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME'S poll of exhibitors.

Mr. Ostrow, who left MGM several months ago, is now embarked on a new enterprise—Vogue Pictures, Ltd., which will make four pictures for RKO release.

Attempting to interview Mr. Ostrow leads to more revelations than one. Your correspondent entered the Pathe lot bungalow, labelled Vogue Pictures, and asked a young man sitting at a typewriter in an anteroom: "Is Mr. Ostrow in?"

He waved at an open door. Your correspondent went through.

" . . . Will you send that script over to me right away? Sure, address it to me. I read all stories myself—I haven't got any high priced reading department . . . ," a man behind the desk was saying into the telephone, as he waved the reporter to a chair.

After the telephone conversation, self introduction established that this was Mr. Ostrow.

Mr. Ostrow's reticence concerning himself is no myth. For years, he has defied studio publicity departments in their request for his biography. Of the many pictures he has made, he received screen credit as producer only once, and that on a film which passed out of his control to a distributor.

"Why should I tell you anything about myself?" he demanded. "Would that bring people to the box office to see my pictures?"

About his productions for RKO? They will be on varied topics, with high budgets. The first will be based on "Li'l Abner," comic strip by Al Capp distributed by United Features Syndicate to 435 newspapers with 22,000,000 readers. It might have a sequel if it goes over, he said.

Mr. Ostrow is not ready to announce anything else about the others.

About himself? Under persisting questioning, Mr. Ostrow said he started in the film business 29 years ago. Told that there were rumors that he started as a film cutter, he snorted.

"I was that, too. But I started sweeping and mopping floors. I was an assistant director, and about everything else," he declared.

What companies had he been with? He rattled off a string of names—Universal, Tiffany, Mascot, Majestic, Monogram, Republic. "I'm the only producer that's been with M-G-M three separate times," he said.

Why didn't he received production credit on the "Hardy Family" series?

Mr. Ostrow reached into his desk, and pulled out a copy of an inter-office communication on MGM's stationery, the subject of which was: "RE: Producer credits on the 'Hardy Family' pictures."

The memo read in part: " . . . The 'Hardy Family' pictures are produced by Lou Ostrow, attached to the J. J. Cohn unit. . . . Mr. Ostrow has the rating of a producer. . . . Mr. Ostrow will not permit his name to be used on the main title or on other credits as the producer because he believes that would be of absolutely no value at the boxoffice . . . "

Then Mr. Ostrow put the memo back in his desk. "So what's the use? I've produced more pictures than anybody else in the industry, and if I wanted my name mentioned, I could have had it done before."

He turned to attend to other business at hand. "We'll be in production as soon as we get our script all set. Until then, we're not saying much about it. I don't want fancy frills around here, and we'll have a publicity man for the picture when we get set.

"Until then, we're not going to run up any costs. I believe in putting every cent I can into what goes on the screen, not wasting it on what goes on behind the screen."

Rising, he shook hands. "Any time you're around this way, drop in and see the animals."

Edison the Man

(MGM)

Biography

M-G-M herewith presents a further account of the life of Thomas Alva Edison, with Spencer Tracy as "Edison the Man." It depicts the famed inventor between the ages of 22 and 35, except for brief moments at the beginning and the end of the picture which show him at 82 being honored on the 50th anniversary of the invention of the incandescent lamp. The story opens with the inventor being interviewed by two high school journalists at his home, while an audience of famous people are waiting at banquet table to pay him homage. While the toastmaster makes his introductory speech, a flashback reveals Edison as he arrives in New York at 22, determined to become famous.

Following the life story of the inventor himself, except for a few details of dating changed to speed the tempo, the picture takes the youth through his first big invention, the Universal Printer type of stock ticker, for which he received $40,000 from Western Union; through other devices which he created to save his Menlo Park laboratory from attachment. It tells of the invention of the phonograph and leads, dramatically, to the climax—the making of the first incandescent lamp and the lighting by electricity of New York City in 1882. The picture fades out with Edison, back again at the 1929 banquet, addressing the throng and wondering "whether human ingenuity is keeping balance with humanity."

Tracy, two time Academy award winner, dominates the picture in a performance which compares favorably with those which won him the accolades. At many places during the unreeling of the film the preview audience broke into spontaneous applause.

Supporting him were Rita Johnson, as "Mrs. Edison"; Lynn Overman, as a "tramp brass pounder" who supplies comedy relief; Charles Coburn as Edison's benefactor: Gene Lockhart, as a gas company magnate, Felix Bressart as one of Edison's assistants, and a host of capable actors.

Care to preserve authenticity, yet imbue the picture with moving, compelling narrative flow, was exercised.

Previewed at the Grauman's Chinese theatre, Hollywood. The press, studio and paying audience approved the picture, were thrilled at its nuances as etched by Tracy and the other actors.—V. K.

Women in War

(Republic)

World War II Melodrama

Offering Elsie Janis, World War I personality, as spearhead of an exploitation assault in behalf of this melodrama of World War II, Republic herewith supplies showmen with a market commodity cut and shaped to the news interests of the day. The picture opens in late '39 in London and runs over into now, including in its content such incidents as the Channel bombing of a boatload of Britsh nurses, an air attack upon a French town near the frontier and the razing of a village by barrage fire. In these episodes the film achieves the immediacy of a newsreel.

Wendy Barrie and Patrick Knowles play out a romantic theme developed by F. Hugh Herbert and Doris Anderson, screen playwrights, with martial influence dominant. Direction by John H. Auer is for melodramatic realism throughout. Production is by Sol C. Siegel.

Miss Barrie plays a British girl charged with murder whose lawyer's plea that she has enlisted as a nurse aids in bringing about acquittal. She enters the service unwillingly, resists discipline, becomes hated by her nurse asociates, but comes around to a service viewpoint under the hard direction of a matron who, as she does not learn until the end, is her mother.

Sandy is a Lady

(Universal)

Comedy

Baby Sandy's third picture presents the infant again as smiling through hazardous situations and emerging not only whole but instrumental in furthering the fortunes of her parents and the several other adults concerned in the story. A showman is supplied in this instance more cast names of exploitation rating than in the baby star's previous productions, Billy Gilbert, Mischa Auer, Eugene Pallette, Edgar Kennedy and Fritz Feld appearing as principals in comedy roles. Nan Grey and Tom Brown portray the baby's parents.

Early in the picture Sandy is shown toddling into a street full of traffic and making her way across it unharmed while brakes screech and strong men shudder. Later on the baby is lifted to the 16th floor level of the steel frame of a skyscraper in construction and meanders from girder to girder pursued by would-be rescuers while fire department laddies wait with stretched net below. These and episodes in kind occur during the day the lost baby, whose parents do not know she is gone, roams a large city and participates in the affairs of many persons.

Produced by Burt Kelly, the film was directed by Charles Lamont from a screen play by Charles Grayson.

Previewed at the Hillstreet theatre, Los Angeles, where a predominantly cash-customer audience laughed heartily at the adult comedians, broke into shricks, squeals, screams of expectancy when the baby appeared to be in danger of calamitous accident.—W. R. W.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Associate producer, Burt Kelly. Directed by Charles Lamont. Original screen play by Charles Grayson. Photographed by Milton Krasner. Edited by Philip Cahn. P. Mein Kampf, My Crimes

(Associated British)

Life and Career of German Chancellor

Audiences in wartime Britain are by now accustomed to this brand of film, an impassioned statement of the case against Hitler. Foreign audiences which may not have come to conclusions precisely the same as the British people will not necessarily take a like view of its entertainment merits. This one made at Welwyn, Britain, is different from many predecessors for it strikes a personal note, not only focussing on the life and career of the German Chancellor, but treating in dramatized form of the personal effects of his regime on the German people. Much library material has been used to link the dramatized episodes.

Hitler's career is traced from his birth down to the rape of Norway, the newsreel Nazi linking at times with his studio equivalent. The Reichstag Fire, the Roehm murder, the slaughter of Dollfuss, the pogroms and persecutions, military parades and protective expeditions, are all included. Episodes imaginary but accredited are recreated,—the work of the Gestapo and the destructive force of Nazism in the German family. There is a final passage of marching Tommies and the inevitable strains of "Land of Hope and Glory" but the film has something more than local jingoism.

Riders of Pasco Basin

(Universal)

Western

The action in the latest of the Johnny Mack Brown series is predicated on a dispute between the ranchers in the "Pasco Basin" over an irrigation project, held by Brown to be a promotion enterprise for the financial benefit of a gang of outlaws. Some of the most influential of the ranchers believe in the project and contribute their money. Brown incurs the wrath of both the ranchers and the promoters but with the help of vigilantes rids the "Basin" of the outlaws after first exposing the project.

Fuzzy Knight, who takes care of the comedy, as Bob Baker does the singing for the series, are both very much in evidence here. The girl is Frances Robinson. The heavy element is represented by Arthur Loft. The film was directed by Ray Taylor from an original story and screen play by Ford Beebe.

The action is interspersed throughout the picture and follows the western formula in building up to a swiftly moving climax. There is a lot of shooting, riding and fist fighting and that should meet the favor of the western fans.

Abuna Messias

(Rev. F. X. Borano, S.S.P. - R. Bruce Hutchinson)

Italian Missionary Film

Dialogued in the Italian language and concerned chiefly with the missionary efforts of two Capuchins from that country to evangelize Ethiopia around the turn of the century, this foreign importation should find principal popularity from movie audiences conversant with the original language of the production. The English subtitles, however, broaden its appeal to church circles professing the same religious faith as portrayed by the missionaries.

The production was made under the amateur auspices of the religious order of the Society of Saint Paul and carries a professional finish, especially in the matter of photography and mob scene handling, that would seem to belie the inexperienced manufacture. Although location scenes were shot in Ethiopia, action for the plot occurs many years before that country became a crux of political contention. No "ism" ideology is mentioned and the motif is religious rather than racial.

"Cardinal Pilotto" or "Abuna Messias" begins his missionary work in Ethiopia and through such acts of kindness as the ransoming of the slave "Morka" and the medical care of a village stricken with smallpox plague, the cleric wins the affection and admiration of the natives. However, through political and religious intrigue chiefly from a disgruntled native princess and the head of the schismatic Coptic church, a civil war results and the priest's chief supporter is defeated. Before leaving the scene of his mission activity, "Abuna Messias" officiates at the death of his religious helper, "Brother Leo" and ordains the former slave, "Morka" to the priesthood in order to carry on the apostolic work. This closing sequence is particularly effective in religious and emotional tones.

Gangs of Chicago

(Republic)

Crime Melodrama

Under the directorial guidance of Arthur Lubin this is a venture into the field of criminology. An imposing list of names, including Lloyd Nolan, as the criminal lawyer, Barton MacLane, Lola Lane, Ray Middleton and Astrid Allwyn, offer exploitation possibilities.

Based on an original screen play by Karl Brown the picture is similar in many respects to Republic's other recent production "Wolf of New York" which starred Edmund Lowe also as a criminal lawyer.

"Matty Burns" (Nolan), to avenge the death of his father, a petty thief killed by the police, enters the field of criminal law and through legal loopholes is able to conduct his illegitimate business without interference from the police. His friend "Bill" (Middleton) is approached by the Federal Bureau of Investigation to reveal "Matty's" true business. "Bill" accepts the job only to prove that his friend is innocent. When the racketeers find out "Bill's" real reason for joining the gang "Matty" saves his life and exposes the operations of the gang to the F. B. I.

Donald the Jitterbug

The jitterbug craze has finally caught up with Donald Duck. Here Donald visits Daisy Duck, but his three nephews trail along much to Donald's dismay. He gets rid of them for a while by sending them for ice cream cones, but when Donald feels it the proper moment to kiss Daisy, in come the nephews. Donald starts to dance with Daisy in jitterbug fashion, but even then the nephews cut in on him. The jitterbugging increases in tempo with Donald carrying off the honors. Walt Disney production. Running time, eight minutes.

Tugboat Mickey

(Disney-RKO)

Mickey, Donald and Goofy

Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy are the crew of a tugboat in this fast-moving Walt Disney color cartoon. Mickey, the captain, hears an SOS over the radio and calls Donald and Goofy into action. With Donald and Goofy trying to get steam up in their own particular manner, the situation is hilariously comical. Once under way, the tugboat goes its own way completely out of the control of Mickey and then the boiler blows the boat to bits. Landing in the water, the crew hear a radio announcer saying "this concludes the Happy Hour Kiddy Program." Running time, seven minutes.

Billposters

RELEASED THRU

UA, Paramount Open New Films

Paramount moved into Galesburg, Ill., on Tuesday to present the world premiere of "Those Were the Days" at the Orpheum theatre there and two days later United Artists unveiled Sol Lesser's "Our Town" in Boston.

College Tieup Used

Galesburg is the seat of Knox College, the school that George Fitch immortalized as "Old Siwash," and the scene of the turn-of-the-century story of "Those Were the Days." The premiere and the attending publicity served to create a mild furor in the college circles when Phillip Drew, president of the Knox Alumni Asociation of Los Angeles, proposed the establishment of a "real Siwash college."

Carter Davidson, president of Knox, reprimanded the alumni head, calling such a plan disloyal to the college. "It has been established beyond question that George Fitch, author of the 'At Good Old Siwash' stories, now made into a Film called 'Those Were the Days,' meant Knox College and no place else," he said, adding that the nickname for Knox is Siwash and "if we must have a Siwash college, I would go so far as to recommend changing the name of Knox."

The "Our Town" opening in Boston Thursday was attended by Mr. Lesser, the producer; Thornton Wilder, author of the play and also the scenario; Louis Hyman, Fay Bainter, Harry L. Gold, Charles Stern, Lynn Farnol and Monroe Greenthal among others.

The world premiere of Warner Brothers' "All This and Heaven, Too" will be held at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, June 4th, where it will follow "Gone With the Wind." It will play on a two-a-day basis at $1.10 to $1.65 top price. Seats for the premiere are $5.50.

Company Name Changes

Massce & Company, Inc., foreign film forwarders, New York, has changed its name to Massce-Barnett Company, Inc. The change was made to commemorate the completion of 25 years of service to the company of William Barnett, vice-president.

Kramer Promoted

Stanley Kramer, assistant to David L. Loew and Albert Lewin for the past year, has been appointed their production assistant. His first assignment is the Erich Maria Remarque story "Flotsam." Kramer will handle the story and casting departments and the picture will be released through United Artists.

Plottel in New Post

Leslie Plottel has been appointed branch manager at St. John, N. B., for RKO Radio. He was appointed to the post from Toronto. He has been an RKO Radio salesman for four years.

Frank Kelton, partner in the Melody Lane Music Company, has severed active connection with the company, while retaining his equity, to become general manager of the L. Wolfe Gilbert Music Publishing Company, Hollywood.

Named Booker's Aide

Virginia Beurman has been named booker's assistant to W. G. McKinney of H. J. Griffith Theatres, Inc., Kansas City.

Educational Films May Be Reorganized

Edmund V. Halley, who is seeking to foreclose a lien of 20,000 shares of stock of Educational Film Corp. of America, may attempt to reorganize that company, Mr. Halley's attorney told Referee John E. Joyce Monday at a hearing of Educational Pictures, Inc.

This statement preceded the issuance of a 30-day injunction by Referee Joyce which restrained Mr. Halley from foreclosing on the stock pending the filing of a suit by James A. Davidson, trustee of Educational Pictures, to cancel a lien.

Meanwhile Memories, Inc., has asked Referee Joyce to set aside a contract under which Educational Films Corp. of America had agreed to distribute six short subjects on the grounds that Educational had not lived up to its agreement. Another hearing on the application will be held June 4.

Cooper in Toronto Post

The Fire Prevention Association, Toronto, Canada, has elected Colonel John A. Cooper, vice-president for the next year because of his work in supervising film exchanges in Canada through the Film Boards of Trade, which have a fire marshal for each of the six distributing centers in Canada. A summary of inspections is sent each month to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors in New York.

Orr Elected

William Anderson Orr, assistant to J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been elected president of the Society of the Silurians, an organization composed of veteran New York City newspaper men. Mr. Orr begain his newspaper career in New York City in 1908. In 1914 he was appointed city editor of the New York Tribune. In 1915 Charles S. Whitman, then Governor of New York, selected Mr. Orr as secretary.

Plan Road Shows

Seven plays are to be produced by the Minnesota Stock Company for presentation in at least 14 cities outside of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Henry Adrian, manager of the company, said last week. The plan calls for the presentation of the shows at Duluth, Albert Lea, Austin, Brainerd, Faribault, Hibbing, Mankato, Rochester, St. Cloud, Virginia, Winono, Fergus Falls and Red Wing.

Adler Promoted

Al Adler, head booker for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange in Kansas City, has been appointed a district salesman. Walt Lambader, booker, succeeds Mr. Adler, and Leon Abrams, head shipper, joins the booking staff.

Astor Managers Appointed

Astor Pictures Corporation has named Mike Godshaw manager of its Chicago office and C. B. Koehler manager in Milwaukee. The Chicago branch has been shifted to 1235 South Wabash avenue.

Giles Joins RKO

Robert Giles has been named head shipper at the RKO exchange in Kansas City, succeeding the late Hugh Asmus.

Mohawk Begins Distribution

Mohawk Pictures Corporation, which acquired the Grand National Film assets for liquidation, has announced distribution plans. B. H. Mills is president of the company and Jack Berkson, an associate and partner of Mr. Mills since 1917, is the vice-president in charge of sales. Offices have been established at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York.

Mr. Berkson is to leave shortly on a national tour. The first group of pictures to be offered will comprise 19 features including "Something to Sing About," James Cagney; two Stuart Erwin comedy-dramas; eight action melodramas, three of which are "I Married a Spy," "International Crime" and "High Command," six Tex Ritter and two Ken Maynard westerns.

It was announced by Mr. Berkson that the sales plan and product details would be explained in an advertising campaign in the trade press. The group of features will be sold to independent exchanges.

Einfeld Discusses Product and Conventions

Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, arrived in New York Saturday, May 20, from the company's studio in Burbank, Cal. Mort Blumenstock, in charge of advertising and publicity for the company in the East, met Mr. Einfeld in South Bend, Indiana, to discuss plans on the handling of the company's forthcoming production, "The Life of Knute Rockne," starring Pat O'Brien.

While in New York Mr. Einfeld will confer with home office executives on the launching of six of the company's forthcoming pictures and will also discuss plans for the annual sales conventions to be held in Pittsburgh and Chicago in June.

Shift Branch District

Paramount has moved the Memphis branch from Harold Wilke's district to that of Hugh Braly, increasing Mr. Braly's jurisdiction to include Dallas, Oklahoma City and Memphis. Mr. Wilke's district covers Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans and Jacksonville. C. H. Weaver, Dallas salesman, has been appointed assistant to L. W. McClintock, branch manager. Mr. Weaver has been with Paramount for 16 years and is well known in the territory. Harold Pickett has been assigned to Mr. Weaver's territory as salesman.

Patz Named Manager

Louis Patz has been named manager of the new Advertising Accessories, Inc., and National Screen Accessories, Inc., offiice in Milwaukee. New Chicago offies for the company were opened Monday by Morton Van Praag, district manager.

Des Moines Fire Rating

The seven motion picture exchanges in Des Moines, Iowa, had a safety rating in excess of 99 per cent in the last fiscal year, according to a fire safety rating given by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to Charles Barker, Des Moines Fire marshal.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

EVER know that the 72-year-old, London-born, be-monocled George Arliss is an author? Just published, via Little Brown Co., Boston, "My Ten Years in the Studios," $3.50 the copy. The English actor's memoirs of his ten years of motion picture acting in Hollywood and London, follow his story, "Up the Years from Bloomsbury," of 13 years ago. That one, they say, is still selling.

Mr. Arliss hasn't done any picture work since his "Dr. Syn," of three years ago, for Gaumont-British, in England. He's over there at home now. Under London's blackouts, he still sports all the heavy-gold, across-the-chest, anchor-weight chainware and other heavy-gold ornaments of which he has been so fond so long.

In his new book, Mr. Arliss's pen scratches right from scratch, from the Arliss of 54 years ago, who at a smiling 18, and at the salary of six shillings a week, took to the stage of the Elephant and Castle Theatre on the Surrey side of London. He got to Hollywood 42 years later, in 1928, at 60, and shortly thereafter U. S. screens got "Disraeli," following, all for Warners, with "The Green Goddess," "Old English," "The House of Rothschild," "Voltaire" and "Cardinal Richelieu."

His first scratch on the new-book manuscript, doting on his early experiences at the Elephant and Castle theatre, describes, with full aroma, the gallery patrons who consumed large quantities of hot dried fish between the acts.

Arliss' book says he frequently wondered at the capricious changes of titles of plays and pictures made by his producers. He did "Disraeli" on both stage and screen. When he first appeared, there was talk of changing the name to something more box-officey. Mr. Arliss, jokingly, suggested it be called "Wild Nights With Queen Victoria." Arliss withdrew the suggestion when he found there was some danger of its being accepted.

In his book, Mr. Arliss describes his setting off to Hollywood from London, particularly of the scene in the office of the London solicitor who drew up 25 pages of clauses for the protection of a cherished client against the dangers that might beset an Englishman about to venture forth among the brigands in the wilds of California.

He answers a question we have always wanted answered: Why is the London Gaumont British Studio called Shepherd's Bush?: 'Because there is no bush to be found anywhere in the vicinity or any evidence of a shepherd ever having been there.'

Here's one for the book:

For a heart attack allegedly incurred when he became angered at an advertising film shown in the Alexander Theatre, at Glendale, Cal., and espoused by the National Association of Manufacturers, John E. Miller, a private investigator, has filed a $10,000 damage suit against Fox West Coast Theatres, the Alexander theatre, Audio Studios, Modern Talking Picture Co., Standard Talking Picture Company and the association.

Miller declared he was "lured to the theatre by the promise of entertainment," and had to sit through an advertising short, "Your Town," which he declared "presented an anti-social theme denouncing unionism in favor of big manufacturers." Miller declared in his Los Angles superior court action that he was not a union member nor an employer of labor.

EXHIBITORS, ATTENTION!

Robert Wygant, of the Heights theatre, down in Houston, Texas, believes he has found in his community the world's most honest movie patron. The person, unknown to him, wrote anonymously as follows:

MANAGER,
Heights Theatre,
Houston.

DEAR SIR: I feel I owe this to your Theatre. My children are over 12 years of age, and I understand they have been going to your show and not paying for full tickets. This $5 bill should make up for it. Thanks.

A FRIEND.

Wotta friend.

No respecter of conditions is Bob Huffman, city manager of the J. H. Cooper-Paramount theatres in Lincoln, Nebraska. Mr. Huffman, looking around for a short subject to run with Jack Benny's "Buck Benny Rides Again," finally picked a Metro "Crime Does Not Pay" short entitled "Pound Foolish."

It, appropriately or otherwise, is about the evils which befall those who try to outwit the U. S. customs officers. "Buck" Benny had quite a session with the customs men some time ago. Cost him quite a penny.

Hedy-Blows-Fuse Department

They showed the unexpurgated version of Hedy Lamarr's (hot stuff) "Ecstasy," the other night, to Dartmouth (Hanover, N. H.) college students in the audio-visual department's 1940 film series, and that revealing bit of symbolism created such a cosmic storm that a fuse blew out in the Nugget Theatre and caused a five-minute suspension of all electrical power in Hanover.

The avid students of the course, viewing their ninth and last movie of the series—and calling it work!—blamed the electrical interference upon the glamorous Hedy and the film, from Europe, which caused such an outcry among the country's censors.

The Granite State Electric Company, more down-to-earth, ascribed it to the failure of a transformer in a sub-station nearby, and said Hedy, glamorous though she may be, had nothing whatever to do with it.

Neatest trick of the Dartmouth week were the "reaction" blanks passed out by the ushers after the "Ecstasy" screening, directing the students to "please check your reactions and leave them with the ushers."

SUES ON "STROGROFF"

Los Angeles—The local Superior Court has been asked to determine whether the Irish Free State, Australia and Canada are part of the United Kingdom, by Joseph N. Ermolieff, producer, who made "Michael Strogoff" in Europe and later sold the rights to RKO. The remake contract, he claims, gave RKO the American and "United Kingdom rights."

The answer may be forthcoming any day.

WE asked Bell and Howell's main office in Chicago, the other day, for a list of the "exclusive" 100 persons, of international import, who received a copy of the special, deluxe 16mm prints B & H made of the visit of Britain's King George and Queen Elizabeth to the U. S. A. one year ago. The three reels comprising this 'strictly limited' Bell and Howell release is said to contain all the footage taken by ten 'ace' cameramen at all stages of "the triumphant, history-making journey of England's monarch's, as Bell and Howell described it.

"In keeping with the limited, deluxe nature of this film offering and its royal subjects, the films are mounted on three beautifully gilded reels contained in similarly gilded cans," explained B & H, adding: "These, in turn, are housed in a beautiful library container worthy of a place on the bookshelves (they're not bookshelves, they're film racks)."

Anyway, Bell and Howell refuses to release the list of the 100 of international import who received copies. They say that "the great majority of them have indicated that such a procedure would not be sanctioned by them." Maybe they're waiting to see on whose side the war ends.

Some idea of the extent to which the editors of newspapers and newsreels are subjected to censorship in World War II can be gleaned from the latest United Press disclosure of how careful the censors are getting about revealing secrets. A United Press dispatch received in New York from Paris said:

What with "blitzkriegs" and such separating one part from another, one expects to read about almost anything these days. But nothing like the trade paper headline of the other day: RELEASE OF 'HEAVEN' IN 2 PARTS OPPOSED.

Reading on one found that the fanciful headline writer was referring to Warner Brothers' motion picture, "All This and Heaven, Too," and that the company was giving consideration to its release in two parts, to split up length.

At about the same hour, Warners' New York publicity department telephoned to ask that, hereafter, all headline reference to the picture of 'Heaven' be identified by its full initials: 'ATAHT'. Sorta 'GWTW' 'Gone with the Windish'.

Capra to Head Directors' Guild For Third Term

Frank Capra this week was reelected president of the Screen Directors Guild for a third term. Ernst Lubitsch and George Marshall were elected vice-presidents, Garson Kanin, secretary, and Phil Rosen, reelected treasurer. Elected to the board of directors, which includes the officers, were Frank Borzage, John Cromwell, Victor Fleming, Tay Garnett, Henry Hathaway, William A. Seiter, George Stevens, Frank Strayer, Norman Taurog, King Vidor and William Wyler.

AFL Makes Demands

Demands for a closed shop and minimum wages for Central Casting Corporation workers have been presented to producers by the American Federation of Office Employees, Local 20,798. The union is chartered directly by the American Federation of Labor and marks the first move by the Federation for office workers in the film industry.

IATSE Enjoined on Coast

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees is under a temporary injunction against the picketing of the Admiral theatre, new Hollywood Boulevard house operated by the Southern California Theatres Corporation. The company had sued the IATSE for $2,500 damages charging illegal picketing. The house has a contract for projectionists with the United Radio and Electrical Union of America, Local 1,418, an affiliate of the Congress for Industrial Organization. The temporary injunction is returnable Friday. The Alliance picketed the theatre in protest against the CIO contract.

Air Scranton Dispute

Rival CIO and AFL operators unions in Scranton, Pa., this week aired their dispute before a Labor Relations Board examiner at the Scranton city hall with the Bull's Head theatre, Scranton, and the Thomas theatre, Taylor, Pa., concerned in the controversy.

During the hearing, counsel for Robert A. Lesaius, owner of the Bull's Head, said that the Bull's Head and the Thomas refused to renew contract with the AFL union, Local 329, with the latter complaining that the CIO union, Local 997, is comprised of theatre owners. Harold Lesaius, son of the owner, who operates the projection machine at the theatre, claimed the AFL group, refused to issue him a card, saying it could not accept a theatre owner as a member of the union.

TMAT Suit Filed

A suit for the appointment of a receiver for the Motion Picture Division of the Theatrical Managers and Treasurers Union, Local 18,032, and for an accounting and injunction against Joseph Silverman and Charles P. Carroll, union officials, was filed Monday in New York supreme court by Max G. Felder and Ben Braudie, members of the union.

Union Is Certified

The National Labor Relations Board has announced the certification of the American Federation of Office Employees as the sole collective bargaining agency selected by a majority of the employees of Warner Brothers warehouse in New York. The certification was based on an election held April 26th, resulting in an eight to four vote in favor of the union. Involved are Warner Brothers Pictures, Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation, Producers Settlement Corporation, Circuit Settlement Corporation, Globe Export Corporation and Vitagraph.

Variety Clubs To Allocate $400,000 in Charity Funds

Allocation of $400,000 in charity funds will be made about July 1st, according to John H. Harris, national chief barker of the Variety Clubs of America. Last year the clubs raised $60,000 more than it pledged for charitable purposes. Although not scheduled to be formally admitted into Variety until June 3d, a new tent in Oklahoma City has already begun plans to build a hospital wing for children, to cost $25,000.

Variety is to become an international organization as soon as a group of showmen from Sydney, Australia, are assigned a tent. Plans had been contemplated for expansion into Europe and Canada before war began last September.

Indianapolis Tent No. 10 has launched a benevolent program. Marc J. Wolf, chief barker, announces the establishment of a convalescent serum center, purchase of equipment to help train underprivileged school children and the possibility of an experimental blood bank for Indianapolis. The tent will buy the equipment for the school children and will give the money for the serum facility to the Indiana University medical center (school of medicine and hospitals) in Indianapolis.

A new policy of more activities and more members was launched by the Kansas City Variety Club last week with the first of a new series of Monday luncheons, to which, successively, employees of various film row companies are to be invited. With Jay Means, chief barker, in the chair, the luncheons got under way Monday with over 30 employees from Advertising Accessories, Inc., and National Screen Service as guests.

The Baltimore Variety Club, of which J. Louis Rome, is chief barker, will hold its third annual golf tournament June 21st at the Woodhome Country Club in Baltimore.

Form Prismacolor Company

Prismacolor Company has been formed in Chicago by R. J. Anschick, president and treasurer; R. M. Rosenwald, vice-president, and J. J. Yowell, secretary, to distribute cameras and projectors. Mr. Rosenwald is a nephew of the late Julius Rosenwald. F. P. Case is chief engineer. The company has been experimenting with the production of color films from black and white films for seven years and has solved the problem, according to Stuart D. Clayton, assistant to Mr. Anschick.

Irving Franklin Opening Exchange

Irving Franklin, who formerly handled Amkino pictures in Chicago, will open an exchange in Chicago soon and distribute Russian, French and Jewish pictures under the name Continental Pictures.

Arthur Leaves Paramount

George Arthur, for the last four years a Paramount producer, has resigned, effective about May 31st when his two productions, "A Date with Destiny" and "I Want a Divorce," will be completed.

Assign "Nazi" Roles

Joan Bennett and Richard Greene have been assigned the leading roles in the Twentieth Century-Fox film, "I Married a Nazi," from a Liberty Magazine story, with George Sanders featured. Irving Pichel will direct.

Schwalb Joins Camera Supply

Ben Schwalb, former producer and director of short subjects for Columbia, has joined Motion Picture Camera Supply, becoming vice-president and general manager.

Theatre Building Booms in Mexico; Labor Demanding

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Though Mexico's economic condition tends to become worse and there is much uncertainty about the future of business and money, this being a double-header presidential year, in Mexico as well as in the United States (the Mexican government closely watches Washington in nearly everything it does), and there is a war on, building theatres is becoming more and more one of the leading activities of the country. Investors are more than ever convinced that cinemas are the best place for their money.

There has been a spurt in this construction of late, particularly in Mexico City, largely as a result of the new uncertainty as to whether or not the government will be able to hold the peso at its present six against the dollar rate.

All this has resulted in pushing the building in Mexico City of four theatres, 4,000 to 5,500-seaters. These houses have a combined cost of some $600,000. They are to open from the early Fall to the end of 1940. Investors have approved plans for putting up 10 other theatres in and about the Mexican capital. These theatres are to have a total cost of about $1,000,000.

William Oscar Jenkins, the wealthy American who with some seasoned Mexican exhibitors recently built a circuit of cinemas in the provinces, is prominent in plans for the new theatres. He is to build two of them.

Construction of a 3,000-seat house is to be a feature of Mexico's biggest model home colony, under way here by the Federal Government and the National Public Servants Union at a cost of $3,333,000.

Wage Demands

An example of wage problems that confront exhibitors in Mexico are the following daily wages demanded by employees of the Cine Eslava, leading film house of Vera Cruz, who closed the house by a strike for several days:

Two projectionists, each $5 for week days and $20 each for Sundays; theatre treasurer, $1.66 and $6.66 for Sunday service; two porters, each $2.33, Sundays, $9.33 each; two charwomen, $2 each, $8 each for Sunday, and a new employee, guardian of order to perform functions usually in charge of policemen stationed in theatres, 85 cents weekdays and $3.33 Sundays.

These wages are declared exorbitant by exhibitors who point out that the average daily wage in Mexico is only about 60 cents. The exhibitors have appealed to the state and Federal labor authorities for relief.

Critic Is Barred

Annoyance by Mexican film men at remarks Jose Bohr, Argentine picture-stage-radio producer, actor and writer, made about the Mexican picture industry in a local magazine article, has developed into a boycott against him in Mexico. He is banned from all picture, stage and radio work in the country. He criticized the Mexican picture industry and its personnel.

FOX EARNS $353,376 IN QUARTER, PARAMOUNT DEBT CUT 17 MILLIONS

Paramount Estimates First Quarter Earnings at $1,606,000; RKO Meeting To Consider By-Laws Changes

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and wholly-owned subsidiaries exclusive of the Roxy Theatre, Inc., for the 13 weeks ended March 30th showed a net profit of $353,376 after amortization of production costs, participation in film rentals, interest, depreciation and provision for federal income taxes, equal after allowing for dividend requirements on $1.50 preferred stocks, to less than one cent a share on 1,741,991 shares of common stock. The report was released Friday, May 17th, at the home office in New York.

The figures compare with a net profit of $1,225,250 or 50 cents a share on the common for the 13 weeks ended April 1, 1939. No dividends were received from National Theatres Corporation in the first quarter of either year.

The gross income from sales and rentals of film and accessories in the period was $12,562,362, dividends, $1,185; proportion of profit of controlled company, $17,811, and miscellaneous, $220,203.

Operating expenses of exchange, head office and administration, $2,847,063; amortization of production and other costs, $8,437,911, and participation in film rentals, $1,027,527. The net operating profit before interest, depreciation and federal taxes on income was $489,059.

Paramount Reduces Debt $17,000,000

Paramount since its reorganization in 1935 has reduced its debt more than $17,000,000, the company announced this week. At the same time the directors voted a dividend of 15 cents a share on the common stock, with earnings of $1,606,000 estimated for the first quarter of 1940.

The dividend is in addition to the regular quarterly dividends on the first and second preferred stock. The company dividend is the second to be paid by Paramount since its emergence from reorganization in 1935. The first, also a 15 cent dividend, was paid only a year ago. The dividend will be paid July 1st to holders of record June 10th. The distribution on 2,465,927 shares of common outstanding will agregate about $370,000.

Quarter Earnings Compared

Paramount's estimated earnings for the quarter compare with a net of $1,300,000 for the corresponding quarter last year. After deducting the regular quarterly dividends of $1.50 per share on 144,672 shares of first preferred outstanding, and 15 cents per share on 555,701 shares of second preferred outstanding, amounting to approximately $300,268, there remains $1,305,732, equivalent to 53 cents per share on the common. The preferred dividends also were voted by the board and they are payable July 1st to holders of record June 14th.

The estimated first quarter earnings are after provision for all interest and charges and include $716,000 representing Paramount's share as a stockholder in the undistributed earnings for the quarter of non-consolidated subsidiaries. Such interest during the corresponding quarter of 1939 amounted to $678,000.

Paramount reported cash on hand as of March 30th, last, of approximately $12,000,000, and cash held by non-consolidated subsidiaries, in which the parent company holds a 50 per cent interest, aggregating approximately $8,500,000.

In addition to the $17,000,000 indebtedness reduction, interest charges on indebtedness have been reduced $1,700,000 in the last five years, and approximately $10,000,000 has been expended on improvements and additions.

"Husbanding Resources"

A company statement issued following the meeting read: "For several years Paramount has been husbanding its resources, reducing its fixed charges, cutting its debt, improving its efficiency, reducing overhead and getting into a strong cash position so that it was well prepared financially to meet the presently restricted European market. Today practically only the English market remains as a source of revenue from Europe for the picture industry. The fortunate fact that Paramount has interests in a large number of theatres throughout the United States which are not directly affected by the European unsettlement is a factor of continuing strength in the company."

To Consider RKO By-Laws Changes

RKO stockholders at their annual meeting June 5th at Dover, Del., will be asked to approve an amendment to the company's by-laws which would permit officers and directors to be indemnified by the corporation against all costs, including legal expenses, incurred as a result of a law suit in which the individual was made a defendant because of his position with the company.

A proxy statement said that: "If the corporation is to continue to secure and retain the services of capable and responsible persons to serve as its directors and officers, the management believes that it is fair and proper that the corporation agree to reimburse its directors and officers for expenses reasonably incurred by or imposed upon them in connection with legal proceedings in which they may be made parties by reason of their positions."

The statement also shows that RKO's 28 foreign subsidiaries, not consolidated, had total net assets of $1,759,579, as of January 1st, of which $813,181 was in England. RKO's equity in undistributed surpluses of these foreign subsidiaries was $708,991, and amounts receivable from the subsidiaries aggregated $983,098. Remittances from the foreign subsidiaries received by RKO in the period between the closing of their books in 1939 and January 1, 1940, amounted to $584,245.

RKO STOCKHOLDERS TO MEET AT DOVER

The RKO stockholders' meeting June 5th at Dover, Del., will be the first since the reorganization of the company. George J. Schaefer, president of RKO; Ned E. Depinet, vice-president, and William Mallard, secretary, have been designated a proxy committee. The meeting is not scheduled to elect directors, since members of the present board were designated for two-year terms with the approval of the court in 1939.

Additional Universal Stock Acquired by J. C. Cowdin

Acquisition in March of 3,500 Universal Corporation common voting trust certificates by J. Cheever Cowdin, New York director, giving him a total of 4,500 held direct and 26,500 held through Standard Capital Company; acquisition of 1,700 certificates by Preston Davie, New York director, representing his entire holdings, and acquisition of 2,000 by Daniel M. Sheaffer, Philadelphia director, giving him a total of 20,500, was reported this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

General Theatres Head Granted Stock Option

Earle G. Hines, General Theatres Equipment president, has been granted an option to buy 15,000 shares of the company's stock at prices ranging from $16 to $20. The option is good for five years, it was reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission and announced by the New York Stock Exchange. Company stockholders at the annual meeting April 23d voted to pay directors a $2,400 salary plus fees for attending board meetings.

Technicolor Board Members Reelected

Albert Fritsche, A. W. Hawkes, James H. Hayes and H. K. McCann were reelected Monday to the board of directors of Technicolor, Inc., at the annual stockholders' meeting. The term is for three years.

Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president, presided at the stockholders' session. He reported this to be the greatest year in the history of the company. This year, to date, 15 features were produced or are on schedule to be produced in Technicolor, he said. Mr. Kalmus said that Pioneer Pictures had exercised its option to purchase the remainder of 35,000 shares since the first of the year.

Two Dividends

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., has voted an accumulations payment of 25 cents a share on the $2 preferred stock, payable July 1st to stockholders of record June 15th. On April 1st a similar disbursement was made.

Directors of Eastman Kodak, meeting in Rochester, N. Y., last week, declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent on the preferred stock and $1.50 a share on the common stock. Similar dividends have been paid in each quarter since April, 1938.

Tax Revenue High

Federal admission tax collections held to a high level in April, but the total of $2,000,902 reported for the month, while more than $600,000 ahead of the $1,384,722, of April, 1939, was $390,000 under the record breaking figure of $2,390,932 of March, it was reported in Washington Monday by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

For the first four months of the year, however, collections struck a new high of $7,731,132, some $1,670,000 above the $6,058,979 received in the corresponding period last year, it was said, and for the 10 months of the Government's fiscal year the collections of $18,451,217 were $2,077,663 ahead of last year, when $16,373,554 was reported.

IN COURTS

Satisfy "Lynton" Judgment Against Capitol Theatre

The suit of Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes against the Moredall Realty Corporation, owner of the Capitol theatre, New York, for exhibition of the film, "Letty Lynton," ended Friday, May 17th, when satisfaction of a $4,723 judgment was filed in the United States district court in New York. The plaintiffs wrote the play, "Dishonored Lady," which was infringed by the film "Letty Lynton," according to the decision of the court.

Last week a satisfaction of a judgment of $167,528 against Loew's, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Culver Export Corporation was filed in federal court in New York.

Order Gibson Questioning

Peyton Gibson, secretary of Universal, has been ordered to submit to examination before trial by the appellate division of the New York supreme court in connection with the $60,000 damage suit of Wilhelm Karol. The plaintiff claims to have induced Giuseppe Domenico Musso to pay $400,000 to Universal in 1938 for the franchise to distribute Universal films in Italy.

Set "Idiot's" Trial

Notice of trial for Monday of the $250,000 breach of civil rights suit of Gloria Carruther against Loew's was filed in the New York supreme court Friday, May 17th. The plaintiff, an actress, charges the defendant with maligning her in the part of Madame Zulieka, played by Laura Hope Crews in "Idiot's Delight."

Sues on Privacy Rights

Mrs. Gordon Ayres, known in silent films as Baby Peggy Montgomery, has filed a suit in superior court in Los Angeles for $300,000 damages from RKO Radio and Gene Towne, producer, charging violation of her privacy rights. She claims the defendants persuaded her to pose as financially distressed in a newspaper story on a promise she would be given employment in "Tom Brown's School Days," which did not occur.

Mann Suit Resumes

Trial of the Ned Mann Company patent suit against Walt Disney in Los Angeles was resumed Tuesday. The plaintiff charges infringement of his patents in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "Pinocchio."

Yorke Signs Palmer

Emerson York, producer of "New Hampshire, the Ninth State," a color short subject released by Columbia, has signed Solita Palmer, composer, to write an original score for the film.

RKO Australian Drive

The RKO Australian sales force is conducting a sales drive, which ends next week, to mark the seventh anniversary of Ralph Doyle's assuming the post of Australian managing director.

W. E. Atkinson Dies in Virginia

William Edmonds Atkinson, 60, former president and ancillary receiver of Fox Theatres Corporation, former vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and former vice-president and general manager of the Roxy Theatres Corporation in New York, died May 18th of a heart attack at his home in Charlottesville, Va.

Came to U. S. in 1901

Mr. Atkinson was born in Sandbach, Cheshire, England, the son of William Henry and Eliza Edmonds Atkinson, and studied at the Royal Institute of Technology from 1894 until 1897. In 1899 and 1900, he served with the British forces in the Boer War. In 1901, he came to the United States, becoming a citizen in 1918.

For a year before entering the army, Mr. Atkinson was employed in England as a mechanical engineer. From 1901 to 1906 he was manager of the Welsbach Company of New England. From 1906 to 1910 he was with the Pittsfield (Mass.) Electric Company.

He entered the film industry in 1910 when he became sales manager of the Kinemacolor Company of America. After four years with that company he became vice-president and general manager of the Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Company, where he remained from 1914 to 1925. In 1924 the company's name had been changed to include the name of Louis B. Mayer.

In 1925 Mr. Atkinson was with the Roxy Theatres Corporation. He retired from that position in 1928 and went to Charlottesville to live. In 1932 he came out of retirement to become president of the Fox Theatres Corporation and in June of that year, when the corporation was thrown into receivership, he and John F. Sherman were named equity receivers of the corporation. He was receiver until he retired again several years ago.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Atkinson in Charlottesville Tuesday with burial in Monticello Memorial Park there.

Two New Theatres For Klamath Falls

Following announcement of the buying-arrangement made between the Poole Theatres of Klamath Falls and the United California theatres, Redwood Theatres Corporation announced plans for the erection of two new theatres in Klamath Falls, to be built at a cost of $200,000. The Redwood Theatres company, headed by George M. Mann, is now operating more than a dozen houses in Southern Oregon.

In the Klamath Theatre chain there are now five theatres: the Pelican, Pine Tree, Rainbow, Vox and Rex. Rose M. Poole is president and general manager. Mrs. Poole announced that following the connection with United California Theatres, important pictures will be presented in Klamath Falls as early as "San Francisco, Portland and other large coast cities."

Fairbanks Fund Transferred

Approximately $195,000 in a trust fund established in Pittsburgh in 1926 by the late Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., has been transferred from the Union Trust Company to the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, executor of the estate. The transfer was authorized by the court so the New York bank could distribute the money to Mrs. Sylvia Fairbanks, widow; Douglas, Jr., and others.

OBITUARIES

Albert M. Beatty Succumbs at 56

Albert M. Beatty, who, until his retirement two years ago headed the Camera Department of the International Projector Corporation, died May 17th in his home in Nutley, New Jersey. Born in Kansas City in 1884, he was connected with large mercantile companies for many years. Later, he became connected with the film industry, handling "Birth of a Nation" in South America for D. W. Griffith.

In the World War Mr. Beatty reorganized the theatrical department of the YMCA in France and was eventually placed in charge of all theatrical entertainment for the AEF. He joined International Projector in 1928 and was with the company until he retired in 1938 due to ill health.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Beatty Saturday in Nutley.

Albert Crier Dies in Albany Theatre Fire

Albert Crier, for 35 years doorman and watchman at the Harmanus Bleecker Hall, Albany, N. Y., was killed by a falling wall May 20th as fire destroyed the famous old theatre. Louis R. Golding, Fabian district manager; George Seed, manager, and Oscar Perrin, assistant manager at the Grand theatre, narrowly escaped injury.

The theatre, once owned by F. F. Proctor and later operated by the Shuberts, is owned by Christopher H. Buckley of Bennington, Vt., and was leased in 1935 to the Fabian Circuit for 21 years at a reported annual rental of $50,000. The loss was estimated unofficially at $150,000.

Philip Semmolroth Dead

Philip Semmolroth, 59, head of the Semmelroth circuit at Dayton, Ohio, operating the Wayne, Sigma, Federation, Riverdale, Peoples and Park, Dayton suburbans, and the Ohio, at nearby Franklin, died at his home in Dayton May 17th following a long illness.

Nicholas Allermand

Nicholas Allermand, 55, manager of John Danz's Palomar theatre, Seattle, was instantly killed when run over by a truck while unloading scenery at the theatre warehouse May 20th.

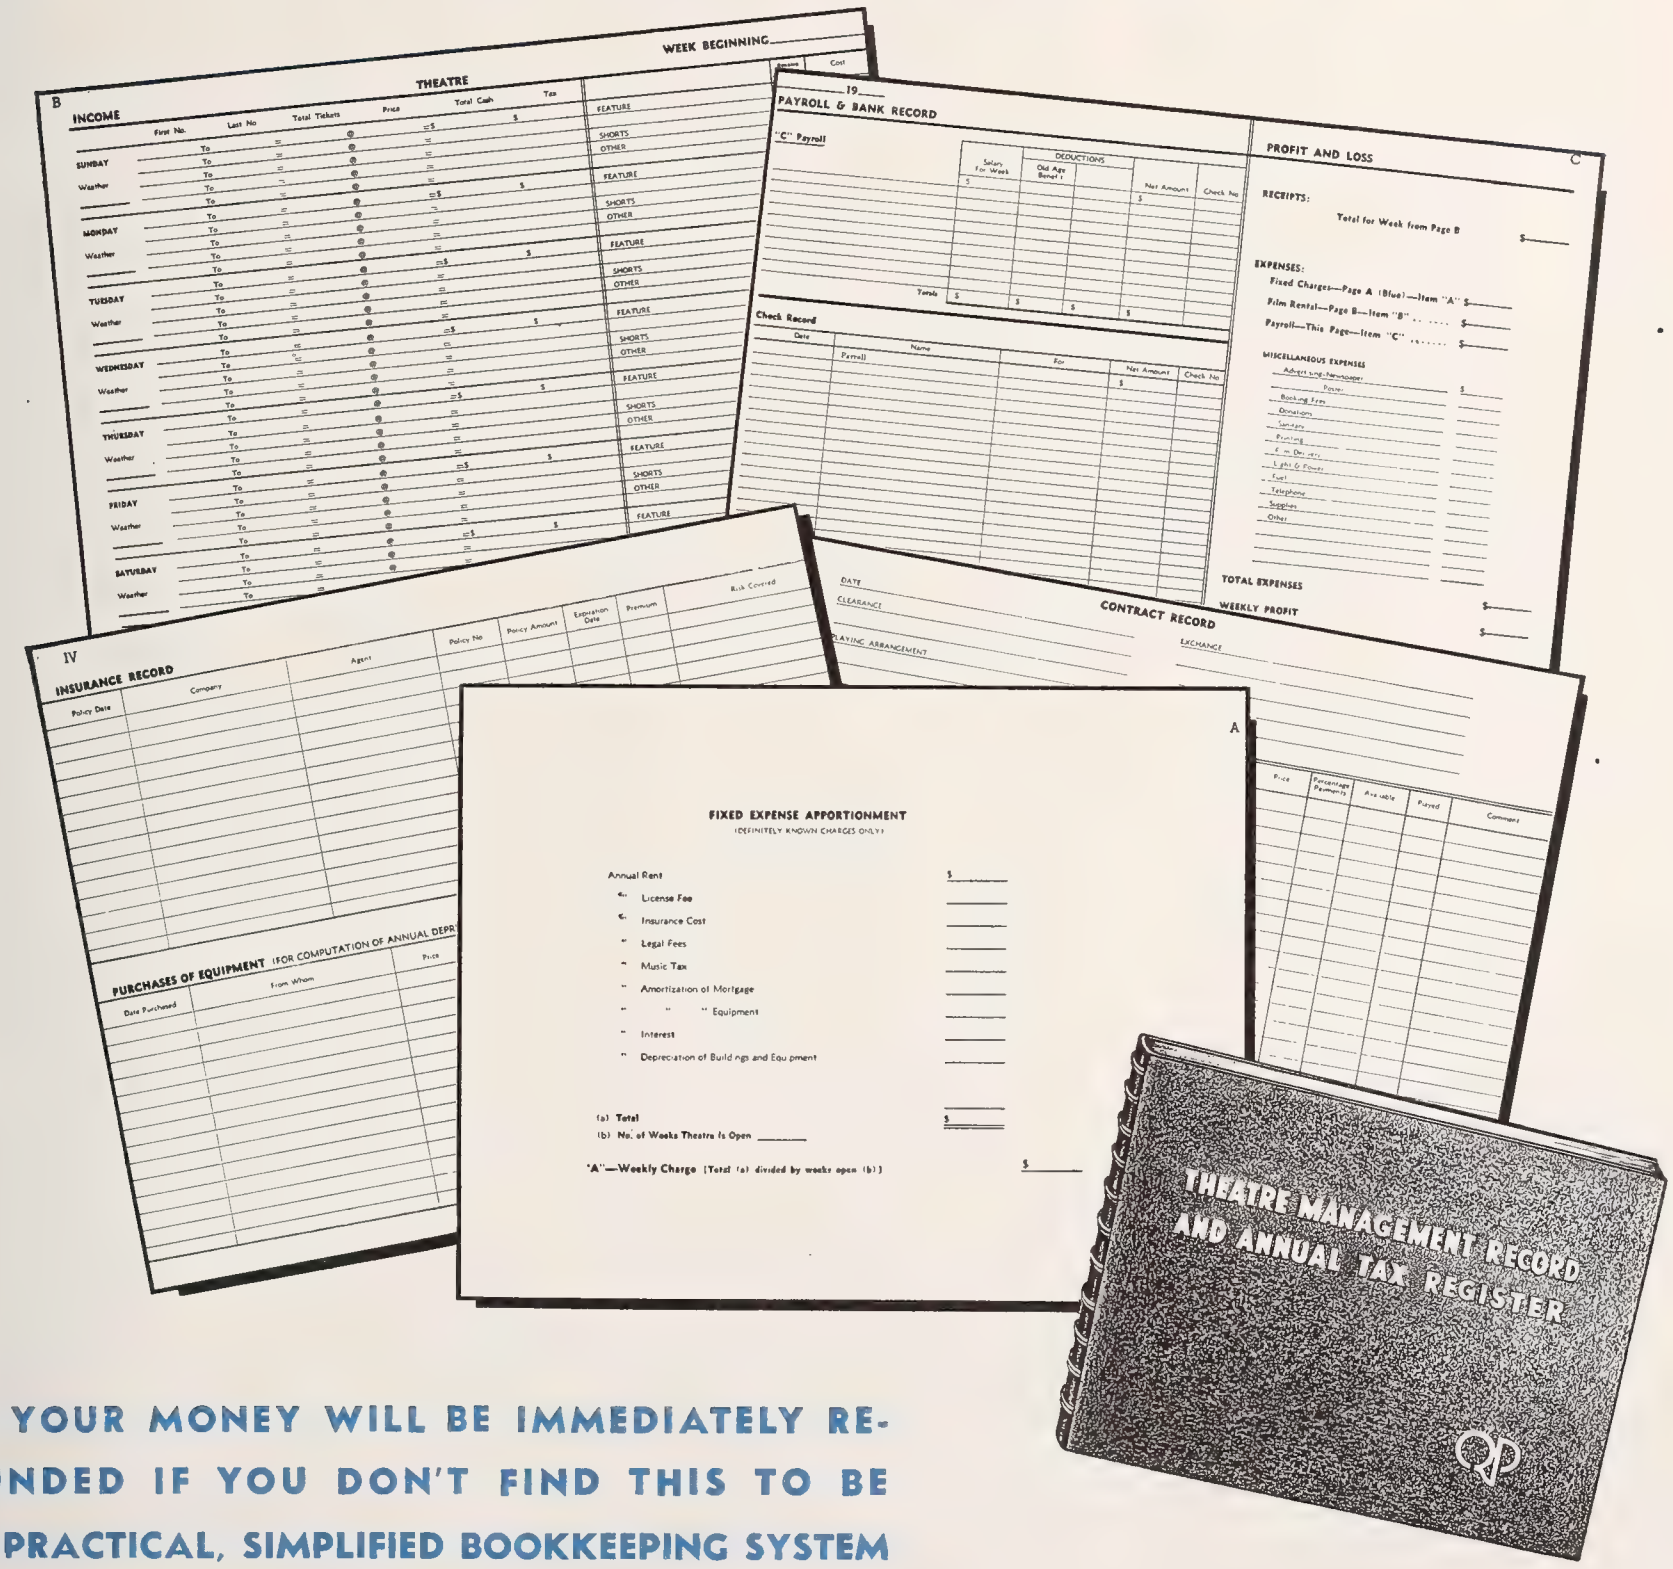
Alfred E. McGinley

Alfred E. McGinley, 60, motion picture critic and drama editor of The Tribune, Winnipeg, died recently at his home in Winnipeg, after a long illness. He was former motion picture censor of the New Brunswick government. Born in St. John, N. B., he had been in newspaper work for 37 years.

Alfred G. Kennedy

Alfred G. Kennedy, 55, an actor known professionally as Bruce Elmore, died of a heart attack May 15th in New York.

William C. Wetherill



William Coolidge Wetherill, business associate at the late Fred Zimmerman, theatre operator in Philadelphia, died May 11th at Germantown Hospital in Philadelphia after a short illness. He was also proprietor of the Wetherill Printing Company there, publishers of music books and theatre programs.

Bowles on California Fair Board

Arch M. Bowles, manager of the Northern California division of Fox West Coast Theatres, has been named a member of the California Commission for the 1940 Golden Gate International Exposition.

CANADA RELEASING ONE WAR FILM EACH MONTH

Series of Six One-Reel Subjects Underway; Ottawa to Have "Tom Brown" Premiere

by COLIN R. HAWORTH
in Montreal

Whipped into shape last year by federal legislation which established the National Film Board, the motion picture production and distribution branches of the Canadian Government were, at the outbreak of war, in prime condition to tackle any big job. As a result of that preparedness, those branches today are undertaking one of the largest film production jobs ever taken on by any government, and are showing results.

The project is a series of 10 minute short subjects depicting Canada's part in World War II, entitled "Canada Carries On!" First of the series has already been released and has had a good reception, but that one is just the start. The Government plans the release of one "Canada Carries On!" film each month, with no limit yet set on the number in the series. Prospects are that the series may run "for the duration" providing Government film-makers can find enough suitable subjects for their pictures.

Six Promised for Release

The schedule up to the present time has six films promised for release, one each month until September. From that point on developments are sketchy. The films shown to date are bright and entertaining subjects dealing with the various activities of Canada in "prosecuting the war." The first of the series, "Atlantic Patrol," released last month, depicted life aboard the Canadian destroyers escorting convoys in the North Atlantic. This month's offering, "Privates' Lives," is in the form of a pictorial letter home from a Canadian soldier in training at Aldershot, England.

For June the Government plans "Women in War" and for July "Wartime Workshops." "Wings Over Canada" in August will deal with the Commonwealth air training scheme, the project of training all Empire pilots in the Dominion, and in September the Government will release "Gold as an Ally," showing the mobilization of vast financial resources in time of war.

Columbia Handles Distribution

Distribution of these pictures within the Dominion is being handled by Columbia Pictures of Canada Limited. The initial one-reel subject is now in the hands of exhibitors. The Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau and the National Film Board are expressing satisfaction, saying that bookings of "Atlantic Patrol" far surpassed expectations. Released at the end of the month it opened in 17 "A" theatres across Canada: Capitol, Halifax; Capitol, Saint John; Capitol, Quebec City; Palace and St. Denis, Montreal; Capitol and Elgin, Ottawa; Imperial, Toronto; Capitol, Kingston; Capitol and Vanity, Windsor; Capitol, London; Metropolitan, Winnipeg; Capitol, Regina; Capitol, Edmonton; Capitol, Calgary; Capitol, Vancouver; and Capitol, Victoria. In Montreal, Ottawa and Windsor it played two theatres simultaneously. Present expectations are that "Atlantic Patrol" will play about 500 theatres in Canada.

Famous Players, Canada, has booked the series solid for its theatres while Nat Taylor's independents, the Allen circuit and others also are booking heavily on the series.

From Australia word has been received that Fox has taken over distribution rights of the series. Negotiations are under way with several large U. S. and British distributors for rights in their respective territories. Distribution in the United States will be settled shortly, it is believed.

The films are turned out by the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau under the direction of Captain Frank C. Badgley, working in cooperation with the new National Film Board, which coordinates production and distribution.

Premiere for Ottawa

Canada's capital, Ottawa, soon will have one of its first world premiers when RKO's "Tom Brown's School Days" opens there for its first showing.

Selection of Ottawa for the premiere is in tribute to Hughie Green, who plays "Tom Brown." Hughie's father, Hugh A. Green, member of the Canadian Wartime Fishery Advisory Board, is stationed in the capital. Normally Montreal is the Greens' home town.

Hughie Green is making his American film debut in "Tom Brown's School Days." Previously he did English film and stage work.

Montreal film circles too are evincing interest in the possibility that another youngster from the Canadian metropolis may break into the Hollywood ranks. A west-coast studio is said to be contemplating a contract for Mary Dawson, Canadian Colonial Airways stewardess. Miss Dawson was selected as the CCA's most beautiful hostess for an airways pageant.

Grierson Returning

John Grierson, who heads the National Film Board which he designed for the Canadian Government, is due back in Ottawa from Australia. Secrecy of ship movements because of the war makes the date uncertain. Mr. Grierson has been in Australia and New Zealand last few months, on invitation of those governments, looking over the film making and distribution setup, as he did for Canada a year and a half ago.

Branching out in an entirely new policy for neighborhood theatres in Montreal, United Amusement Corporation, Ltd., has changed one of its suburban houses to a first-run English-preferred run. The theatre, the Snowdon, formerly ran twice a week shows, taking them 16th run, following all the other United Amusement houses.

The policy of the Snowdon will not be exclusively English pictures, although many will be used. Of the English films all will be first run. Of the American films first booking goes to one of five downtown houses, four owned by Consolidated Theatres, Ltd., and second choice to the Imperial, another central theatre. Once away from the main stem, however, the Snowdon will have priority on U. S. films instead of 16th run.

E. A. Counsins, president of United Amusement, reports a slight increase in revenue from paid theatre attendance for the first quarter of 1940 over the corresponding period in 1939. All directors recently were reelected.

1,291 Cuts Ordered

A total of 1,291 cuts were made in 129 out of the 654 features examined by the Ontario censor board in the year ending March 31st. No features were rejected. Seventeen deletions were made in 576 trailers, and 128 cuts in 10 of 284 newsreels. Only one of 199 short subjects was revised. There were 85 revisions in 565 miscellaneous films.

Out of 2,278 films submitted to the board during the year, 1,915 were produced in the United States; 54 were from the United Kingdom; five were made in Canada and 304 were foreign in origin. Of the latter, 276 were imported from France, five from Italy, 13 were Jewish, and the remaining few were from Poland, China, Czechoslovakia and Russia. Films from the Continent, with the exception of French, have been under a total ban since the outbreak of war.

Films for Soldiers

N. L. Nathanson has accepted the chairmanship of a national committee to provide films for Canadian soldiers' camps and garrisons in the Summer training period. Represented on the committee are the Canadian Legion, YMCA, Salvation Army and Knights of Columbus.

Vancouver and Gasoline

Theatres in British Columbia are feeling the pinch of a gasoline "war" between the Provincial Government and major refiners and distributors. Attendance is down materially as private auto owners are unable to secure supplies of gas.

Vancouver first runs are finding a noticeable falling off in business. The largest downtown house, Famous Players' Orpheum, was off about 15 per cent, Ivan Ackery, manager, reported.

Columbia

BLONDIE ON A BUDGET: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—They get a kick out of the "Blondies" here so I play them all. The dog and "Baby Dumpling" are the draws here. This series continues to improve. I hope it can keep it up. I played it with "The Light That Failed" to average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 4.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Connolly—Joan Blondell never did business for us. We had a tieup on this one so got by all right but would advise double billing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

U-BOAT 29: Conrad Veidt, Sebastian Shaw, Valerie Hobson—My guess is that this one was made three or four years ago and that it has been kept on ice since then. Also that it would have been a good idea to have let it remain in the cooler. It is not entertaining and the story, such as it is, is very difficult to understand. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 20-21.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

First National

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Burgess Meredith—As each season marches on, if you will check what you have from the different producers, you will find that fully forty per cent are either gangster pictures or pictures based on crime. If that is not an overdose, then I don't know what is and the answer I will give you, no business and that went for "Castle on the Hudson." It has gotten to the point that even the panned screwball comedy is a welcome relief.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger—A wonderful picture that drew a blank for us. Just not the type for small towns. Too highbrow. Our people want entertainment and not education. Certainly not worth the allocation under which it was set. Running time, 100 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger—For an Edward G. Robinson picture my patrons expected more action. This picture is OK for the beginning of the week. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 19-20.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

'TIL WE MEET AGAIN: George Brent, Merle Oberon, Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Good old sobby drama, and how they love it. Business good. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 9-10.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—Praise to no end was the reaction to this one. Muni proved to us again his complete mastery of portraying character with distinction and clarity. This picture is not too heavy for small towns. Should please anywhere. Excellent. Running time, 112 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Simond Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger—Metro depending too much on Rooney. Should give him a rest. Not as good as Rooney's past pictures. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 21-23.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger—Mickey Rooney takes good here any time. Full capacity houses. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 27-28.—Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Ark. General patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—A title which people can not spell nor pronounce and which would not mean anything to them if they could, can't do a picture any good. Maybe it was that and maybe something else but this is one that we could not sell to our patrons. It definitely "laid an egg" the second night.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy—Good picture. Fair business. It's hard to tell which dancer is the best but they are both tops. Played May 4-6.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—Time was when a "Broadway Melody" meant something at the box office. Local business conditions are slow but even so not so slow as to merit the low take on this one. It's a good picture but, in all honesty, it's not up to previous releases of this series and it appears patrons sensed that. Better than usual entertainment but for some reason no draw here. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 7-9.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy—Good musical film, plenty of entertainment and can't see why it was rated so poor by many. However, musicals don't draw here and business was very ordinary. Played May 12-13.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—The best of the Maisie pictures. A good comedy with enough of something else to make it interesting. Pleased everyone. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 27-28.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Rooney scores again. Some thought it was the best of the series to date. I believe producing this series is one of the cleverest and most profitable stunts pulled in many a moon by this company. Hats off to Metro. Running time, 96 minutes. Played May 12-14.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—Fair picture that did average business. The majority of our patrons like action pictures. Wallace Beery is fairly popular here. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 1-2.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Very good comedy. Pleased all who saw it and with good weather I might have packed the house for three days. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 14-16.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—A picture that was well received, although some thought it was somewhat conventionalized. Garbo turns in a grand performance as usual. Douglas played his role well, but fans are used to seeing him in serious parts. Running time, 110 minutes. Played May 5-7.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Another Metro winner that accounted for itself at the box office with grosses above normal. Our patrons were most enthusiastic in their praises, even the ladies, and they in spite of the fact that certain sequences are gruesome. The production is so superb in every department that the women forgot those scenes or lines that would ordinarily be unappealing. It's one grand show. Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 31-April 2.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Thatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Just the type of picture the people like. Very beautiful color, well photographed and presented. Just another reason Spencer Tracy was an academy award winner. Give him more such pictures. Running time, 119 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Floyd J. Jacobs, New Theatre, Sardinia, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO (reissue): Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy—A reissue that was greatly enjoyed by my patrons. Many glowing reports on this production at an earlier date. This is exceptionally good and will draw extra business. Running time, 104 minutes. Played May 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO (reissue): Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy—Still a good picture that did good business on a Friday night. Many came who had seen it before. These stars are popular here. Running time, 115 minutes.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—They must have liked it. At any rate this gave us our highest gross in several months. That must make it a good picture. Running time, 85 minutes. Played April 27-28.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Colo. Farming community patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Very nice picture; if you can get them in they will enjoy it. Did just average business, probably due to first warm spring days. Played May 7-9.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—On the whole this pleased our patrons. Business better than usual. Comments varied and the picture proved puzzling to many. Too bad the advertising on this feature stresses the old sex angle, when the picture itself, with the exception of a very few scenes and lines of dialogue, is developed along much different lines. Ian Hunter is outstanding, with Gable and Crawford turning in stellar performances. Running time, 112 minutes. Played April 14-16.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Plenty of action. A swell picture for that time. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 13-14.—Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb. General patronage.

20 MULE TEAM: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Rambeau—Swell picture made to order for the small town. Everyone pleased. Wallace Beery is at his best in this one. Book "20 Mule Team" as soon as you can get it. Played May 7-9.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Picture played on a rainy night. Good patronage on children. Other Judy Garland shows draw better. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 6-7.—Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb. General patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—Did not take well with the audience. Attendance very poor. Running time, 135 minutes.—Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb. General patronage.

Monogram

COVERED WAGON TRAILS: Jack Randall—Played it on a double feature with "Tomboy." Business fair.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

GENTLEMAN FROM ARIZONA: J. Farrell MacDonald, Craig Reynolds, John King—No marquee

names in the cast, so we put this on as a suprise prevue. Fair story, photography in color is beautiful for the most part, but the sound is terrible. Just like the good old days when talkies first hit the screen. Spoiled the entire picture for most of the patrons. Go easy on this one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 26-27.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MUTINY IN THE BIG HOUSE: Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane—Well liked, but seemed to be somewhat sordid for here. Contained a considerable amount of fine quality theme material that was entirely reasonable. Will please. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 12-14.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

SKY BANDITS: James Newill, Louise Stanley—I played this one with "Sidewalks of London" and, although it fares as just another Mountie yarn, it saved the day for my customers. Running time, 55 minutes. Played May 5.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

TOMBOY: Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran—This is a very surprisingly fine picture. Monogram's best since "Gangster's Boy." Played it on a double feature with "Covered Wagon Trails." Business fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Don C. Ware, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. General patronage.

Paramount

ALL WOMEN HAVE SECRETS: Joseph Allen, Jean Cagney, Virginia Dale—Fair programmer. OK on duel with a better one. Played April 30-May 1.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

EMERGENCY SQUAD: William Henry, Louise Campbell, Robert Paige—Didn't jell here as a single. Might be OK on a double. Played May 3-4.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—Good picture which failed at the box office. Don't understand why. Gave it a Friday and Saturday date and advertised it. Played May 3-4.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. General patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Evelyn Venable, Donald Woods—Zane Grey story. Good to good Saturday crowd. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 11.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—Paramount is improving with every picture they make. This is one that will please any audience. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 24-25.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Russell Hayden, Jean Parker—Good enough western coupled with Zane Grey's name made it do above average on these days. Played May 10-11.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED, THE: Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—This classic story is well done but inclined to be too slow near the middle. Liven up the rest of your program in some way. Comments were generally good on it. I played it with "Blondie on a Budget" with average receipts. Running time, 99 minutes. Played May 4.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NIGHT OF NIGHTS: Pat O'Brien, Olympe Bradna, Roland Young—Terrible. This picture didn't have anything. Plenty of walkouts. These actors might be alright in the right picture. However, O'Brien isn't what he used to be. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 20-21.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—One of the best comedy dramas in a long time. We failed to do business with it but through no fault of the picture. Competition was too strong. Those who saw it had plenty of nice things to say about it. Running time, 94 minutes. Played April 26-27.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—By spending a little extra for advertising, I did average Sunday business, satisfied the patrons, which is something nowadays. Fred MacMurray is very popular with my patrons. The exchange heralds helped me on this one. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 21-22.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—Poorest Sunday business of the year. Worse than in blizzard in January. Weather must have been too good as the picture was better than a programmer. Title, however, hurt it here. Played May 5-6.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour—Scenario is no great shakes but has the laughs and plenty of them and it has a couple of brawls that helped it out. When the patrons leave the theatre with a smile on their faces, there is no apology needed. You know that they have enjoyed themselves and relaxed as they should every once in a while.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

ROAD TO SINGAPORE: Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope—Good picture to good business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 2-3.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—This is a well done film on the first steamship to cross the Atlantic. It just misses being great. We'll be glad to see more of Will Fyffe, as he was well liked. Box office was above average. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 18-19.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—I ran this as a Boy Scout Benefit and they far surpassed their goal. This story is so well known that everyone wanted to see the movie version of it. It is modernized a little but hasn't been changed too much. The audience reacted favorably after the show. The combination of Benefit and a good picture really did a good job for me. Running time, 78 minutes. Played May 7.—W Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SIDEWALKS OF LONDON: Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh—Give your patrons a break and don't play this one. Vivien Leigh and Charles Laughton will not help it and if the truth were known the stars would thank you for shelving it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 5.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

UNION PACIFIC: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, Akim Tamiroff, Robert Preston—Real good picture we picked up with no regrets, although old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—A good little picture. Especially appealed to high school crowd. However, adults enjoyed it, too. Running time, 75 minutes.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA KID, THE: Roy Rogers, George Hayes—Played it single bill weekend. Did only fair. Would advise double billing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

COVERED TRAILER, THE: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason—The best of this family series by far. Our patrons got lots of laughs and, coupled with "Barricade," this one more than made up for what was so sadly lacking in the other feature. Running time, 66 minutes. Played April 3-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

COVERED WAGON DAYS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Rinaldo)—The Three Mesquiteers are always welcomed by my patrons, and this one pleased them in the usual manner. Running time, 55 minutes. Played May 3-4.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

DARK COMMAND: Walter Pidgeon, Claire Trevor, John Wayne—Probably the best picture Republic ever made. Good cast, good plot and plenty of action. However, it failed to draw as good as I expected but those who came were well pleased. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HI-YO SILVER: Lew Powell, Silver Chief, Chief Thunder Cloud, Lynn Roberts—The kids went for this in a big way but the adults passed it up. It is a condensation of "The Lone Ranger" serial. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN OLD MISSOURI: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—Good picture; good business. Very good offering for small town. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS: Raymond Massey, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard—A superb production with all due credit to Massey for his portrayal of Lincoln. No draw at box office for unknown reasons. Lowest Sunday and Monday business in many a moon. Historicals don't go here any too well, so that must have been reason. Running time, 109 minutes. Played May 12-13.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

FIXER DUGAN: Lee Tracy, Virginia Weidler—An entertaining film with the story of life under the big top told in an interesting manner. We used this as a co-feature with "Drums Along the Mohawk." It is in the double bill class. Running time, 68 minutes. Played April 28-30.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Basil Rathbone, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Hampden—An excellent piece of work that didn't draw as well as it should have but still there are no kicks on my part. Plenty of money has been spent on this one and Laughton does as good a job of the Hunchback as Lon Chaney did. It is a different characterization but just as good in its own way. It is quite hard on the nerves in places and that is what kept some of my patrons away. Running time, 117 minutes. Played April 26-27.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARINES FLY HIGH: Richard Dix, Lucille Ball, Chester Morris—A good little picture that pleased. Played on a Friday night on a double feature program. Our Friday night patrons like double features. Running time, 68 minutes.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

MARINES FLY HIGH: Richard Dix, Lucille Ball, Chester Morris—The "low" half of a double. Played April 30-May 1.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—A very beautiful piece of art presented only as Walt Disney can bring such stories to the screen. However, regardless of all the work Disney spent on this feature, it was almost a flop. It will never equal half of "Snow White." Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 2-4.—Floyd J. Jacobs, New Theatre, Sardinia, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

PINOCCHIO: Disney Feature Cartoon—I did my best business ever with "Snow White." This one gave me my second best by a very small margin. Keep it up, Disney. I can use all of them. There must be something wrong with people who do not like Disney's work. If it doesn't entertain you, you can sit and marvel at it. It isn't quite as lilting and humorous as "Snow White" but technically it is far superior. It certainly is not lacking in action. I had a grand crowd the first night, exactly the same number the second night and just a few less on the third night. That means something, doesn't it? In other words, it was a big success here. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 1-3.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea—Just what the doctor ordered for ailing box office. Darned good entertainment for adults only and they come out complimenting you on a swell show. Grand performances by all the cast. Business for midweek above average. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 23-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIMROSE PATH: Ginger Rogers, Joel McCrea, Queenie Vassar—I was a little afraid of what might be said about this film. I was also afraid that the students would act up too much at certain parts. I was completely wrong. While it was showing you could have heard a pin drop and no one in town complained about it. The box office was very, very good. It certainly is different and excellently done. However, it must have taken courage to make it. The grandmother a big hit. Running time, 93 minutes. Played May 9.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—This is a good picture with excellent wreck scenes and one of the most realistic thunder storms I have ever run. It drew a very large crowd which seemed pleased. It both surprised and pleased me. I could use classics like this more often. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—Another grand picture not for small town patronage. We had a stage attraction to help the gross but without that it is doubtful if this would have made film rental on a Sunday run. Sound on this was poor, some dialogue being almost impossible to understand. Entire lack of comedy relief is felt by patrons, who these days want to laugh at least occasionally. Running time, 94 minutes. Played April 21-22.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

VIGIL IN THE NIGHT: Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne, Anne Shirley—A fine picture that drew the more serious-minded patrons. Better business the second night. Lombard is good in this type of role. Running time, 96 minutes. Played April 28-29.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter, Charles Winninger—A weak sister if there ever was one. Faye miscast and Baxter acted as though he wondered what it was all about. Winninger came through with a swell performance, with little to work with. This certainly does not warrant 20th Century-Fox trademark. Forget it if you can and do your patrons a favor. Business? Don't be funny. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 3-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—This picture lacked something. Don't like Alice Faye in this type of picture. Did fair business because our patrons like Faye, but she let them down in this one. Running time, 71 minutes.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

BLUE BIRD: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington, Eddie Collins—About all that can be said, "It was beautiful, no story and no rural patronage." They walked out on it. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Floyd J. Jacobs, New Theatre, Sardinia, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY, THE: Cesar Romero, Virginia Field, Marjorie Weaver—This one is for the slaughter house. If it was in a Western price class, it would still be no bargain. The people who didn't see this feature on opening night kept a long way from the theatre on my second night run. Running time, 74 minutes.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—This picture has everything that one can hope to expect from a current film. The story will be gratefully received regardless of where it is shown. It became a picture of much favorable comment here. Running time, 103 minutes. Played April 28-30.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Although this is not Sonja's best, it still has a very amusing and thrilling story, beautiful snow scenery and excellent ice skating. I doubled it with "Brother Rat and a Baby" with good box office results. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 20.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—This is a fair picture, would pass even on a weekend date. I would state, however, that Sonja is my favorite actress and I might be stretching it just a little. Running time, 77 minutes. Played April 22-23.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Pleased all, I think, because of these two journalists always attempting to get at each other. Sonja again revealed her exceptional ability on ice. People seem to be tiring of her skating a bit, not because it is not good, rather because so many of her other pictures have been like this one. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Dorris Bowdon, John Carradine, Charley Grapewin—Good picture but very depressing. Business good. Running time, 110 minutes. Played May 5-6.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Thetre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Tyrone Power, Alice Brady—Played this back for a family night. Any exhibitor who has not shown this should make a place for it. It is one of the greatest films of its kind ever made. Excellent production. Running time, 110 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Andy Devine—Good picture, although it could have done double the business with a little smarter direction. I'm satisfied with the production but why did they have to make Alice Faye look so sloppy (that's the word for it), when a brighter, peppier role would have done so much for the box office. I believe the supporting cast were better than the featured stars. Andy Devine and the negro were both very good; their performances helped the picture a lot. Running time, 101 minutes. Played May 5-6.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Doubled with "Shooting High," this proved a good contrast to that feature. Credits stated that this was from the famous stage play "The Valiant." It's a good thing they told us; we'd never have guessed it. Even so, it's passable film fare that, played alone, would mean nothing at the box office. Running time, 72 minutes. Played April 12-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Gene Autry, Jane Withers, Marjorie Weaver—This proved a box office winning attraction. A typical Autry vehicle with Jane doing her stuff as the patrons expect. Certainly not a big picture but it pleased. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 12-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—If there is such a thing as a perfect picture for a small town it's "Swanee River." I don't believe anyone could play this picture, properly exploited, and not do better than average business. Grand acting, beautiful color, romance, action, wonderful music. You probably gather by this time that I am sold on the picture. Pleased my patrons better than any picture I ever ran. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 7-8.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

VIVA CISCO KID: Cesar Romero, Chris-Pin Martin, Jean Rogers—The second in this series featuring Romero as the "Cisco Kid." These click nicely in this situation, because their treatment lifts them out of the class of the usual cut and dried westerns. If Fox keeps up to the standard of the first two, future releases should build nicely. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 19-20.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—OK. Did average Sunday business on our first warm Sunday. Nothing big, but entertaining. Played April 28-29.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford—Another one of those O'Brien pictures that just don't click. However, this one was a little better than the last one we played because there was a little more plot, not because O'Brien was better. Ruth Terry OK for her part. Running time, 85 minutes.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

HOUSE OF SEVEN GABLES, THE: George Sanders, Margaret Lindsay, Vincent Price—Not a bad picture. If properly sold and get them past the box office they will like it. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 3-4.—Bob Elliano, Palace Theatre, Torrington, Conn. General patronage.

IF I HAD MY WAY: Bing Crosby, Gloria Jean, Charles Winninger, El Brendel, Claire Dodd, Allyn Joslyn—Bing Crosby is already a star and Gloria Jean can be one if she wants to. She plays her part very cleverly and sings like a nightingale. The support is all excellent and each one very, very good. An excellent two hour entertainment, and old timers, Eddie Leonard, Julian Eltinge, Blanche Ring and Trixie Friganza, bring back very pleasant recollections of the has-beens that are not so has-been.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

KING OF CRIME . . . HE RULED BY TERROR! He made crime his career in a gang-land empire without parallel.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS: Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey—A picture without anything to it that drew unusually well Saturday preview. Fell down some Sunday matinee but still did average business. The public still likes a certain amount of the impossible. Running time, 81 minutes.—Mrs. John Lee Woods, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S A DATE: Deanna Durbin, Kay Francis, Walter Pidgeon—People come to hear Deanna sing and she does not sing, not much in this one at least. Story very draggy and all in all by far not Deanna's best. Pleased most of those that came in though. Business off due to concert in school auditorium. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 9-10.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Peggy Moran, Tom Brown—A picture with a popular song title that fell with a dud. Not what it is cracked up to be. Draw was disappointing. Better use it on a double as it certainly was not strong enough to stand alone. Running time, 63 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MY LITTLE CHICKADEE: W. C. Fields, Mae West, Joseph Calleia, Dick Foran—We were a little skeptical on this picture but were wrong as it did alright for itself at the box office. Just the kind of a comedy our people wanted and they certainly had their share of laughs. We feel it will be worth your best playing time if you have the average small town audience. A swell comedy that drew more than its share of laughs. Running time, 83 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Eddie Albert, Jane Bryan, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—This is not as good as "Brother Rat," but it is lots of fun and very fast moving. The audience reaction was good because one cannot help but get interested in the complications of the plot. I doubled it with "Everything Happens at Night" with good receipts. Running time, 87 minutes. Played April 20.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Played this to better than average mid-week business with the second night equal to the first. Was surprised to find such an entertaining picture, considering the subject matter. Quite a little comedy and a nice story. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 1-2.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

KING OF THE LUMBERJACKS: John Payne, Gloria Dickson—Good action picture; very reminiscent of 'Valley of the Giants.' Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—Very fine picture in lower price bracket. No stars to make this a top grosser. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 1-2.—Mike Kieryluk, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Alan Hale, Humphrey Bogart, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams—Do not think this up to "Dodge City" but nevertheless very good. Flynn, Hale, Williams (Big Boy), what a threesome. Boy, when those three start pitching, there is plenty of sock-o to any picture. Bogart as villain outlaw very good also. Flynn popular here. Business good. Running time, 115 minutes. Played May 4-5.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

VIRGINIA CITY: Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott, Alan Hale, Humphrey Bogart—This is a natural. Beautiful scenery in sepia, action from beginning to end, extremely interesting story, fine performances and fine audience comments, all add up to "just what the doctor ordered." The above statements are all true, too true in fact. Everyone must have rushed to see it elsewhere because our receipts were just fair. I was greatly disappointed in that phase of the matter. Running time, 115 minutes. Played May 10-11.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BERTH OF A QUEEN: Very interesting, showing the building of the Queen Elizabeth.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HECKLER, THE: Charley Chase—More like this is our cry. Book this and advertise it. Just the tonic for a gloomy, long faced audience. Running time, 16 minutes.—Floyd J. Jacobs, New Theatre, Sardinia, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HECKLER, THE: Charley Chase—This nearly brought the house down. It certainly has plenty of laughs in it and, if you ever have gone to a sports event, you'll appreciate this riot. Columbia has some very good comedies lately. Try this one. You won't be sorry. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NOTHING BUT PLEASURE: Buster Keaton—The old time comedians still have something the new ones don't seem to have. This comedy is as good as anyone could hope for. The part where Buster was trying to pick up the girl was especially good. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

OH, YOU NAZTY SPY: Three Stooges—A satirical comedy on Hitler that was a knockout. The best Stooge comedy made to date. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OH, YOU NAZTY SPY: Three Stooges—Here is a very clever satire on dictators which would be good in itself. Add to that the Three Stooges and you have plenty of slapstick and action. It went over very well. I still get a point I didn't get before, every once in a while when I start thinking about it. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

OILY TO BED, OILY TO RISE: Three Stooges—A riot. Play it. You'll enjoy it. Columbia knows how to make comedies.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 5—This shows hobbies of the Hollywod stars and is good if your crowd likes this type of gossip material. Running time, 10 minutes. —W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

U. S. TREASURY (Washington Parade, No. 2): Starring Bill, Sr., and Bill, Jr.—Interesting and educational reel on how money is made. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—A poor short for the feature I had, "Thunder Afloat."—Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb. General patronage.

BIG PREMIERE, THE: Our Gang—Kids liked it. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

BOOKWORM, THE: MGM Cartoons—Very clever cartoon and well drawn. These boys, Harmon and Ising, can really draw. Running time, eight minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

CAPTAIN SPANKY'S SHOWBOAT: Our Gang—Good comedies certainly are not what they used to be. This one fair. Kids still like them nevertheless. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

DAY OF REST, THE: Robert Benchley—You will rest better if you pass it. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

SIX EXHIBITORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Contributions from six theatre operators new to the What the Picture Did for Me department appear this week. They are:

FLOYD J. JACOBS, New Theatre, Sardinia, O.

MIKE KIERYLUK, Vimy Theatre, Vegreville, Alberta, Can.

C. W. RITENOUR, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill.

WARREN D. SMITH, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb.

DON C. WARE, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss.

MRS. JOHN LEE WOODS, Crossett Theatre, Crossett, Ark.

Read the reports of these and other exhibitors in these columns.

DAY ON TREASURE ISLAND, A: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Very good. Color and interest. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

DOMINEERING MALE: Pete Smith Specialties—One of Smith's satirical accounts of how the male of the species proposes to his future wife. Of course, she has planned it all in advance. The college students here thought it was very funny. For the rest, maybe it was too true to life to be quite so comical. For people in general it might be considered an expose. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DOMINEERING MALE, THE: Pete Smith Specialties—A very clever short as are most of the Pete Smiths. Lots of laughs from the audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Hats off to MGM for this superb short. Very impressive and should make a lot of careless drivers stop and think. Running time, 20 minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

HOME MOVIES: Robert Benchley—Amusing. Too subtle for small town. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOME MOVIES: Robert Benchley—There are a lot of amateur movie makers in town and I told them about this. They turned out for it quite well. They thought it was very funny. Others enjoyed it, but not quite so much. Tieup with camera stores. It will help. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

JACK POT: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—There cannot be any comment on such outstanding shorts as this series is. Play it only when you need something to build up a program. It is outstanding. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAINTAIN THE RIGHT: Pete Smith Specialties—Another Pete Smith Specialty, depicting the severe entrance requirements to be met by applicants joining the roster of the Canadian Mounties. Very effectively told story emphasizes the slogan "Maintain the Right." Well received by our patrons. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF WASHINGTON STATE: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Swell short, and color always wonderful. Running time, nine minutes. —Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb. General patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: MGM Cartoons—Was especially liked. Running time, nine minutes.—Warren D. Smith, Lee Roy Theatre, Wallace, Neb. General patronage.

PUSS GETS THE BOOT: MGM Cartoons—As good a cartoon as you will play this season. Very funny. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SEATTLE, GATEWAY TO THE NORTHWEST: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Average travel talk.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STUFFIE: Pete Smith Specialties—A thrilling and cute story about two dogs. Kids in the audience were really quite scared by it. It is different from Smith's regular line-up but quite acceptable. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevens, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?: Pete Smith Specialties.—With quiz programs cluttering the air lanes, this short provides more of the same type of thing and does it entertain! Running time, nine minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?: Pete Smith Specialties—This was something different, letting the audience keep its own score. However, I think it could be improved upon. It was liked but not particularly. I am interested in seeing the next one one to come out. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

XXX MEDICO: Passing Parade, No. 12—Entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

XXX MEDICO: Passing Parade, No. 12—Intensely interesting and thrilling is this story of doctoring from ship to ship by radio. It will cause plenty of comment. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Paramount

AQUA-RHYTHM: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Excellent formations in the water done beautifully by a bevy of beauties. This one caused good comment. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ARTIE SHAW'S CLASS IN SWING: Headliners—A complete waste of film and a bad break for a good orchestra like Artie Shaw's. Running time, 10 minutes.—Floyd J. Jacobs, New Theatre, Sardinia, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

BUSY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—This is not a cartoon, therefore it would be good to play with a cartoon feature. It shows the antics of three little bears in the woods and in a kitchen. It is certainly cute and it picked up a good many laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HYDRO MANIACS: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Been filmed so many times our patrons know what is going to happen before it is shown. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

JIMMY DORSEY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Average musical band act. Nothing to rave about. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

NOT SO DUMB: Paragraphics—Interesting and amusing reel about a raven, a penguin, a lion and other intelligent animals. It is worth playing anytime. Running time, 10 minutes. W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

STEALIN' AIN'T HONEST: Popeye the Sailor—Not worth money Paramount gets. Sure have slipped on these cartoons.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

WAY BACK WHEN A NAG WAS ONLY A HORSE: Stone Age Cartoons—Not bad. Got a lot of laughs. Running time, seven minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

COAT TAILS: Jed Prouty—Just another filler. Two, maybe three, laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

DONALD'S DOG LAUNDRY: Walt Disney Cartoons—About average. Have seen better Disneys. Running time, seven minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

DONALD'S DOG LAUNDRY: Walt Disney Cartoons—I thought "The Riveter" was good but this is even better. The whistling bone that annoyed Pluto was very clever. Plenty of laughter from an appreciative audience should make Disney feel good if he could hear it. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DONALD'S PENGUIN: Walt Disney Cartoons—Excellent short as are all of Disney's cartoons. Running time, eight minutes.—Alex Slendak, St. Clair Theatre, St. Clair, Mich. General patronage.

FLY CASTING: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—Superelegant for trout enthusiasts. The rest could watch the pretty scenery. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FLY CASTING: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—Good sport reel of its kind. Worth playing. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Ritenour, Milford Theatre, Milford, Ill. Rural patronage.

HOME BONER: Leon Errol Comedies—Fair comedy in the typical Errol manner. Good for a few laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 3—Met with a fine reception in this situation. Have not seen others of this series so cannot compare this to previous releases. If they are as entertaining as No. 3, they will prove a welcome addition to our programs. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 5—This series is holding up well. People are asking when the next one is to be. That's a healthy sign. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 8—This one has Ruth Gordon as guest expert and it just happens that we are playing both of her pictures shortly, so it should be quite a buildup for her. As you know, she is in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet." This issue isn't quite up to par but Miss Gordon's personality shows up to very good advantage. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 9—I am playing this series as fast as I can book them. They never fail to please. This one is above average and timely due to maps of Europe in it. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, Ill, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 8: Canada at War—Timely and interesting, this issue brings the war close at home. Theatres along the northern edge of the United States should really advertise this one particularly. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 9: America's Youth-1940—Entitled "Youth of Today," this is one of the finest releases of the entire series. Too bad every parent as well as young folks of high school and college age cannot see it. There's a message of real hope for the future economic welfare of the U. S. in this one. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 9: America's Youth-1940—This is the issue on the "Youth of Today" and went over very well with the college here. The students took it quite seriously. As usual, March of Time is always good. If you are near a college, be sure to let them know about it. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RIVETER, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Disney is back in the running and, as far as I am concerned, he still has the edge on all the others. This is one of his very funniest cartoons and he certainly hasn't lost any of his originality during the long intermission since the last one. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SIEGE: Reelisms—Here is an outstanding short that merits exploitation. The subject—the fall of Warsaw—is a pictorial classic and a stinging indictment of modern warfare. Not pleasant to look upon but the camera records the horrible truth. Running time, 11 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SIEGE: Reelisms—The siege of Warsaw shown in uncensored manner is certainly a somber reel. It makes everyone realize what war means. Every theatre should know it as a duty to the community. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TRUTH ACHES: Leon Errol Comedies—The number of RKO shorts I have played lately is the result of a booking drive. Aren't those things a nuisance?

If your folks like Leon Errol, they'll like this. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, Ill, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TUGBOAT MICKEY: Walt Disney Cartoons—Although not quite up to other Disneys in cleverness, this one certainly has fast action. It is certainly a good cartoon, but other Disneys are better. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TWINCUPLETS: Stroud Twins—The Stroud Twins were good on the radio but I run a movie. This one really hurt. The only thing you could say for it was that you could amuse yourself by trying to tell which was which. That opinion was unanimous from the audience, too, so stay away from it. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MONKEYS IS THE CWAZIEST PEOPLE: Lew Lehr—Although these are clips from newsreels, this nearly brought the house down. They laughed so much you couldn't hear the commentator, but with this one it didn't matter. Play it by all means. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING: A more appropriate title would have been "Much Nothing About Ado." It is only a fair color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, Ill, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

VALLEY OF 10,000 SMOKES: Father Hubbard's Alaskan Adventures—This is above average in interest. If you can use travel reels, use this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

United Artists

ROME SYMPHONY: World Windows—Beautiful color and that was all. My employees threatened to quit if I run any more such shorts. Running time, 10 minutes.—Floyd J. Jacobs, New Theatre, Sardinia, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 68—Birds of America and it is excellent. Very interesting short. This series has been good all season. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BLUE BLACKBIRD: Lantz Cartunes—Here is a good black and white cartoon. Use it any place. Just good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

BUSY BAKERS: Merrie Melodies—This color cartoon can be easily skipped. Schlesinger keeps up a good pace but he has to miss once in a while. He always has the surprise element. The surprise in this one was its poor quality. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III. Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

CROSSCOUNTRY DETOURS: Merrie Melodies—Here is a nice full reel of real fun in the Schlesinger manner. It is similar to "Detouring America" if you can remember that one. This should be given your best spot because it will be a long time before you get another one from any producer. Gags fly thick and fast. The most hilarious item is a lizard doing a strip tease as he discards his skin. You'll agree when you see it. Summer is coming and so is the red ink, ho-hum. How would you like it if two-thirds of your population left for three months. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ELMER'S CANDID CAMERA: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLD RUSH DAZE: Merrie Melodies—O. K. Very good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MEN WANTED: Color Parade—Average travel talk of Alaska. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dowey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ONE DAY STAND: Vitaphone Varieties—A short for weekend, showing how the circus operates.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PILGRIM PORKY: Looney Tunes—One of those clever satirical pun creations of Schlesinger. This is in black and white and merited lots of laughs. The pilgrims come over and find a baby Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor, etc. Running time, eight minutes.—Varick Nevins, Ill, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SEEING RED: Red Skelton—Play this. It is a scream, especially the imitations. It is good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SINGING DUDE, THE: Dennis Morgan—Very good two-reel wester in color with singing and riding. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SUNDAE SERENADE: Broadway Brevities—Real good musical to our way of thinking.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

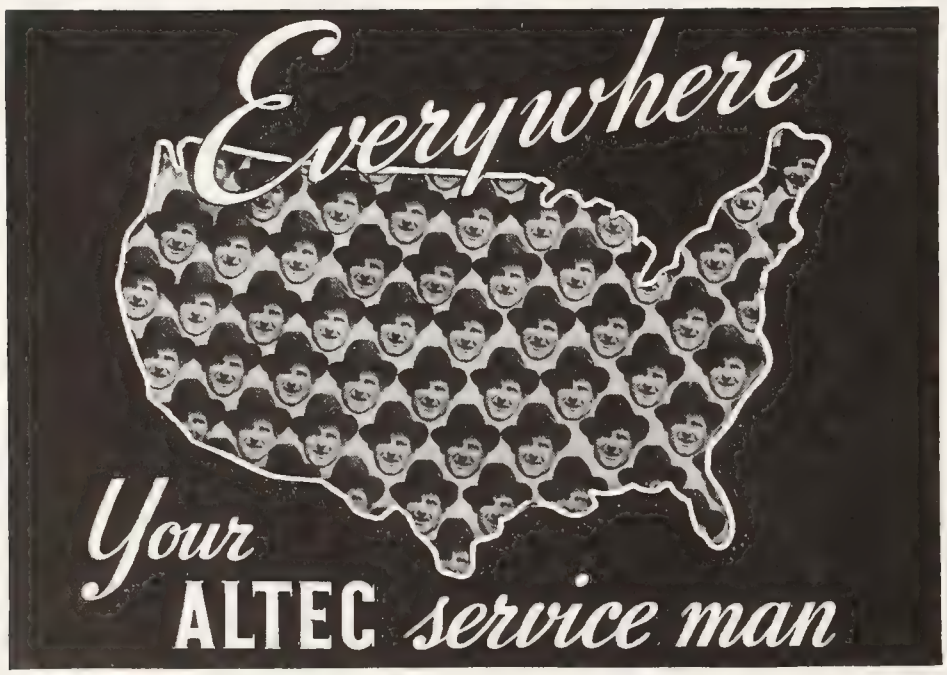
Famous Players Canadian Sets Two Regional Meetings

Arrangements have been made by Famous Players Canadian Corporation for two conventions of its theatre managers this year, in place of the one national conference, which was held last July in Ontario. The first of the regional conventions will be held at Jasper in Western Canada for the three days commencing July 30th, the organizers of which will be the western district managers, L. I. Bearg and E. A. Zorn.

The conference of eastern managers will be held in the Toronto district for three days, starting, tentatively, August 12th. Home office officials, headed by N. L. Nathanson, president, and J. J. Fitzgibbons, vice-president, will address both conferences. Eastern district managers who will supervise arrangements include Jack Arthur and M. Stein of Toronto and R. S. Roddick and L. Graburn for the Maritimes.

Women Raise $52,000 In Jewish Campaign

The Amusement Group of the Women's Division in the United Jewish Appeal has raised a total of $52,000 for the 1940 Campaign. Mrs. Leo Spitz and Mrs. Hal Horne are co-chairmen of the group, which comprises women prominent in the motion picture and theatrical field.



The funds will be used to extend aid to refugee and resettlement progams of the Joint Distribution Committee, United Palestine Appeal and National Refugee Service.

Delegate to AFL Convention

J. O. Morgan, business representative of Local 507 (Macon, Ga.) of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehand Employees, has been elected a delegate of the Georgia Federation of Labor to the American Federation convention June 3rd at New Orleans. This is the first time a member of Local 507 has been so honored. Mr. Morgan has been business representative of the local more than 20 years and president of the Macon Federation of Trades.

Green Honored

A testimonial dinner to William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will be held at the Hotel Commodore in New York on Saturday. The proceeds will be turned over to the Leon Bloom ground project in Palestine.

Awards Furor in Argentine Capital

by NATALIO BRUSKI

in Buenos Aires

The awards recently given for the best Argentine-made pictures for 1939 by the municipality of Buenos Aires have created a controversy in local film circles, not over the films themselves but in the division of the prize money. The first award is 20,000 pesos (approximately $4,600. The current rate of exchange of the peso is 23 cents), which is divided as follows: owner of the film, 7,500 pesos; author, 3,000; director, 3,000; composer, 1,500; sound technician, 1,500; photographer, 1,500, and the two best performers in the film, 1,000 each.

Owner's Share Protested

It is contested by those who oppose this distribution that the legal owner of the film stands to make more money because the value of the film is enhanced by being singled out as the best of the year and that it seems hardly reasonable that he should also get the lion's share of the award.

In support of their contention they point to the additional bookings in all parts of Argentina for the two pictures selected as the best of the year, "Asi es la Vida" (Such Is Life), which was first, and "Prisioneros de la Tierra" (Prisoners of the Soil), while the author, director and other award winners "don't get a cent more than the original award." It has been suggested by Cine Prensa, Buenos Aires film trade journal, that the awards be made as they are in the United States, by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

The members of this year's judging committee said they had acted strictly in accordance with the municipal regulations but they recommended that the regulations be changed in the future.

Lawsuits On Increase

Lawsuits brought about by local musicians, lyric writers, etc., against North American companies are becoming a fad in Argentina and two of them are very much in the limelight.

Last year John Calabry brought a suit against the Fox Film de la Argentina seeking $25,000 pesos. He claimed his composition, "Senorita," a rhumba, had been changed into a fox-trot, "Good Night, My Love," sung by Shirley Temple in "Stowaway."

The case received much publicity because the judge held court one day in one of the main cinemas of Buenos Aires, with the representatives of the plaintiff and defendants taking turns at proving their case with the music, a couple of pianos having been placed on the stage for this purpose. Among the judges was Erich Kleiber, noted conductor of the Buenos Aires Opera House. The company lost the case and was ordered to pay 8,000 pesos to Mr. Calabry. The case has been appealed.

Luis Roldan is now suing Universal Pictures for 30,000 pesos. He charges that Deanna Durbin sang the lyrics he had written for "Amaploa" in "First Love." He claims to have registered the lyrics with the National Library in 1921. Mr. Roldan also seeks an injunction to prevent the showing of "First Love" in Argentina.

The best hits of the month of April in Buenos Aires were Warners' "The Old Maid," which ran for two weeks in the Opera theatre, breaking all records of the house; Warners' "The Fighting 69th," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Ninotchka," which ran three weeks at the fashionable Ideal theatre. "La Charrette Fantome," a French production with Pierre Fresnay and Marie Bell, distributed by Columbia Pictures, remained at the Suipacha for 11 days with considerable success.

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were listed as unobjectionable for general patronage, six were found unobjectionable for adults and three were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follows.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Edison, The Man," "Gaucho Serenade," "La Conga Nights." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Crooked Road," "Down Went McGinty," "Flight Angels," "Girl in Room 313," "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," "21 Days Together." Class B, Objectionable in Part; "Torrid Zone," "Waterloo Bridge," "You Can't Fool Your Wife."

Jewish Appeal Luncheon Held

The Annual luncheon of the Amusement Division of United Jewish Appeal was held Thursday at the Hotel Astor in New York with more than 500 persons in attendance. Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, national chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, was guest of honor and principal speaker.

David Bernstein and Major Albert Warner are co-chairmen of the Amusement Division of the drive. In charge of the luncheon were the following committees: Vice-chairmen: Barney Balaban, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, Joseph M. Schenck, Nicholas M. Schenck, Lee Shubert and Murray Silverstone.

Producers: Abe Schneider, Nathan D. Spingold, Howard Dietz, Oscar Doob, Leopold Friedman, Arthur M. Loew, Charles C. Moskowitz, Eugene Picker, Joseph R. Vogel, Edward A. Golden, Herman Robbins, Arthur Israel, Jr., Leon Goldberg, Malcolm Kingsberg, Phil Reisman, Herman B. Gluckman, Joseph H. Moskowitz, Aubrey Schenck, William Sussman, Samuel Machnovitch, Joseph Seidelman, Max Blackman, Jules Levey, Sam E. Morris, Harold Rodner, Harry Gold, Paul N. Lazarus, Budd Rogers, Max A. Schlesinger, Joseph D. Basson, Isroy M. Norr.

Publications: Sam Shain, Maurice Kann, Sid Silverman, Louis Sobol.

Broadcasting: Donald Flamm, chairman; Attorneys: William Klein, chairman; Costumes and Uniforms: James E. Stroock; Independent Theatre Owners: Harry Brandt, chairman; Laboratories: Alan E. Freedman, chairman; Legitimate Theatre: Marcus Heiman, chairman; Motion Picture Accessories: B. S. Moss, chairman; Motion Picture Exchanges: Harry Buxbaum, chairman; Music Publishers and Composers; Louis Bernstein, chairman; Orchestras: Willard Alexander, chairman; Night Clubs: Ted Friend, Lou Brecher, Billy Rose, Hy Gardner.

Loew's, Inc., has donated $10,000 in the 1940 appeal for the Greater New York Fund.

Ed. Silverman's View

Edwin Silverman, president of the independent Essaness Theatres Corporation in Chicago, believes that only legislation can control double features, he wrote this week from Chicago, in clarifying his position which, in misunderstanding, was said in the May 11th issue to be that only federal control would eliminate multiple feature shows.

Whiteman Out of Cast

National Pictures Corporation, headed by Boris Morros and Paul Whiteman, have dissolved their contract, by mutual consent. Whiteman and his orchestra were to appear in "Second Chorus." Artie Shaw and his band will substitute for the Whiteman band which has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "Strike Up the Band," starring Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland.

Censor Fees Up In Pennsylvania; Others Proposed

Censorship aggravations continue: Pennsylvania this week raised its print fees, and a curtailment of prints is expected to follow, with exhibitors playing day-and-date probably suffering from the shortage. In Maryland, the state censors are proposing a levy increase.

Milwaukee Censor Proposed

In Milwaukee, Mayor Carl F. Zeidler has announced he will request the common council to pass an ordinance providing for the establishment of a city motion picture commission with power to censor undesirable films. The announcement followed the present commission's refusal to label objectionable the film, "Primrose Path." The present nine-member commission is merely an advisory board and has no enforcement power, which rests with the mayor, according to a ruling by an assistant city attorney.

Mayor Zeidler said he believed the public should have more protection from indecent films, but that he did not want to have the power of censorship vested in the mayor's office.

The Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors has notified all the distributors that the issuance of emergency seals, commonly called "X" seals, has been discontinued, effective immediately, and instead of the previous rate of 25 cents per print the full fee of $2 per reel for each print used will be exacted. Payment on the new basis, as prescribed by law, will increase the censorship costs for each major distributor from $10,000 annually to a figure in excess of double that amount.

Until now, distributors paid $2 a reel on original prints with five to 12 prints on each subject, the Board allowing "X" seals at the 25-cent rate, good for 30 days, where additional prints were needed. One "X" seal was available for every four original prints. However, a ruling last week from the Auditor General's office in Harrisburg pointed out that the "X" seal was not legal, though it has been in common practice since censorship first started in Pennsylvania 16 years ago.

It is expected that the distributors will not spend the extra money for prints, nor will prints be borrowed from other exchanges excepting for big accounts, with the result that it will work a hardship on theatres in the Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey area, especially on day-and-date bookings.

Consider Maryland Increase

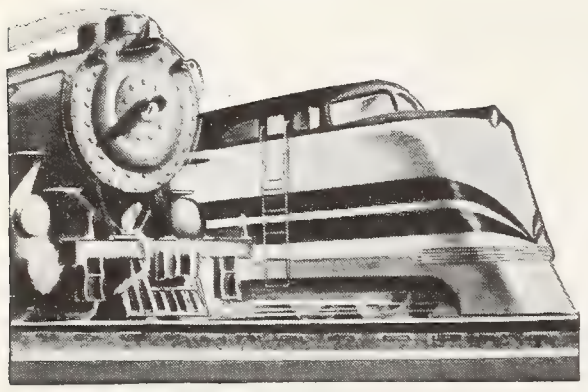
Increases in the fees for the examination of motion picture film in Maryland have been asked by the Board of Motion Picture Censors. The subject has been placed before the Legislative Council, composed of members of the General Assembly, and which is holding sessions to receive requests and suggestions from state agencies with the view of giving them study in advance of the January session of the Assembly.

George W. Mitchell, chairman of the censor board, has asked the Council to recommend that the present fee of $2 per 1,000 feet of film examined be increased to $3 and that the charge for duplicate film be increased from $1 to $2 per 1,000 feet.

Further recommendations made by Mr. Mitchell were that 16mm. film be licensed by the board and that the law be amended to give the board supervision over film shown by means of coin machines.

Julian Named RKO Manager in Japan

Charles Julian has been appointed RKO managing director for Japan with headquarters in Tokio, succeeding Richard D. Spierman, who has been transferred to India to become managing director with headquarters at Calcutta. Mr. Spierman replaces Norman Durant, resigned.



A. McIver, formerly with RCA Photophone in the Orient, has been placed in charge of RKO's Singapore office, which was recently opened.

Form Benearl Company

The Benearl Publishing Company has been organized in Syracuse, N. Y. The president is Earl I. Freshman, for 23 years associate counsel of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in Syracuse. Milt Davidson, song writer whose professional name is Jay Milton, is general manager. The company will be active in the music field. Others associated are Benjamin Kline, vice-president; Richard Aronson, treasurer, and Nathan I. Share, secretary.

Additional Salaries Listed

Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox, received a salary of $255,000 in 1939, according to a report of the company filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and made public at the New York Stock Exchange. Sonja Henie, actress, received $249,166 from the company, while John Ford, director, received $235,000.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

THEY SELL "THEATRE"

The ticket-selling values of coupling the high quality of screen programs with excellence of theatre equipment is indicated in recent combination newspaper layouts turned out by W-Clyde Smith, Malco city manager, in Hot Springs, Ark. Topping the picture copy with sizeable space spotlighting the functioning of the ventilating system, one of the eye-catching headlines reads:

"Your Health. Your Comfort. Your Entertainment. Go Hand-In-Hand With Us.

Institutional advertising attains further importance in the reception accorded a "do-you-know" folder gotten out by George Laby and praised here in these pages some issues back. Laby tells it this way:

"Right on the heels of your editorial, came a slew of requests which I have endeavored to satisfy. Unfortunately, additional requests arrived which I cannot fill. Had I known the folder would have proved so popular, I would have arranged for several hundred extra."

That the public is very interested in what makes it "tick" is illustrated in the numerous lectures on sound projection at churches and clubs of Trail, British Columbia, by Round Tabler Will Harper. Starting modestly before the high school science class, Harper soon found he had a steady job on his hands in responding to the widespread demand of organizations in that sector. In addition to the pleasure he finds in spreading the word, Will also reports a lot of new personal contacts and accompanying newspaper publicity that is making the theatre more favorably known over a wider area.

Striking in three different directions, the instances set down here show somewhat of the wide diversity of boxoffice targets available to the theatreman in calling attention to extra "selling merchandise". They are to be listed among the "reasons-why" that brings the customers to one ticket-window and not to another.

Two opposition theatres in one community, of equal status and offering comparable programs, may show a definite difference in grosses over a period of time. Where that difference exists, it is safe to say that it will be in favor of the house that consistently sells "theatre" as an important part of the entertainment.

How much should age count in determining a showman's effectiveness? Should an able manager in his 50's who has spent a lifetime in exhibition be penalized because of his years?

Decidedly, no.

An outstanding Round Tabler, who resigned a long-time connection only because of his health, upon recovery sought a job in a more equable climate. Despite his fine personality, his known abilities and experience, plus a glowing letter of endorsement by his previous employers, the applicant was turned down. The reason reported: "They are not taking on men over 50."

The cry now heard over the land is for more hard-hitting boxoffice showmanship. The industry has come to the inevitable conclusion that the final answer rests heavily upon the resources of the talented showman. If any such conclusion is to be supported, then the man who has spent his years in learning a sure way through the complexities of theatre management should be more in demand than ever before.

SHORTS SELL IN TEXAS

The policy of Interstate Theatres allows extensive exploitation of shorts. There are other factors bearing upon the success of these subjects in attracting trade, for instance, the unflagging vigilance of Besa Short and her department in smoking out their possibilities at the boxoffice.

They have long learned a distinctive short well exploited is strong enough to carry a campaign on its own. Experience has also taught the Texans that a concrete job of work behind a short with a punch can be expected to bring in business even when the feature attraction lacks draw.

From George Shafer, who does publicity for Pete Egan, at the FPC Palace, Calgary, Alberta, the following:

"For quite a while I have been wanting to write and express my appreciation for the encouragement the Round Table gives a young man in the theatre business."

Round Table In Pictures

J. R. Wheeler (center), manager of the Roxy, in LaPorte, Ind., is presented with his Quigley Silver Plaque for the first quarter of 1940 by Congressman Robert A. Grant (right). Looking on is John Burhorn, 1938 Silver Grand Awards winner and field supervisor for the Indiana-Illinois Theatres.

Effective was the lobby display use to which Manager W. C. Ricord, Jr., put a 24-sheet on "Road to Singapore" for date at Grauman's Egyptian in Hollywood. Picture title, Lamour's sandals, guitar, etc., were flittered. Promoted were the tropical props featured in the foreground.

Natives of Nagpur, India, were greeted one morning recently by the sight of camels, elephants, oxen, etc., parading through the city as part of N. J. Najudu's ballyhoo for "Tarzan Finds a Son" at the Regent Cinema. Heading the assemblage were Indians in costume beating tomtoms to attract.

Sure-fire attractor was the street slant prepared by District Manager Gus Lampe and Manager Harry Unterfort in form of venetian blind easel set up for date on "Johnny Apollo" at Keith's Syracuse. Pedestrians were invited to pull cord which changed picture copy to photo of Tyrone Power.

An adaptation of the morning room at Manderley was recreated by local studios for lobby display on "Rebecca" arranged by Saul Renick at the Michigan, in Detroit. Planted two weeks ahead, display attracted attention of home page editors who devoted much space to the stunt.

Recipe Tiein Runs for 12-year Period

Pride of the average housewife in her ability to cook is being capitalized upon successfully by Manager Harry M. Palmer, Majestic, Seymour, Ind., with a weekly recipe contest tied to the local newspaper and leading grocers. Each week a different type of recipe is selected and entrants invited to send along their favorite formula for that dish. Top prize is a generous market basket filled with standard brand groceries, promoted from the stores. Consolation prizes are five kitchen gadgets and to the next 10, passes to the theatre.

Names are removed from the entries and numbers substituted before submitted to the judges who are local women known for their culinary qualifications. Palmer uses a different grocery each week and reports a long waiting list willing to cooperate. Stores receive mention in the regular newspaper stories on the weekly winners and the following contest. All this publicity is carried in the woman's page and includes theatre copy. Newspaper gives Palmer a generous two-column free ad on each change, devoted mainly to the coming attraction with cooperating store also plugged.

Palmer has been conducting this contest for the past 12 years in the five operations with which he has been associated during that period. He deems it a definite goodwill and business builder where it is given conscientious and intelligent direction.

Ties Cute Baby Contest To "Forty Mothers" Campaign

That contest-minded Ev Callow gave Philadelphia babies a break in his recent tie-in with the Record to discover the town's cutest tots as a buildup for "Forty Little Mothers" at Warners Earle. Ten day tiein brought over 2,000 photos to the paper of children between six months and one year. With photos, parents were asked to give children's height, weight, color of eyes and hair, age, place of birth, names and addresses of babes and parents. Publicity was profuse, running up to almost an entire page layout of the cuter entries.

Five well-known bachelors acted as judges to select, first, the 10 cutest and the final winner, awarded an inscribed cup donated by Eddie Cantor. The judging was held at a high-chair luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton and sufficient prizes were promoted by Callow to award the other nine finalists.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Barcroft's Crosby Night

Musical angle was stressed heavily for "If I Had My Way" by Johnny Barcroft for that date at the RKO Palace, in Columbus, Ohio, with bandleaders supplied with orchestrations of all the hit tunes well in advance, and leaders plugging a "Bing Crosby Night" over their p. a. systems. Stories about the special were run in dailies and cards with stills from the picture telling of the night were planted in lobbies of downtown hotels and supper clubs. Teaser cards were distributed, one side of which read "If I Had My Way" and reverse carrying copy "I'd see Bing Crosby in," etc., etc.
